If his waver of extradiction is formally confirmed at this hearing Mott will start for New York on the next boat.

Sunday Schools Close At Philadelphia

(By United Press)

Philadelphia, August 17—The Sunday Schools were ordered closed until further notice by Director of Health Arusen this afternoon because of the infantile paralysis epidemic which is growing worse here. The order became effective immediately.

Poughkeepsie Has Dreaded Disease

(By United Press)

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., August 17—Two more cases of infantile paralysis were added to the list in this city today. This brings the total number of reported cases up to fifty-seven. Alvin Mosure, a builder, whose home is in Boston, died at Milbrook this morning from infantile paralysis. Mosure was forty-five years of age and was stricken Tuesday night.

HURRICANE DOES GREAT DAMAGE IN JAMAICA

(By United Press)

Washington, August 17—Great property damage was done at Kingston when isolated, flying hurricane struck Jamaica at six Tuesday. Consul Bundy at Kingston cabled the state department today. The telegraph service was interrupted for some time he said and the banana crop was totally destroyed.

LEFT FOR WASHINGTON THIS AFTERNOON

(By United Press)

New York, August 17—A dozen representatives of six railway systems will leave here at four o'clock this afternoon for Washington, in response to President Wilson's telegram asking them to the White House to discuss the controversy with their employers.

FATAL CASE OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS

RIGID QUARANTINE REGULATIONS WILL BE ENFORCED.

The death of Esther Maria Fredinburg, the six year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Fredinberg occurred this morning at five o'clock. Death was due to infantile paralysis. A strictly private funeral will be held from the home this afternoon at five o'clock.

The little one complained of sickness Tuesday and medical attention was sought immediately. Wednesday she was stricken with infantile paralysis and was affected in the right arm. Dr. Hall responded to the case and the residence was quarantined. It is located in the rear of the Falley Seminary building.

Dr. Hall stated to the Times correspondent this morning that the case of Agnes Plumber, aged one year, was slowly on the gain and it is thought that it will not result fatally.. The right arm is in a paralized condition, but is not spreading as do the fatal cases.

It took just one day for the stages of infantile paralysis to advance before the death mark was reached in the case of Esther Fredinburg. Similar cases have occurred in this part of the state.

Inasmuch as a department of the public school is in connection with the Falley Seminary building a thorough renovation will probably be made.

The Congregational Church desires to inform the people of their parish that Sunday School will not be open to children under sixteen years of age. This is in compliance with the health laws of the State, and will also apply to similar congregations.

States' Best Swimmers to Meet the Hawaiian Stars

THE three great swimmers, Herbert Vollmer, Tedford H. Cann of the New York Athletic club and Ludy Langer, the Pacific coast champion, are now ready to leave for the long trip to Honolulu to take part in the big water carnival to be held there in September. Considerable interest attaches to the trip, because it is practically a certainty that they will again measure strokes with the great Duke Kahanamoku in the coming meet. In fact, despite persistent reports that the Hawaiian wonder swimmer intends to turn professional, it is confidently believed in aquatic circles that he will now retain his amateur standing, at least until he has had a chance to again try conclusions with the New Yorkers. The latter both took his measure conclusively in this country some weeks ago, and Duke will hardly miss the opportunity to win back his lost laurels, especially as in home waters the advantage will be entirely on his side. Thus the prospective clashes are looked forward to with keen anticipation. Vollmer twice lowered the 220 yard indoor world's record last winter, and, whether he wins over the Hawaiian or not, there is reason to think he will force the pace to the point of breaking open water standards, at least at the century and furlong. Picture on lower left shows Vollmer; other picture Cann.

ACCIDENTS GALORE

A Series of Mishaps

BUT NO SERIOUS RESULTS AT THE COUNTY FAIR

During the scoring up of the first heat of the 2:20 trot yesterday Pearl Barron threw a shoe and delayed the race for twenty minutes.

When the first heat of the 2:29 pace and trot race was well under way Prince Gayton, driven by Wetmore, stepped on the left wheel of Bert Sheldon's sulky while rounding the track at the south turn and crushed the wheel down, throwing Sheldon out and slightly injuring his back. Mobel Simmons, the horse that Sheldon was driving, proceeded to run away and made two wild circuits of the track before being stopped.. In that accident Sheldon claimed that he had the poll and that Wetmore pulled Prince Gayton directly into his left wheel. Wetmore wasn't quite clear as to how the accident happened but said that he saw an opening that he thought he could get through and that just as he pulled in to take advantage of it Sheldon pulled Mobel Simmons into the left in his way and then Prince Gayton stepped on the sulky wheel. The judges evidently thought the affair sufficiently accidental to require no action on their part so they called the heat with Mobel Simmons in fifth place and Prince Gayton fourth.

While Mobel Simmons was making the second turn around the track Ralph Mateson motorcycle rider in the motor drome struck a rough spot on the incline surface, his motorcycle dove into a hole in the planking and the machine with its rider was shunted from the incline to the perpendicular surface with the result that Mattison was thrown headlong to the bottom of the motordrome.

Miraculously he escaped with a cut on the knee, cuts on his fingers and a few minor bruises.

Almost immediately after the motor drome accident a horse owned by a man named Schoolcraft was frightened and bolted toward the scantling barrier that was wont to be used for hitching horses before the days of horseless carriages, and striking one of the scantlings breast high broke the timber in two and plunged through. A bystander probably saved a number from serious injuries by catching the horse before the animal had recovered sufficiently to make a wild dash and get away.

Driving the scoring for the second heat of the 2:20 trot Dick McPherson with Revorr driving ran into L. D. Sheldon's sulky with the result that Revorr's sulky was overturned and Revorr was thrown to the ground. Luckily neither of the drivers or horses were injured and there was no damage done to the sulkies.

GIRL RUNS AWAY WITH CIRCUS

IS BEING HELD IN SYRACUSE AWAITING WORD FROM HER HOME.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 17—Syracuse police are holding Ada Kirkpatrick, of Watertown, who came to town with the Al. G. Barnes circus and was picked up on the grounds at the request of the circus authorities.

The girl says that she ran away from Watertown because of her stepmother and that being promised a job as ticketseller with the circus walked from Watertown to Utica to take the place. When she got there she found there was no job waiting for her and not knowing what to do accompanied the show to this city. She says that she rode from Utica to this city in a box car with fifteen horses.

She is being held until the Watertown officials decide whether they want her returned to that city.

LOCAL MAN ALLOWED $2,306.25 FOR INJURIES RECEIVED

John T. Donahue has been awarded compensation of $2,306.25 cash for injuries suffered to his feet and legs when he fell off a scaffold and dropped twenty feet while in the employ of Charleboise and Deline in Fulton. The award was made by Deputy Compensation Commissioner W. C. Richards after several hearings in the case.

The award is subject to an appeal which is expected to be made by the insurance carriers. In this event, however, Commissioner Richards will allow Donahue compensaion at the rate of $15 per week pending the proceedings.

A medical examination of Donahue's injured feet and legs ordered by Commissioner Richards were such as to make it impossible for him to continue his profession as plasterer. He has expressed a desire to open a cigar or news stand and it was for this reason that Mr. Richards made the award in a lump sum.

BOTH ENDS AND THE MIDDLE

The Retailer—The Newspaper—The Consumer.

There you have it—both ends and the middle—and the three working in harmony should make any community prosperous.

The one cannot prosper without the other, and neither can meet with success without the co-operation of the other two.

Therefore to achieve prosperity for this community it becomes the paramount duty of all concerned to work in harmony, to labor to one common end, to protect the homes that give us shelter and to conserve the interests of the people who constitute the community.

We make of this community a hive of industry and a realm of peace, prosperity and happiness—or we may just drift along with the tide, pick up the crumbs that are thrown our way and grumble because the Lord provides for others and apparently forgets our existence.

It will be as we make it—no other way.

The Lord has provided us with intelligence and health, and energy and the power to accomplsh things.

With that His work is done, and the rest is up to us.

If we make the best of that with which He has given us we will soon become prosperous, happy and contented—a people enjoying to the fullest of life's blessings.

But if we neglect the gifts with which he has endowed us the penalty of failure will fall upon our own shoulders, the responsibility will be ours alone—the commercial stagnation of our community will be but the natural sequence of our own short sightedness.

No community will prosper without the presence of a variety of stores, shops and other marts of commerce and trade. They are as necessary as the ground we till and the sun and the rain that produce our crops.

No store or shop can survive without the loyal support of the community—the whole community.

The interest of the retailer and consumer are one in common—the success of one depends upon the co-operation of the other.

But these two interests that should be working in harmony are often too wide apart—separated by a yawning gulf of indifference and neglect.

And the body politic, the community as a whole suffers, stagnates, withers and dies.

But there is a remedy.

And herein comes the province of the middle man—this daily newspaper.

From a commercial standpoint the local newspaper is a "go between"—it is the medium of carrying the message from the merchant to the consumer.

The consumer reads the paper, and if he sees nothing in its advertising columns of which he stands in need, it is but natural that he should drift to other points for his wares.

The local business man is forgotten simply because, he does not advertise, because he is slower than his out of town competitor.

But if the merchant is alive to his opportunities, if he uses the advertising columns of the paper to bring his goods to the favorable attention of the buyer, then he is meeting competition, is making an effective bid for the home trade, and invariably achieves prosperity.

Men of brains realize that it is to their own individual interest to bolster their own community by trading with their home institutions.

But the seeker, the buyer, never goes to a haystack for a needle.

He follows the lure of the well written advertisement, and if that advertisement happens to be an out-of-town concern using another paper as the middle, then it is generally the out of town retailer that gets the business.

But the remedy should be applied.

The two ends and the middle should get closer together for the common good of the community.

The local retailer and the consumer are the two ends, with this paper as the middle, and if all will unite in the common cause there will be but one verdict—Prosperity.

THE BANNER OF TRUTH

Eventually truth will prevail, but it seems not to appeal very strongly to a majority of voters these times. But, as in the past, we are certain that, "Truth, crushed to earth, shall rise again." A false issue cannot always prevail. A live burning issue founded on truth, a proposition, that has an unselfish purpose for the sake of humanity, will rise from defeat determined to wage the battle until victory comes to the side of right. Right must prevail or the nation will totter and eventually fall. The force that battles for the school the church and the home is the backbone and mainstay of the republic. So far the nation has lived in spite of those who follow false gods and this has been possible because there is constantly at work in opposition, a loyal and true circle of unselfish, self-sacrificing people with clear vision and unswerving purpose.

The staid, "conservative" East, steeped in ways that need changing to keep step with progress, must awake soon, or the awakening will be painful. The young West and the rejuvenated South have a message for the remainder of the republic and it will be heard in no faint way in due time, if there is anything in the record now being made in those sections. And, speaking of progress and common sense it is probably true that the West and the South have seen the light while the effete East is still sleeping in the dark. Great will be the awakening. Those who unselfishly labor for the triumph of right will not think of abandoning the struggle.

—The Boston Globe has discovered another route to reform: "Now that Pittsburg stogies are to be sold at a nickel for two instead of a nickel for three, there will naturally be some reduction in the amount of crime."

—The report that women yeggmen are operating at Chicago must be an encouragement to all who favor enlarging woman's sphere.

—The fact that you couldn't buy a toy pistol for July 4, does not prove that you can't buy dynamite enough to blow up a munition factory.

—The economics of running a railroad strike would be to cause the public a loss of $10.00 in order to get $1.00 for the workingman.

—Some motorists feel that the greatest danger on the highway is slowing down enough so that the police can read their number.

It is strange that so many men fail to succeed as baseball umpires when all they have to do is to favor the home team.

—It is believed that the troops on the border will all be equipped with summer clothing by the beginning of winter.

—Today is the tomorrow we worried about yesterday, and it never happened.

—During the first half of last year more than $22,000,000 worth of diamonds were produced in South Africa.

JACKSON'S INAUGURATION.

Unwelcomed by Adams, but the People Made Things Pretty Lively.

It was on Feb. 11, the day the electoral votes were counted, that Jackson arrived in Washington and took up his residence at Gadsby's, an inn famous in stage coaching days. He declined to call upon President Adams, implying that he could not bring himself to touch the hand of a man who had attained office through unworthy means. He busied himself with the office seekers, who rushed to Washington in incredible numbers, likewise avoiding Adams to flock around the power that was to be. Adams, resenting this breach of etiquette, took no official or social notice of his successor and left the city on the 3d of March, neither he nor any member of his cabinet remaining to welcome Jackson to office.

On the morning of March 4 those fortunate to secure a commanding position on Capitol hill looked down upon Pennsylvania avenue alive with carts and carriages full of women and children, their male escorts walking beside them. At last a small company of men was seen marching compactly through this crowd up the middle of the avenue—one tall figure holding his hat, while the wind played through his willful gray locks. There was something military in the sight, something most unmilitary in the rabble of people shouting themselves hoarse in acclaim of the spare, erect figure. It was an expression of popular will and popular trust that gripped the heart and sent an ache to the throats even of those who feared the "Tennessee barbarian" and his host.

After taking the oath of office Jackson returned to the White House on horseback, followed indiscriminately by white and black, rich and poor, men, women and children, who swarmed over the lawn and through the rooms of the executive mansion, where no police provision had been made for such an onslaught. The courageous old warrior was forced that day to do what he seldom did. He retreated and sought refuge in his old quarters at Gadsby's. Current rumor had it that a quantity of china and cut glass to the value of several thousand dollars was broken in an attempt to get refreshments to the multitude, and finally great tubs of punch were carried out in front of the house, but that "hogsheads would not have been enough."—Helen Nicolay in Century.

BOILING WATER.

It Is Not Always Hot and Sometimes May Be Barely Heated.

If you scald yourself with the teakettle you are apt to think that boiling water is a pretty hot proposition. But boiling water is not always very hot water, and this is the way it happens.

When water boils ordinarily it is because great heat has separated the tiny particles of the water, forcing upward and outward in lively bubbles the air which is contained in them. This is done in spite of the downward pressure of the atmosphere. After the water has become hot enough to boil it can get no hotter, because the air escapes as fast as it is sufficiently heated to do so.

There are places on the earth where the pressure of the atmosphere upon the water is so slight that it requires but little heat to push apart the particles and set free the air bubbles which are confined in the water, so it begins to boil before it becomes very hot. It ought hardly to be called cold water, perhaps, but it is certainly far from being as hot as ordinarily boiling water. This state of things is found on all high mountain tops, as the atmosphere grows weaker and its pressure less as one ascends.

A man traveling at a great elevation in the Andes mountains put some potatoes in a pot of water over a hot fire. The water began to boil almost immediately, but the potatoes did not cook. All the afternoon and all the night the water bubbled and boiled, but still the potatoes were not cooked. The boiling water was not hot enough.

Humbled Arrogance.

"That did me more good than anything that has happened in a long time."

"What did?"

"The Green's new car broke down right in front of our house, and I had the pleasure of sitting in our front window and watching Green and his whole family work for an hour trying to get it started again."—Detroit Free Press.

Her Saddest Hour.

"A woman's saddest hour," said the amateur poet, "is that in which she finds her first gray hair."

"Not necessarily," his wife replied. "It may be the hour in which she learns that the man she jilted when she met the failure whom she married has become a millionaire."—Life.

A Slight Omission.

A recruit being ordered aloft in a military balloon hesitated in obeying and complained to his captain, "Please, sir, in my oath of allegiance I swore to be true and faithful on land and water, but there was nothing said about air."—Boston Transcript.

NO PROTECTIVE MEASURE FROM DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS.

"You couldn't get a protective measure out of a Democratic Congress sectionally organized any more than you could get a revival meeting out of a disorderly house."—From Mr. Hughes' speech at Chicago.

PREPARE FOR THIS.

When we contemplate industrial and commercial conditions we see that we are living in a fool's paradise. The temporary prosperity to which our opponents point has been created by the abnormal conditions incident to the war. With the end of the war there will be the new conditions determined by a new Europe. Millions of men in the trenches will then return to work. The energies of each of the now belligerent nations, highly trained, will then be turned to production."—Charles E. Hughes.

"WORDS, OR DEEDS?"

"If anything in this campaign is real it is that we are now facing the question whether we want words or whether we want deeds; whether we want that which is written and spoken, or whether we want American action in the interests of the American people, worthy of the American name, maintaining the American honor, and buttressing the prosperity of the United States."—From Mr. Hughes' speech at Chicago.

MR. WILSON HAS HAD NO MEXICAN POLICY

"We cannot let the American spirit fall so low that, lapped in the luxury occasioned by a foreign war, we shall see American lives sacrificed without a determination to prevent it and to make the American name honored and respected wherever our flag flies. The trouble with this administration is this:—I don't think it ever has had a policy in Mexico worthy of the name."—From Mr. Hughes' speech at Chicago.

MR. HUGHES OPPOSED TO FOOLISH GOVERNMENT.

"I have no respect for the idea that because democratic government is a government of the people, by the people and for the people it is a government of the foolish, for the foolish and by the foolish."—From Mr. Hughes' speech at Chicago.

"I don't care, if I am elected President, what becomes of my personal political fortunes. I propose that we shall have no more if I can stop it, of these 'kiss me and I'll kiss you' appropriations in Congress."—From Mr. Hughes' speech at Chicago.

Now that Mr. Hughes knows he has been nominated for president, we may wait patiently a few days longer to hear what Mr. Wilson has to say about it.

MR. HUGHES ANSWERS.

Those Who Clamored for His Views Are Hearing Them.

Those friends of Democracy who clamored so loudly for Mr. Hughes' opinions upon current issues while he still held the high office of justice of the supreme court, are now fully answered by the private citizen, who surrendered his judicial position to accede to the wishes of a majority of the people as expressed through their instructions to their delegates to the Republican national convention.

Mr. Hughes has not disappointed those who have reposed confidence in his character and judgment. In his speech of acceptance he has clearly set forth the vital issues upon which the Republican party proposes to conduct the campaign this fall. On the platform he is telling the nation wherein the present administration has been at fault and what is necessary to be done to restore the United States to the place of respect and honor to which it is entitled in the eyes of the world.

SEAL OF OUR UNION

Uncle Sam's Mark When He Stamps Official Documents.

HISTORY OF ITS ADOPTION.

Franklin, Adams and Jefferson Were the Men Appointed by John Hancock to Prepare the Device For the Great Seal of the United States.

The founders of our government did nothing without careful deliberation, and we are told that the adoption of a seal for the United States was as carefully considered as the framing of the Declaration of Independence. It was adopted during the period of the Confederacy, several years before the adoption of the constitution, but not till after several years' deliberation.

On the 4th of July, 1776, after the Declaration of Independence had been finally acted upon, John Hancock, president of the congress, appointed Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson a committee "to prepare a device for the great seal of the United States of America." A seal was not needed for ornament or show, but to certify the official commissions soon to be issued by the United States. The committee took up the matter at once.

Each of the members of the committee had some ideas of his own, and they called in an artist of Philadelphia to help them formulate a design. This artist was Pierre Simitierri, a patriotic Swiss, who was doing some excellent portrait painting in the then capital city of the country.

The Swiss drew a design, which was discussed by the committee, after which each member suggested additions or changes, which were incorporated by Jefferson in a report made to congress on Aug. 10, 1776. This report was in heraldic language, describing the shield, crest, dexter, legend, etc. The following is an extract of this report:

"The great seal should on one side have the arms of the United States of America, which arms should be as follows: The shield has six quarters—the first an enameled rose, for England; the second a thistle proper, for Scotland; the third a harp, for Ireland; the fourth a fleur-de-lis, for France; the fifth the imperial eagle, for Germany; the sixth the crowned lion, for Holland—pointing out the countries from which the colonies have been peopled."

After describing other details, as the Goddess of Liberty, the initial letters of the colonies, etc., the report said, "Crest, the eye of Providence in a radiant triangle, whose glory extends over the shield and beyond the figures; motto, 'E Pluribus Unum.' "

For some reason or other congress referred this device back to the committee for further report. Franklin had proposed for a motto "Rebellion to Tyrants Is Obedience to God." Adams proposed Hercules leaning on a club, while all the virtues and nearly all the vices grouped about him in different attitudes. His design would have been a monstrosity and laughingstock. Jefferson's composite design simplified matters, and it was he who suggested the motto "E Pluribus Unum."

This was in August, 1776. The war soon absorbed the attention and nothing further was done about the seal until March, 1779, when a committee of three was appointed to consider and report on the subject. This committee reported in favor of a shield with thirteen diagonal stripes, alternately red and white, a constellation of thirteen stars, a figure of Liberty and the motto "Bello vel Pace Paratus" ("Ready for war or for peace").

This report also was recommitted, and it was nearly a year before the matter came up again. Not to follow through repeated discussions and rejections of several designs, the present seal was not adopted till June 20, 1782.

It was the work of a young American artist, William Barton by name, who followed in many respects the design submitted by Jefferson six years before, but simplified it. He retained the eagle, a bundle of arrows in one talon and an olive branch in the other; the helmet with six bars or quarterings, signifying the six nationalities from which the country had been mainly peopled, and the motto "E Pluribus Unum," which survived all the discussions.

The designer said, "The motto alludes to the Union." He added in his explanation, "The escutcheon is borne on the breast of the American eagle, without any other support, to denote that the United States of America ought to rely on their own virtues."

The different executive departments of the government have each their own seal, but every commission signed by the president is stamped with the great seal of the United States, which is kept in the state department.—Washington Post.

Fulton is reaching out for more factories. Nothing will carry more weight with the prospective investor than a live daily paper. Are you doing your part?

Electricity.

No one knows what electricity is. We know some of the things that it will do. We have to a certain extent learned how to control it and for want of a better name call it a fluid. We have discovered, too, that it is one of the most important forces, if not the most important force, of which we have any knowledge. We are almost as ignorant of many other great forces of nature—as, for example, the attraction of gravitation. For the present we must be content to observe such forces in action and to devise the best methods to control them. In this knowledge mankind has progressed wonderfully within a few years.—St. Nicholas.

PERSONAL IMPROVEMENT.

Experience serves to prove that the worth and strength of a state depend far less upon the form of its institutions than upon the character of its men, for the nation is only the aggregate of individual conditions, and civilization itself is but a question of personal improvement.—Samuel Smiles.

Powerful Bulls.

During a debate upon the second reading of the Irish land bill in 1896 Lord Londonderry concluded a period with: "This is the keystone of the bill. Are you going to kill it?"

Sir Frederick Milner, speaking on the budget, said, "A cow may be drained dry, and if chancellors of the exchequer persist in meeting every deficiency that occurs by taxing the brewing and distilling industry they will inevitably kill the cow that lays the golden milk!"

Lord Curzon—"The interests of the employers and employed are the same nine times out of ten—I will even say ninety-nine times out of ten!"

Precisely.

"This," said the guide who was piloting a bunch of tourists through Egypt, as he pointed to the mummy, "was a high priest, the wisest man of his day. He lived to a great age."

"Was his last illness fatal?" queried the wag of the bunch.

"Of course it was," answered the guide, with a look of pity at the other.

"That's queer," rejoined the waggish person. "His appearance would seem to indicate that he was permanently cured."—Exchange.

POLICEMAN FOX IS ON THE JOB

Our efficient traffic policeman, Thomas Fox is not afraid of the cars and incidently was not afraid of a horse that was being recklessly driven west on Cayuga street, into First street yesterday afternoon by two young men who were attempting to monopolize both sides of the road. Tom grabbed the reins near the bit and after a short tussle succeeded in bringing the fractious steed to a halt, much to the displeasure of the occupants of the buggy. When they rebelled, however, the officer informed them that he had a cozy little place reserved for them at the City Hall annex which had the effect of soothing them instantly, and they were allowed to depart. Reckless driving of vehicles will not be tolerated in Fulton.

JAMES GILREATH IS MISSING

FORMER MEXICO BUSINESS MAN HAS SUDDENLY DISAPPEARED.

Clyde, N. Y., August 17—James Nicholas Gilreath, formerly of Mexico, N. Y., who came to this village less than a year ago and opened a grocery store is missing. He left home June 28 and since that time his family has heard nothing from him.

When Mr. Gilreath came to this place from Mexico he purchased the Dousley house and bought out the grocery business of the Muller Company. Shortly afterward, his business not panning out as well as he expected he disposed of the store and after collecting several outstanding bills made preparations to return to Mexico. He moved his family to the Garlick house on Main street and shortly after his wife and two children returned to Mexico for a visit with her parents. Mr. Gilreath told his wife that before returning to Mexico he inendetd to go to Rochester.

Since that date he has no been seen. Mr. Gilreaths father, a man eighty-two years of age is prostrated by his son's disappearance at Grand river, Iowa.

Before coming to Mexico Mr. Gilreath was a real estate operator in Lake Andes, South Dakota. He was lured east by advertisements of alleged profitable investmens. He disposed of his business and came to Mexico and invested several thousand dollars in farm land in this section. The first few ventures were successful, but later he was fleeced by real estate sharks and lost all the money he had saved.

This so preyed upon his mind that he became morose and melancholy and unfitted for business. When he sold his store in Clyde he was on the verge of a breakdown because of his business reverses it is said here.

When he left this place for Rochester he is said to have had about $1,000 in currency on his person. He drew the money from the Briggs National bank here and shortly afterward was seen driving down the street in a wagon.

Mr. Gilreath is fifty-four years old, five feet six inches tall, weighs 140 pounds, has grey hair, light blue eyes, and grey mustache; he stoops slightly. At the time of his disappearance he wore a black derby hat, dark suit of clothes and wore glasses. He always wore a ring on his little finger.

SYRACUSE TAKING PRECAUTIONS TO PREVENT SPREAD OF DISEASE.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 17—All the city playgrounds, swimming pools and public parks were closed to children today in an effort to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis which has been spreading in this section during the past week.

This action was taken at the request of the Health Authorities and it is reported will shortly be followed by an edict barring children even from street cars, theatres and other public places.

Health officials are already barring children from county fairs, excursions, picnics and other gatherings.

RESULT OF VOTE NOT YET ANNOUNCED

Announcement of the result of the vote by employes of the Syracuse, Lake Shore and Northern lines was not made today as expected because of the delay in receiving the results of the vote of the men on the Oswego city lines. It will probably be made known late tonight or tomorrow. Indications are that the vote will favor the adoption of the agreement.

Terms of the new pact with the railroad have not been made public and will not be given out until the counting of the ballots have been completed and then perhaps only in case the answer is an affirmative one.

All the men employed on the Lake Shore Division have passed their opinion on the agreement.

HEALTH INSTRUCTIONS

FURNISHED BY CITY CLERK ADKINS FOR THE GUIDANCE OF FULTON CITIZENS.

In view of the fact that this city is at the present time among those having cases of infantile paralysis, the following facts in regard to the disease have been summarized by the City Clerk's office from reports and communications from the State Department of Health and elsewhere, for those wishing to use their influence toward the prevention of the spreading of the disease.

"This special form of paralysis is a disease of the spinal cord or its extension into the brain. Eighty-six per cent. of the victims are under the age of five years. The disease is contracted by a person, susceptible to it, receiving into the nose and throat of persons ill with the disease, convalescent from it, or, who are healthy "carriers" of disease germs by direct contact or through the intermediary of fingers, household utensils, handkerchiefs, towels or possibly household pets and flies. When the organism has once gained access to the nose or mouth, it grows rapidly and soon invades the brain or spinal cord through small passages in the upper part of the nasal cavity. The walls of the blood vessels supplying the nerve cells are invaded, their calibre constricted and the blood supply of the nerve cells partially or wholly cut off, resulting in the degeneration of the nerve cells and the corresponding nerves, together with paralysis of the muscles through which the nerves are distributed.

1—When symptoms appear in a person of your family, summon a physician immediately. Keep other members away from the affected person.

2—Protect your family by sending the patient to a hospital, if the family physician approves of this course. If hospital accommodations are not available, the patient must be isolated at home, as your physician and Health Officer will direct.

3—If the child is attending school, you should notify the principal of the school. If the child has recently been to Sunday School notify the Sunday School teacher so that she can inform the parents of other children that may have been exposed. If the patient is employed, the employer should be informed.

4—Complete isolation of the patient for six weeks must be maintained and those who have been in contact with the patient must be isolated and under observation for two weeks.

5—The proper disposal of the discharges from the nose and throat, not only of the patient, but of all in isolation, is of the greatest importance in preventing the spread of the disease. Pieces of cloth should be provided in abundance to receive all such discharges. The cloths after using should be placed in a paper bag and subsequently burned. Treatment with carbolic acid is not effective. Excreta from the bowels must also be treated with boiling water for fifteen minutes before being deposited in a privy vault. The hands of attendant should be frequently washed with soap and water and thoroughly rinsed.

6—It is often difficult to keep the children in isolation during convalescence unless something is available to occupy their minds. A pamphlet on the subject, "Amusements for Convalescent Children" may be obtained from the State Department of Health, Albany, N. Y., on receipt of a two cent stamp.

7—Physicians and Health Officers are required by law to perform certain duties. In the interest of Public Health, parents should give every possible assistance and not cherish ill feelings toward them on account of inconvenience and discomfort which maye be caused by quarantine measures.

PAPER FAMINE IS THREATENED

NO IMMEDIATE RELIEF IS IN SIGHT

The International Paper Company announces to its customers that the paper situation is such as to demand the utmost caution in the use of print paper of "news stock" as the product is known to the trade, for the next four months at least. The company states that an actual paper famine is in sight for September and warns consumers that their output must be very materially curtailed if they expect to continue the publication of their newspapers. The company emphasizes with the utmost gravity that unless publishers take immediate steps to curtail production there will not be enough paper to go around.

The International Paper Company is popularly known as "the trust" and it has been charged with organizing a "corner" in news stock. The company explicitly denies in its announcement that it has been a party to increased exportation of paper and points to the alleged fact that whereas its exports in the first months of 1915 totalled 22,059 tons, the total for the first six months of the present year totalled 20,479 tons. "This statement clearly answers and refutes any statement to the effect that The International Paper Company is exporting paper to the detriment of its domestic customers," it is declared in the statement.

As the largest producer of white paper in the country the International Paper Company's position is of great interest at the present time owing to the alleged danger that publishers may be compelled to print smaller papers or editions, or even suspend publication entirely. For it is stated by representatives of the various paper houses that the atitude of the International will be that of all other paper manufacturers and that no matter of whom the supply is purchased, the curtailment will be the same.

The charge has been made in Congress that collusion exists among the paper manufacturers to curtail the supply and raise the price, and that advantage is being taken of an unusual situation to increase profits. An investigation has been demanded and an investigation is now in progress whereby such a probe will be made. Publishers themselves organized the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and have taken steps to correct abuses in the waste of white paper and also to save the alleged corner in "news stock" thoroughly investigated and the facts aired before the general public. The American Newspaper Publishers' Association has wired all members to use the most extreme caution in the use of stock, to curtail the size of editions wherever possible and to eliminate waste in every possible form. Reduction in margins is one means whereby the big publishers propose to overcome the emergency in part; but even this step according to statements submitted by the International Paper Company will not serve to meet the situation.

The International has not, however, advanced the price of paper as much as some of the independent makers and has taken care of its patrons so far. An advance was made July 1st to contract customers and new contracts were made for six months only. By some concerns the price was advanced one hundred per cent. The company advises all its customers that the available supply of white paper is constantly decreasing and that next month perhaps its supply may have to be distributed pro rata.

This would mean that each publisher would receive shipments proportionate to his contract, and would necessitate radical steps to meet the deficiency.

Just what the pro rata allotment is likely to be the company does not state.

WOMEN ROOKIES AT LAKE GENEVA LEARNING TO THINK, TALK AND WORK FOR AMERICAN IDEALS.

(By United Press)

Lake Geneva, Wis., August 17—The 150 women rookies who are here in khaki and military training so they can "think, talk and work" for American ideals have settled down to their routine duties and are making rapid headway toward military efficiency today.

These women represent the 499,850 other American women members of the Women's branch of the Navy League. They are under the direction of Mrs. Vylla Poe Wilson, relative of Edgar Allan Poe and militant Quakeress from Washington, D. C. She originated the Women's Branch of the League.

"The league so far as we are concerned has been organized little more than a year," said Mrs. Wilson today, "yet we have half a million members. Mrs. George Dewey is president, Mrs. Natalie S. Lincoln, treasurer; Miss Elizabeth Poe, general secretary; myself organizing secretary. Some of the other prominent members are Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. Alvah Willing Astor, Julia Marlowe, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mrs. Hugh L. Scott. Ninety-five American cities are represented.

"Hundreds of women wanted to join the organization but complained that they didn't know how to do anything; so we started this work.

"We know that with seventeen million men of military age in the United States that we would never be called upon to bear arms, but we know we would be called upon for aid in many ways if this country ever goes to war, so we're preparing.

"The pledge signed by the women in the organization reads:

"'I pledge myself to think, talk and work for patriotism, Americanism and sufficient national defenses to keep the horrors of war from America's shores forever.

"'In these days of strife and peril I will strive to do my share to awaken our nation and our lawmakers to the dangers of our present undefended condition so that we may continue to dwell in peace and prosperity and may not have to mourn states desolated by war within our borders. In so far as I am able I will make my home a center of American ideals and patriotism and endeavor to teach the children in my care to cherish and revere our country and its history and to uphold its honor and fair repute in their generation.

The second term of the Lake Geneva school will begin September 1, immediately after the close of the term now in session.

FARM PRODUCTS TO BE SAVED

MARKETING AND FARM CREDITS CONFERENCE TO SEEK TO CHECK "BILLION DOLLAR WASTE."

(By United Press)

Chicago, August 17—How to check the billion dollar waste in the marketing of farm products will be the dominant theme of the fourth national conference on marketing and farm credits, called today to meet in Chicago, December 4 and 5.

Farmers of all states are expected to unite in a discussion of ways and means to remedy a condition termed "wasteful and iniquitous in the extreme" by the committee in its meeting notice.

Surveys will be made prior to the winter gathering that will show the movement of crops such as livestock, grain, cotton and hay. The whole milk problem and its relation to city distribution will be worked out.

Practical plans will be drawn for eliminating waste, improving farm products and increasing the consumption of certain farm crops.

Half of the conference work will be devoted to rural credits and the federal farm loan act will come in for its share of criticism.

"The delegates will analyze the scope and limitations of the act," said Secretary Charles W. Holman, of Madison, Wis., today. "And when they are through the American farmer will know what to expect under its terms. Contrary to the general belief, this act does not solve the rural credit problem. It is a beginning, but a crude one. It may prove to be almost inoperative in a number of states where federal jurisdiction will clash with existing homestead laws.

"Nor does the act touch even remotely the question of personal credit and it is a long way from striking at the great problem of turning tenants and landless men into home owning farmers.

"How to adjust state laws to harmonize with the act will be shown by speakers at the conference. Aid for the landless man and the immigrant will be discussed. We expect delegates from every state in the Union and from Canada.

"A feature of the winter sessions will be hearings to bring out needed information. The results of careful investigation and long experience will be presented on practical phases of the questions.

Farmers organizations will be invited to send men to tell their troubles.

"The conference is an open forum now in its fourth year. It is non-partisan. Its deliberations are followed up from year to year by committees and special bodies working for the delegates. The general committeemen signing the call are:

MAN'S WORK FOR THE STATE

He Has Consistently Held to Constructive Methods.

AIDED GOOD LEGISLATION.

A Brief Resume of Some of the Accomplishments of the Chief Executive of the State, Who Is Now a Candidate For Renomination and Re-election. Corrected Evils Created by Democrats.

The administration of Governor Charles S. Whitman has been marked by as great advancement in constructive government as that of any other Chief Executive in the history of the State, and this has been accomplished following four years of Democratic misrule, which, with scandals and impeachment, had well nigh demoralized every branch of State activity. Governor Whitman's service, therefore, has been one not only of conspicuous upbuilding, but before that could be begun, there was placed upon him the burden of the restoration of the government from a condition of administrative and financial wreck which the two preceding administrations had left behind.

The record of his administration is remarkable for many reasons, the most significant of which perhaps is that, while fully assuming all of the duties and burdens of his office and at no time shirking any responsibility or obligation, he has performed all these duties without a single mistake or error of judgment so far as good government was involved. He has the unblemished record of considering solely the public interest and acting only for the public good. No other consideration has affected his judgment nor colored his public acts.

A Man of Action.

His reputation as champion of the people and a man who never feared to do right was established by his public acts long before he was chosen as Chief Executive. Essentially a man of action, he has gone about the work before him with clear ideas of what he proposed to accomplish, but regarding as discreditable the methods too often followed by men in public life of attempting to get a reputation for accomplishment by filling the newspapers with promises of things to be done in the future.

He has been content to follow the inconspicuous course of devoting his energies to accomplishments, leaving the results to speak for themselves. That this program of quiet, unostentatious and earnest work appeals more strongly than any other to the people is indicated by the attitude of our citizens toward Governor Whitman. He has followed the program of doing the right thing all the time, regardless of political expediency, with the result that his party has been thereby strengthened and dignified.

What the Governor Says.

In this connection it is interesting to note Governor Whitman's own point of view with regard to the methods and purposes of his work as indicated by the following extracts from his speech before the Associated Manufacturers and Merchants of New York State, at Syracuse, in which he said:

"I have been criticised, I know, for the lack of the dramatic and the picturesque. I have been told that I have not been exciting enough as a Governor. Even while pleading guilty to the charge, in some sort of extenuation, let me offer the fact that the pursuit of efficiency and of economy does not contain any large amount of drama or of color. It is a mean, slow, painstaking job, full of pettiness, heart-burnings and disappointments, rich in enmities, rather barren in friendships, with moments when one wishes to high heaven that he had been born without ambition and with furious moment when one desires a lifetime of health and strength to fight the task to victory.

"People Alone Eternal."

"It is not of myself, however, that I choose to speak, and if in this brief consultation for the common good there is an appearance of self laudation, I beg you to believe that my sole purpose is the stimulation of a larger, keener and more continuous interest in those affairs that have to do with human lives and human hopes. Governors are incidents—the people alone are eternal. * * *

"Another matter, to which I want briefly to refer, is the problem that presents itself to every public servant on the very day of his appointment or his election. Shall he put a party above the people? Shall he contribute his efforts to the upbuilding of the party or the building up of the State? Shall he abide by the oath which he has taken or by the decisions of a few who know what they want and who may have the power to punish when they do not get what they want.

"I am in no sense ashamed of my allegiance to the Republican party, but the man who puts the interest of the party above the interest of the State is working injury in the end to both."

Much of the credit for the accomplishments of his administration the Governor himself insists properly belongs to the department heads whom he selected because of their fitness for the respective positions, but even they would have been powerless without his constant and steadfast support before the Legislature and elsewhere, and the knowledge forced upon department employees that these men represented the policies of the Governor, which policies must be carried out.

Advocated Preparedness.

Governor Whitman took an early stand for National and State preparedness. Within the area of his official influence, namely, the State, he contributed more to that propaganda than any other Governor who preceded him. Several months before the call for troops to the Mexican border, realizing as he did the importance of a test of the ability of the whole National Guard to mobilize at one time and place, he secured a special State appropriation of half a million dollars for a National Guard mobilization, and Camp Whitman was already being prepared therefor when the call to arms came. Instead of this fund, therefore, being used merely for a test of the Guard, it became a resource for preparing the Guard for active service. His law for military training is also a feature of his program for preparedness.

He began his campaign for reform of State finances early in his administration, in the face of the most adverse conditions that had ever existed in the State and has carried them well on to completion.

The sole test which he has applied in selecting appointees to public office has been fitness for the duties of office.

Sound Action on Legislation.

His action with respect to all legislation submitted to him has been sound, judicial and solely in the public interest. There is not one legislative bill which he has signed concerning which there has been a word of just criticism; no veto of his has been criticised except by those whose selfish interests were injured by his failure to approve.

He has fought the battle for prison reform and made secure its future rapid advancement.

He has reorganized and strengthened that department of government, the Industrial Commission the sole duty of which is the protection of the working men and women of the State, and has stood steadfast against any legislation unfavorable to their welfare.

He has stood firmly on the proposition that the insane, crippled and other helpless dependents of the State shall be properly housed and cared for.

As to State Debts.

He has insisted that the State must pay its honest debts and must carry to completion those great works, which, whether advisedly or otherwise, have been begun and already represent an enormous investment of public money.

He has taken the Civil Service out of politics and compelled appointments and promotions, under the Civil Service Law, to be made solely on the basis of merit and fitness.

He has driven scandals and crooked contractors out of the Highway Department and established in it an administration which has used fairly and economically the great appropriation of the Department for the benefit of the State as a whole, and not as an instrument for paying political debts.

He has taken the great canal system of the State out of politics and put it upon a business basis, through the force and energy of his appointee in charge of it, and made available for use during this administration a large part of the State investment in this enterprise, dormant for years because of mismanagement and inefficiency.

Extended Health Department.

He has given energetic support to the extension of the activities of the Health Department to the rural communities of the State, which is possible only through a powerful centralized State agency of this sort. He favored and approved an authorization of $100,000 for the construction of a modern laboratory for the Department which will place at the disposal of these rural communities the same advantages enjoyed by the city of New York through its own highly organized and costly local department.

He reorganized the Conservation commission in a single headed department and for the purpose of bringing about much needed administrative reform and advancement of its activities, obtained for its headship a man who, while distinguished for his successful administration of extensive business interests, is also a trained expert in forestry and keenly appreciative of the importance of the Department to the welfare of the State.

Aided the Farmers.

In the field of agriculture, Governor Whitman appointed a trained expert at the head of the Department of Agriculture, who has widely extended the usefulness of the Department. The Governor's support of the agricultural schools, the farm bureaus, farm schools and State Fair projects has been continuous and productive of great benefits to the farming industry of the State. Governor Whitman corrected at the outset of his administration one of the greatest wrongs which has ever been perpetrated against the farmers of the State, namely, the failure for years at a time to provide reimbursement for the losses of farmers for the killing of their livestock to prevent the spread of disease. In the first year of his administration Governor Whitman approved an appropriation of $780,112.25 for the payment of these claims, of which $432,722 was for claims from one to five years old, and in the budget of 1916, appropriation was made to pay up the approved claims in the Department of Agriculture up to the first of March of the present year to the amount of $240,814.95, making a total of over a million dollars for this purpose in two years, representing the payment of neglected claims, many of them extending back over a period of several years.

He has vigorously supported the Department of Education in the development of all activities under its jurisdiction.

Through the Department of Architecture he has investigated all requests for the construction, improvement or repair of State buildings, and through the efficient management of the Department, has assured the performance of all work of this character for the State under conditions which have eliminated crooked contract work, and obtained full value for the State appropriations used.

GRAFT IN THE ORIENT.

An Incident That Illustrates the Way of the Far East.

I had had experience with corruptible Turkish officers, and one day when barrack conditions became unendurable I went to the officer commanding our division, an old Arab from Latakieh who had been called from retirement at the time of the mobilization. He lived in a little tent near the mosque, where I found him squatted on the floor nodding drowsily over his comfortable paunch. As he was an officer of the old regime, I entered boldly, squatted beside him and told him my troubles. The answer came with an enormous shrug of the shoulders.

"You are serving the sultan. Hardship should be sweet."

"I should be more fit to serve him if I got more sleep and rest."

He waved a fat hand about the tent.

"Look at me! Here I am, an officer of rank and"—shooting a knowing look at me—"I have not even a nice blanket."

"A crime! A crime!" I interrupted. "To think of it, when I, a humble soldier, have dozens of them at home! I should be honored if you would allow me"— My voice trailed off suggestively.

"How could you get one?" he asked.

"Oh, I have friends here in Saffet, but I must be able to sleep in a nice place."

"Of course. Certainly. What would you suggest?"

"That hotel kept by the Jewish widow might do," I replied.

More amenities were exchanged, the upshot of which was that my four friends and I were given permission to sleep at the inn—a humble place, but infinitely better than the mosque. It was all perfectly simple.—Alexander Aaronsohn in Atlantic Monthly.

MILLION ACRE FARMS.

Those Are the Kind, as a General Rule, They Have In Mexico.

In the United States the farmer is a humble person. In Mexico he is a king of millionaires. You look out across a level plain and you see a magnificent house of stone, cement and great timbers, covering sometimes as much as half an acre. Surrounding it are other houses, hundreds of them, but all small, constructed of adobe, brush or even of cane stalks. You are not looking at a town, but at a ranch settlement. In the great house, which costs many times more than all the little houses put together, live the haciendado and his family. In the little houses live the peons.

The typical farm in Mexico is not of 100 acres, but of 1,000,000. In the state of Morelos twenty-eight haciendados own all the agricultural lands; twelve own nine-tenths of them. The territory of Quintana Roo, double the size of Massachusetts, is divided among eight companies. The greater portion of the state of Yucatan is held by thirty men, kings of sisal hemp. A major fraction of the agricultural and grazing lands of Chihuahua is owned by one family. Lower California, equal in size to Alabama, is nearly all held by five great corporations.

The 1,000,000 acre farms lie mostly fallow. Naturally a rich agricultural country, Mexico does not produce enough corn and beans to feed her own peon population. Modern machinery is needed, but modern machinery will never be used extensively so long as the peon is so cheap that primitive methods are cheaper than machine methods.—World Outlook.

Drum Fire and Curtain Fire.

"Drum fire" and "curtain fire" are modern war terms. "Drum fire" is the firing of artillery at stated intervals, the resultant noise being described as like the steady hammering of a great drum. When the desired effect of reducing the point of the attack has been accomplished the guns are elevated to a higher point and are fired continuously, making a "curtain of fire" to prevent re-enforcements reaching the point of attack from the rear and at the same time allowing the infantry to attack under protection of the guns.

Practical Religion.

The story is told of a little housemaid, far over the sea, who, when asked whether she realized that she was in any way different after uniting with the church from what she had been before, thought for an instant and then, smiling brightly, said, "Well, I sweep the corners." She could hardly have given a better demonstration of the reality of her religious life.—Christian Herald.

Not So Far Wrong.

"Have you written all the invitations to my party, mamma?" queried little Eva.

"Yes, dear," answered her mother. "They are all written and mailed."

"And how soon will the acceptions and deceptions begin to come in?"—Chicago News.

Work of a Beacon.

There is a flashing beacon on Richardson rock, a wave swept spot west of the Santa Barbara islands, California, which, without attention, will flash its warnings every three seconds for seven months, or over 6,000,000 flashes, before it requires recharging with gas.—Argonaut.

All Sorts.

"How's this—seven different styles of plug hats?"

"The line officers of our lodge. Each bought a plug hat the year he was elected."—Kansas City Journal.

To dread no eye and to suspect no tongue is the greatest prerogative of innocence.—Dr. Johnson.

MR. HUGHES HAS EXPLODED THE "KEPT US OUT OF WAR" ARGUMENT.

Mr. Hughes' attack upon the "kept-us-out-of-war" argument has aroused a storm of enthusiasm.

"Kept us out of war?" he demands. "Why, there were nineteen men—good American soldiers, shot down at Vera Cruz, and many Mexicans were killed by our men. That was war. Moreover, it was a very ignoble war. I have heard three explanations of the Vera Cruz move.

"First, it was explained that it was made in order to compel somebody to salute the flag—somebody who had insulted us. But the flag was not saluted and has not been to this day. Then it was said that the salute was not what we sought, but to prevent the landing of a boatload of ammunition intended for Huerta. The ammunition landed, however, and it has been shown that it reached Huerta in due season without interference on our part.

"When that reason was shown to be untenable a third one—and possibly the real one—finally was advanced. It was said that our seizure of Vera Cruz was a move to compel the retirement of Huerta. It seems possible that this is true, although we had promised the Mexicans that we would not interfere in their affairs and told them more than once that we wanted them to handle their own affairs.

"That is why the Mexicans could not understand us and that is why they show little faith in our promises."

WE WANT THE AMERICAN FLAG UNSULLIED.

"Now, my friends, we want not only American efficiency in business, in efficiency in the organization of business, in the protection of the factors of human industry and commerce, we want the American flag unsullied and the American name honored throughout the world." —From Mr. Hughes' speech at Chicago.

MANANA

Manana, which is Mexican for "watchful waiting," is the Democratic keynote in the campaign. The Wilson drive is to begin "sometime" after September 1; but no definite engagements have been made, it is announced, for him to commence making political speeches. He has tentative engagements to make some Western visits about the middle of September but nothing positive. Plans are being formulated for carrying on a campaign to capture the woman vote of the country, but who will make the speeches on this phase of the controversy has not been determined. It had been expected that Mr. Bryan would speak in the Maine campaign, but it is now believed he cannot do so, but will make some speeches later. And so it goes. Watchful waiting will prevail while, in the meantime, Mr. Hughes is carrying on a positive campaign and arousing the entire Western country.

MORTON'S GREAT SHOWING.

Cleveland Pitcher Should Rank Among Leaders.

In discussing the leading pitchers of the land very few have entered the name of Guy Morton among the elect. Yet if the Cleveland club maintains its morale Morton will likely be ranked with Walter Johnson before the year is out.

Morton calls Vernon, Ala., his home. He is over six feet, weighs 178 pounds and was twenty-three years old June 1. He joined the Cleveland club late in 1914, and despite the poor aspect of that organization then he won nine games and lost but five. Last year, working with the disintegrated Cleveland machine, Morton won sixteen games and lost fifteen, permitting only a trifle above two runs to the game.

When Cleveland began to absorb class in the spring and develop power Morton started in to institute a reign of terror. He has already rolled back the Tigers, White Sox, Browns and Red Sox with his invaluable stuff. Today there isn't a harder pitcher in the country to beat, and he is only twenty-three. If this Cleveland slabman doesn't prove to be another Johnson, Mathewson or Alexander the dope is false.

PRIVATE GOLF COURSES.

Increasing, but Several Are of Less Than Thousand Yards.

Miniature and privately owned golf courses are increasing in number throughout the country. Several of the former laid out this season run less than a thousand yards, but afford excellent facilities for the little group of enthusiasts who play over them at every opportunity.

The privately owned courses compare favorably with the average big club links, but naturally are restricted to very wealthy golfers who can afford to pay for large stretches of land, laying out of courses and the upkeep of the same.

The Laughing Hyena.

Although the hysterical laughter of the laughing hyena is not, as was once supposed, the outcome of a deliberate attempt to decoy unwary travelers to their doom, this strange animal is, nevertheless, one of the most cunning of dumb animals. He is so suspicious of everything he does not understand that the sight of even a bit of string at once puts him on his guard. Trappers are aware of this fact and generally use the stems of creeping plants instead of string of any kind in setting their spring traps.

What Housewives Are Glad to Know

Home Cookery

Jelly Cake With Nut Filling.

Make the cake as usual and just before rolling fill with a stiff fudge icing made by boiling together two cupfuls of brown sugar, a cupful of sweet milk, lump of butter the size of an egg and a teaspoonful of vanilla when done. Boil until it is thick without scorching and then beat as you do fudge. Just before it threatens to get too hard turn in a cupful of nut meats of any kind and spread on the warm cake. Roll and slice with a hot knife.

Calf's Liver En Casserole.

The liver should be left whole, weighing two pounds. Lard with strips of salt pork. Place in the casserole on a layer of chopped vegetables, using a cupful of celery, one-half cupful each of turnip, carrot and onion (all measured after chopping) and a little parsley. Surround with the same, add a scant teaspoonful salt, one-fourth as much pepper and a cupful of hot water. Cover and cook in a moderate oven for one hour.

White Turnips and Peas.

Select white turnips the size of apples, as round as possible. Peel carefully and cut off a slice at the bottom so they will rest firmly on a plate. Then scoop out the center and boil in salt water, being careful not to let them get so well done that they will fall apart. Fill the center with cooked peas and serve on a small, round plate with a little doily beneath the turnip cups.

Stewed Lambs' Hearts.

Trim and soak hearts in cold water. Make a dressing of breadcrumbs seasoned with onion, herbs, salt and pepper. Drain the hearts, stuff with the dressing, and skewer the top to close the opening. Put in a stewpan, half cover with boiling water, cover the pan and put in the oven to simmer slowly until tender. Thicken the gravy, flavor with table sauce, boil up and serve.

Blueberry Tea Cakes.

One egg, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, salt, one-third of a cupful of shortening, one and a half cupfuls of sweet milk, one and a half teaspoonfuls of soda, two teaspoonfuls of cream tarter, rounded a little; three cupfuls of flour and, lastly, one pint of blueberries.

Red Raspberry Muffins.

Two cupfuls of flour, a pinch of salt, one cupful of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one egg. Stir well and add, last of all, one cupful of red raspberries. Bake in muffin tins in a hot oven.

An Aeroplane Mouse.

Washing Fluid.

One ten cent box of potash, 10 cents' worth of salts of tartar, 5 cents' worth of dry ammonia, one gallon of water. Dissolve the potash in the water, set on the stove and let come to boiling heat. When partly cold stir in the salts of tartar and ammonia. Put in a jug well corked. Use one-half of a cupful to a boiler of cold water in which a cake of hard laundry soap has been cut. Wet the clothes first, put in the boiler and let come to boil. No rubbing is necessary. This will not injure the finest fabric.

Paring Knife Waste.

A dull paring knife will waste enough in one season to offset the cost of many good ones. Every thick potato peeling represents an inexcusable waste. One or two good paring knives should be a part of the equipment of every kitchen.

Natty Neckwear a Fall Feature

Interesting "fixings" for the neck were never so charming nor individual. There is something piquant and becoming for every kind of blouse and every woman. This picture is of white net, with corners of collar and revers daintily embroidered, edged with val to match the heart shaped drape of the jabot. Design by the Association of American Neckwear Manufacturers.

Choose the Corset With Great Care

Two things should be considered in buying a corset—whether or not it is entirely comfortable and whether or not it gives you a shapely form. If it is not comfortable, by wearing it you may seriously injure your health. If it is not suited to your build it will materially detract from your personal appearance, and it is the duty of all of us to look as well as we can. By this is not meant that we should spend just as much as possible on our clothes. It is not necessarily the woman who spends the most money on her clothes who makes the best appearance. The woman who chooses her clothes thoughtfully with regard to materials, styles and colors will always be well dressed and will appear at her best for the reason that she will have no need to think about her clothes while she is wearing them, but can turn her whole attention to other matters.

A well fitted, comfortable corset has more to do with a woman's appearance than many of us imagine. Discomfort makes ease and grace impossible, and an ill fitting corset will spoil the appearance of a pretty dress.

Kitchen Kinks

Always use ice water when mixing pie crust.

All bacon is improved by having hot water poured over it before frying.

A teaspoonful of vinegar put into homemade candy will prevent it from becoming sticky.

Put plenty of butter into the cake you wish to keep for any length of time.

Ether is a good thing to use for removing grease spots from clothing.

When marking linen handkerchiefs with indelible ink, first starch the handkerchiefs and iron them smooth. They can then be marked clearly.

When making egg custard pies always heat the milk to the boiling point before mixing it with the eggs. The undercrust will always be crisp.

Too many iced drinks are bad in hot weather.

Never use a very hot iron on mohair.

Serving Food In the Sickroom

Food served in the sickroom should be served well. Properly cooked food arranged tastefully on a tray will stimulate appatite.

The things to be considered in serving food for the sick, says Miss Olive Sheets, instructor in domestic science in the Kansas State Agricultural college, are cleanliness, attractiveness, proper preparation of the food and the convenience of the patient.

It is not necessary that the housewife have special equipment for serving the sick, but dainty linens, dishes and silverware should be used. The tray should be light in weight, durable, easily cleaned and attractive in appearance. White enameled papier mache trays are good.

A tray cloth that just fits the tray is to be preferred, but a clean napkin neatly folded will answer the purpose. The dishes on the tray are arranged in the form that will suit the patient and in as attractive a way as possible. Often a color scheme can be carried out in a well cooked menu, and this adds charm to the sickroom meal. A flower or a spray of leaves lends cheer. It is not essential to have flowers from the greenhouse. A daisy from the field or a clover blossom brings a message from the outside that brightens the room.

Educational Note.

"Do you think the colleges turn out the best men?"

"Sure. I was turned out in my freshman year."

ASCRIBE BAD WEATHER TO WAR FRONT GUNS

Steamship Officers Convinced Firing Causes Rain and Wind.

Captains and officers of the Atlantic liners trading to New York are firm in the belief that the unusual rains and violent windstorms which have been so frequent this summer are partially due to the continuous firing of the heavy guns on the continent added to the explosions on the sea.

Captain Capper and the officers of the Cunarder Pannonia said the weather in the channel was the worst they had ever experienced at this time of the year, and in London there were not five sunny days the whole of July.

Reports brought from Paris by the officers of the French liner Rochambeau stated that the sun had only shone for three days out of the thirty-one in July, which is usually the sunniest and hottest month of the year at the French capital.

Captains of Italian liners trading to New York from Genoa state that the weather in the Mediterranean instead of being calm and hot is subject to frequent violent windstorms with heavy downpours of rain similar to those which occur in the latitudes of the "doldrums"—that is, ten degrees either side of the equator.

Reports from northern Europe state that the summer weather there is the same as it is in England and France and more resembled March in its boisterous winds and rain than June or July. Russian meteorological statistics show an unusual amount of rain and excessive cold. In Moscow up to the middle of July there had been no sign of summer or of the hot weather which usually sets in before June. In the Scandinavian countries the weather has been as dull, damp and chilly as it has been reported in England.

Southern Germany has been subjected to violent rains, and Lake Constance is abnormally high, according to reports just received. Austria, Hungary and the Balkan provinces, as well as Turkey, have experienced a series of storms all through June and July.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

THE COUNTY FAIR IS IN FULL BLAST

Tomorrow Will Be The Last Day

There Will Be Many Special Attractions and Good Racing

Result of Races.

In the 2:20 trot Lancer got first money in three straight heats; Joe Star, second; Hall Hopper third, Earl D. fourth, Violet Patch fifth, Counselor Dome sixth, Pearl Barron seventh, Dick McPherson eighth. Time: 2:19 1-4, 2:19 1-4, 2:21.

Josie Russell took three straight heats in the 2:29 Pace and Trot, Topsy King second, Mobel Simmons third, Mandy Lee fourth, Prince Gayton fifth. Time: 2:28 1-4, 2:21 1-4, 2:23 1-4.

Driver John Youngs, of Chemical wagon No. 1, received first prize at the Fair grounds today. Driver Garnet Alnut, of wagon No. 2, received second premium. This is an annual event with only the fire teams competing.

The second day of the Oswego County Fair opened yesterday morning with ideal weather. About five thousands persons paid admission to the grounds.

The crowd was somewhat disappointed that Governor Whitman was unable to attend, but his place on the programme was filled by Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo, who gave a short address from the bandstand, in front of the grandstand.

The balloon ascension was a success, and the parachute drop was made close to the grounds, as there was no wind to carry the balloon. The other attractions were given as scheduled, and the racing was exciting. There was a large number of persons in the grandstand to witness the first day's programme.

The 2:17 pace and trot for a purse of $250, and the 2:28 pace for a purse of $200 will be held today. There has been eight entries for the later contest, and eighteen for the 2.17 contest.

Owing to the large number of out-of-town visitors attending the fair, the Fire and Police Commission, through Chief E. J. Dyer, has secured the services of a number of out-of-town detectives. Chief among these is Edward Buell of Syracuse. These men will look after pickpockets, and watch for crooks that are known to the police departments of other cities. Already suspicious characters have been brought to the Police Station and ordered out of town.

POLICEMAN FOX IS ON THE JOB

Our efficient traffic policeman, Thomas Fox is not afraid of the cars and incidently is not afraid of a horse that was being recklessly driven west on Cayuga street, into First street yesterday afternoon by two young men who were attempting to monopolize both sides of the road. Tom grabbed the reins near the bit and after a short tussle succeeded in bringing the fractious steed to a halt, much to the displeasure of the occupants of the buggy. When they rebelled, however, the officer informed them that he had a cozy little place reserved for them at the City Hall annex which had the effect of soothing them instantly, and they were allowed to depart. Reckless driving of vehicles will not be tolerated in Fulton.

JAMES GILREATH IS MISSING

FORMER MEXICO BUSINESS MAN HAS SUDDENLY DISAPPEARED.

Clyde, N. Y., August 17—James Nicholas Gilreath, formerly of Mexico, N. Y., who came to this village less than a year ago and opened a grocery store is missing. He left home June 28 and since that time his family has heard nothing from him.

When Mr. Gilreath came t o this place from Mexico he purchased the Dousley house and bought out the grocery business of the Muller Gompany. Shortly afterward, his business not panning out as well as he expected he disposed of the store and after collecting several outstanding bills made preparations to return to Mexico. He moved his family to the Garlick house on Main street and shortly after his wife and two children returned to Mexico for a visit with her parents. Mr. Gilreath told his wife that before returning to Mexico he inendetd to go to Rochester.

Since that date he has no been seen. Mr. Gilreaths father, a man eighty-two years of age is prostrated by his son's disappearance at Grand river, Iowa.

Before coming to Mexico Mr. Gilreath was a real estate operator in Lake Andes, South Dakota. He was lured east by advertisements of alleged profitable investmens. He disposed of his business and came to Mexico and invested several thousand dollars in farm land in this section. The first few ventures were successful, but later he was fleeced by real estate sharks and lost all the money he had saved.

This so preyed upon his mind that he became morose and melancholy and unfitted for business. When he sold his store in Clyde he was on the verge of a breakdown because of his business reverses it is said here.

When he left this place for Rochester he is said to have had about $1,000 in currency on his person. He drew the money from the Briggs National bank here and shortly afterward was seen driving down the street in a wagon.

Mr. Gilreath is fifty-four years old, five feet six inches tall, weighs 140 pounds, has grey hair, light blue eyes, and grey mustache; he stoops slightly. At the time of his disappearance he wore a black derby hat, dark suit of clothes and wore glasses. He always wore a ring on his little finger.

PLAY GROUNDS WERE CLOSED

SYRACUSE TAKING PRECAUTIONS TO PREVENT SPREAD OF DISEASE.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 17—All the city playgrounds, swimming pools and public parks were closed to children today in an effort to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis which has been spreading in this section during the past week.

This action was taken at the request of the Health Authorities and it is reported will shortly be followed by an edict barring children even from street cars, theatres and other public places.

Health officials are already barring children from county fairs, excursions, picnics and other gatherings.

RESULT OF VOTE NOT YET ANNOUNCED

Announcement of the result of the vote by employes of the Syracuse, Lake Shore and Northern lines was not made today as expected because of the delay in receiving the results of the vote of the men on the Oswego city lines. It will probably be made known late tonight or tomorrow. Indications are that the vote will favor the adoption of the agreement.

Terms of the new pact with the railroad have not been made public and will not be given out until the counting of the ballots have been completed and then perhaps only in case the answer is an affirmative one.

All the men employed on the Lake Shore Division have passed their opinion on the agreement.

HEALTH INSTRUCTIONS

FURNISHED BY CITY CLERK ADKINS FOR THE GUIDANCE OF FULTON CITIZENS.

In view of the fact that this city is at the present time among those having cases of infantile paralysis, the following facts in regard to the disease have been summarized by the City Clerk's office from reports and communications from the State Department of Health and elsewhere, for those wishing to use their influence toward the prevention of the spreading of the disease.

"This special form of paralysis is a disease of the spinal cord or its extension into the brain. Eighty-six per cent. of the victims are under the age of five years. The disease is contracted by a person, susceptible to it, receiving into the nose and throat of persons ill with the disease, convalescent from it, or, who are healthy "carriers" of disease germs by direct contact or through the intermediary of fingers, household utensils, handkerchiefs, towels or possibly household pets and flies. When the organism has once gained access to the nose or mouth, it grows rapidly and soon invades the brain or spinal cord through small passages in the upper part of the nasal cavity. The walls of the blood vessels supplying the nerve cells are invaded, their calibre constricted and the blood supply of the nerve cells partially or wholly cut off, resulting in the degeneration of the nerve cells and the corresponding nerves, together with paralysis of the muscles through which the nerves are distributed.

1—When symptoms appear in a person of your family, summon a physician immediately. Keep other members away from the affected person.

2—Protect your family by sending the patient to a hospital, if the family physician approves of this course. If hospital accommodations are not available, the patient must be isolated at home, as your physician and Health Officer will direct.

3—If the child is attending school, you should notify the principal of the school. If the child has recently been to Sunday School notify the Sunday School teacher so that she can inform the parents of other children that may have been exposed. If the patient is employed, the employer should be informed.

4—Complete isolation of the patient for six weeks must be maintained and those who have been in contact with the patient must be isolated and under observation for two weeks.

5—The proper disposal of the discharges from the nose and throat, not only of the patient, but of all in isolation, is of the greatest importance in preventing the spread of the disease. Pieces of cloth should be provided in abundance to receive all such discharges. The cloths after using should be placed in a paper bag and subsequently burned. Treatment with carbolic acid is not effective. Excreta from the bowels must also be treated with boiling water for fifteen minutes before being deposited in a privy vault. The hands of attendant should be frequently washed with soap and water and thoroughly rinsed.

6—It is often difficult to keep the children in isolation during convalescence unless something is available to occupy their minds. A pamphlet on the subject, "Amusements for Convalescent Children" may be obtained from the State Department of Health, Albany, N. Y., on receipt of a two cent stamp.

7—Physicians and Health Officers are required by law to perform certain duties. In the interest of Public Health, parents should give every possible assistance and not cherish ill feelings toward them on account of inconvenience and discomfort which maye be caused by quarantine measures.

[W]MAN'S WORK FOR THE STATE

He Has Consistently Held to Constructive Methods.

AIDED GOOD LEGISLATION.

A Brief Resume of Some of the Accomplishments of the Chief Executive of the State, Who Is Now a Candidate For Renomination and Re-election. Corrected Evils Created by Democrats.

The administration of Governor Charles S. Whitman has been marked by as great advancement in constructive government as that of any other Chief Executive in the history of the State, and this has been accomplished following four years of Democratic misrule, which, with scandals and impeachment, had well nigh demoralized every branch of State activity. Governor Whitman's service, therefore, has been one not only of conspicuous upbuilding, but before that could be begun, there was placed upon him the burden of the restoration of the government rom a condition of administrative and financial wreck which the two preceding administrations had left behind.

The record of his administration is remarkable for many reasons, the most significant of which perhaps is that. while fully assuming all of the duties and burdens of his office and at no time shirking any responsibility or obligation, he has performed all these duties without a single mistake or error of judgment so far as good government was involved. He has the unblemished record of considering solely the public interest and acting only for the public good. No other consideration has affected his judgment nor colored his public acts.

A Man of Action.

His reputation as champion of the people and a man who never feared to do right was established by his public acts long before he was chosen as Chief Executive. Essentially a man of action, he has gone about the work before him with clear ideas of what he proposed to accomplish, but regarding as discreditable the methods too often followed by men in public life of attempting to get a reputation for accomplishment by filling the newspapers with promises of things to be done in the future.

He has been content to follow the inconspicuous course of devoting his energies to accomplishments, leaving the results to speak for themselves. That this program of quiet, unostentatious and earnest work appeals more strongly than any other to the people is indicated by the attitude of our citizens toward Governor Whitman. He has followed the program of doing the right thing all the time, regardless of political expediency, with the result that his party has been thereby strengthened and dignified.

What the Governor Says.

In this connection it is interesting to note Governor Whitman's own point of view with regard to the methods and purposes of his work as indicated by the following extracts from his speech before the Associated Manufacturers and Merchants of New York State, at Syracuse, in which he said:

"I have been criticised. I know, for the lack of the dramatic and the picturesque I have been told that I have not been exciting enough as a Governor. Even while pleading guilty to the charge, in some sort of extenuation, let me offer the fact that the pursuit of efficiency and of economy does not contain any large amount of drama or of color. It is a mean, slow, painstaking job, full of pettiness, heart-burnings and disappointments, rich in enmities, rather barren in friendships, with moments when one wishes to high heaven that he had been born without ambition and with furious moment when one desires a lifetime of health and strength to fight the task to victory.

"People Alone Eternal."

"It is not of myself, however, that I choose to speak, and if in this brief consultation for the common good there is an appearance of self laudation, I beg you to believe that my sole purpose is the stimulation of a larger, keener and more continuous interest in those affairs that have to do with human lives and human hopes. Governors are incidents—the people alone are eternal. * * *

"Another matter, to which I want briefly to refer, is the problem that presents itself to every public servant on the very day of his appointment or his election. Shall he put a party above the people? Shall he contribute his efforts to the upbuilding of the party or the building up of the State? Shall he abide by the oath which he has taken or by the decisions of a few who know what they want and who may have the power to punish when they do not get what they want.

"I am in no sense ashamed of my allegiance to the Republican party, but the man who puts the interest of the party above the interest of the State is working injury in the end to both."

Much of the credit for the accomplishments of his administration the Governor himself insists properly belongs to the department heads whom he selected because of their fitness for the respective positions, but even they would have been powerless without his constant and steadfast support before the Legislature and elsewhere, and the knowledge forced upon department employees that these men represented the policies of the Governor, which policies must be carried out.

Advocated Preparedness.

Governor Whitman took an early stand for National and State preparedness. Within the area of his official influence, namely, the State, he contributed more to that propaganda than any other Governor who preceded him. Several months before the call for troops to the Mexican border, realizing as he did the importance of a test of the ability of the whole National Guard to mobilize at one time and place, he secured a special State appropriation of half a million dollars for a National Guard mobilization, and Camp Whitman was already being prepared therefor when the call to arms came. Instead of this fund, therefore, being used merely for a test of the Guard, it became a resource for preparing the Guard for active service. His law for military training is also a feature of his program for preparedness.

He began his campaign for reform of State finances early in his administration, in the face of the most adverse conditions that had ever existed in the State and has carried them well on to completion.

The sole test which he has applied in selecting appointees to public office has been fitness for the duties of office.

Sound Action on Legislation.

His action with respect to all legislation submitted to him has been sound, judicial and solely in the public interest. There is not one legislative bill which he has signed concerning which there has been a word of just criticism; no veto of his has been criticised except by those whose selfish interests were injured by his failure to approve.

He has fought the battle for prison reform and made secure its future rapid advancement.

He has reorganized and strengthened that department of government, the Industrial Commission the sole duty of which is the protection of the working men and women of the State, and has stood steadfast against any legislation unfavorable to their welfare.

He has stood firmly on the proposition that the insane, crippled and other helpless dependents of the State shall be properly housed and cared for.

As to State Debts.

He has insisted that the State must pay its honest debts and must carry to completion those great works, which, whether advisedly or otherwise, have been begun and already represent an enormous investment of public money.

He has taken the Civil Service out of politics and compelled appointments and promotions, under the Civil Service Law, to be made solely on the basis of merit and fitness.

He has driven scandals and crooked contractors out of the Highway Department and established in it an administration which has used fairly and economically the great appropriation of the Department for the benefit of the State as a whole, and not as an instrument for paying political debts.

He has taken the great canal system of the State out of politics and put it upon a business basis, through the force and energy of his appointee in charge of it, and made available for use during this administration a large part of the State investment in this enterprise, dormant for years because of mismanagement and inefficiency.

Extended Health Department.

He has given energetic support to the extension of the activities of the Health Department to the rural communities of the State, which is possible only through a powerful centralized State agency of this sort. He favored and approved an authorization of $100,000 for the construction of a modern laboratory for the Department which will place at the disposal of these rural communities the same advantages enjoyed by the city of New York through its own highly organized and costly local department.

He reorganized the Conservation commission in a single headed department and for the purpose of bringing about much needed administrative reform and advancement of its activities, obtained for its headship a man who, while distinguished for his successful administration of extensive business interests, is also a trained expert in forestry and keenly appreciative of the importance of the Department to the welfare of the State.

Aided the Farmers.

In the field of agriculture, Governor Whitman appointed a trained expert at the head of the Department of Agriculture, who has widely extended the usefulness of the Department. The Governor's support of the agricultural schools, the farm bureaus, farm schools and State Fair projects has been continuous and productive of great benefits to the farming industry of the State. Governor Whitman corrected at the outset of his administration one of the greatest wrongs which has ever been perpetrated against the farmers of the State, namely, the failure for years at a time to provide reimbursement for the losses of farmers for the killing of their livestock to prevent the spread of disease. In the first year of his administration Governor Whitman approved an appropriation of $780,112.25 for the payment of these claims, of which $432,722 was for claims from one to five years old, and in the budget of 1916, appropriation was made to pay up the approved claims in the Department of Agriculture up to the first of March of the present year to the amount of $240,814.95, making a total of over a million dollars for this purpose in two years, representing the payment of neglected claims, many of them extending back over a period of several years.

He has vigorously supported the Department of Education in the development of all activities under its jurisdiction.

Through the Department of Architecture he has investigated all requests for the construction, improvement or repair of State buildings, and through the efficient management of the Department, has assured the performance of all work of this character for the State under conditions which have eliminated crooked contract work, and obtained full value for the State appropriations used.

GRAFT IN THE ORIENT.

An Incident That Illustrates the Way of the Far East.

I had had experience with corruptible Turkish officers, and one day when barrack conditions became unendurable I went to the officer commanding our division, an old Arab from Latakieh who had been called from retirement at the time of the mobilization. He lived in a little tent near the mosque, where I found him squatted on the floor nodding drowsily over his comfortable paunch. As he was an officer of the old regime, I entered boldly, squatted beside him and told him my troubles. The answer came with an enormous shrug of the shoulders.

"You are serving the sultan. Hardship should be sweet."

"I should be more fit to serve him if I got more sleep and rest."

He waved a fat hand about the tent.

"Look at me! Here I am, an officer of rank and"—shooting a knowing look at me—"I have not even a nice blanket."

"A crime! A crime!" I interrupted. "To think of it, when I, a humble soldier, have dozens of them at home! I should be honored if you would allow me"— My voice trailed off suggestively.

"How could you get one?" he asked.

"Oh, I have friends here in Saffet, but I must be able to sleep in a nice place."

"Of course. Certainly. What would you suggest?"

"That hotel kept by the Jewish widow might do," I replied.

More amenities were exchanged, the upshot of which was that my four friends and I were given permission to sleep at the inn—a humble place, but infinitely better than the mosque. It was all perfectly simple.—Alexander Aaronsohn in Atlantic Monthly.

MILLION ACRE FARMS.

Those Are the Kind, as a General Rule, They Have In Mexico.

In the United States the farmer is a humble person. In Mexico he is a king of millionaires. You look out across a level plain and you see a magnificent house of stone, cement and great timbers, covering sometimes as much as half an acre. Surrounding it are other houses, hundreds of them, but all small, constructed of adobe, brush or even of cane stalks. You are not looking at a town, but at a ranch settlement. In the great house, which costs many times more than all the little houses put together, live the haciendado and his family. In the little houses live the peons.

The typical farm in Mexico is not of 100 acres, but of 1,000,000. In the state of Morelos twenty-eight haciendados own all the agricultural lands; twelve own nine-tenths of them. The territory of Quintana Roo, double the size of Massachusetts, is divided among eight companies. The greater portion of the state of Yucatan is held by thirty men, kings of sisal hemp. A major fraction of the agricultural and grazing lands of Chihuahua is owned by one family. Lower California, equal in size to Alabama, is nearly all held by five great corporations.

The 1,000,000 acre farms lie mostly fallow. Naturally a rich agricultural country, Mexico does not produce enough corn and beans to feed her own peon population. Modern machinery is needed, but modern machinery will never be used extensively so long as the peon is so cheap that primitive methods are cheaper than machine methods.—World Outlook.

Drum Fire and Curtain Fire.

"Drum fire" and "curtain fire" are modern war terms. "Drum fire" is the firing of artillery at stated intervals, the resultant noise being described as like the steady hammering of a great drum. When the desired effect of reducing the point of the attack has been accomplished the guns are elevated to a higher point and are fired continuously, making a "curtain of fire" to prevent re-enforcements reaching the point of attack from the rear and at the same time allowing the infantry to attack under protection of the guns.

Practical Religion.

The story is told of a little housemaid, far over the sea, who, when asked whether she realized that she was in any way different after uniting with the church from what she had been before, thought for an instant and then, smiling brightly, said, "Well, I sweep the corners." She could hardly have given a better demonstration of the reality of her religious life.—Christian Herald.

Not So Far Wrong.

"Have you written all the invitations to my party, mamma?" queried little Eva.

"Yes, dear," answered her mother. "They are all written and mailed."

"And how soon will the acceptions and deceptions begin to come in?"—Chicago News.

Work of a Beacon.

There is a flashing beacon on Richardson rock, a wave swept spot west of the Santa Barbara islands, California which, without attention, will flash its warnings every three seconds for seven months, or over 6,000,000 flashes, before it requires recharging with gas.—Argonaut.

All Sorts.

"How's this—seven different styles of plug hats?"

"The line officers of our lodge. Each bought a plug hat the year he was elected."—Kansas City Journal.

To dread no eye and to suspect no tongue is the greatest prerogative of innocence.—Dr. Johnson.

"PRESIDENCY" BOOK

NOW READY

Contains Facts, Figures, Dates and Data About All Past And Present Elections

SETTLES ELECTION ARGUMENTS INSTANTLY

If you want to know how the political "machine" works; if you want to know the "strength" of each state; if you want to know how your state and other states have voted during the past twenty-five or thirty years—in other words, if you want to know a hundred and one different things about politics that the "other fellow" doesn't know, you have only to secure a copy of "The Presidency of the United States" and all of this desirable information will be yours.

This little book has been compiled by experts at great expense, and the information it contains is absolutely reliable and strictly non-partisan. It is not only intensely interesting but has a distinct educational value that makes it desirable for school children as well as for grown-ups.

"The Presidency of the United States" will be used by thousands of people this year as a quick and ready reference for information on all past and present elections, and as "final authority" for settling all election arguments and disputes.

The ability to answer correctly the questions this book contains indicates a more intimate knowledge of past history and current events than is possessed by the average citizen. Many a surprise is in store for anyone who thinks to do so without "brushing up."

We were fortunate in securing a supply of these books for immediate delivery. If you want one you can secure a copy at this office for "only ten cents."

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," was the favorite saying of old David Crockett. Those who believe in this motto will find in "The Presidency of the United States" an abundant supply of historical facts and non-partisan information upon which to base their statements and arguments during the 1916 presidential campaign.

Secure your copy at this office right away before the supply is exhausted. tf

MR. HUGHES HAS EXPLODED THE "KEPT US OUT OF WAR" ARGUMENT.

Mr. Hughes' attack upon the "kept-us-out-of-war" argument has aroused a storm of enthusiasm.

"Kept us out of war?" he demands. "Why, there were nineteen men—good American soldiers, shot down at Vera Cruz, and many Mexicans were killed by our men. That was war. Moreover, it was a very ignoble war. I have heard three explanations of the Vera Cruz move.

"First, it was explained that it was made in order to compel somebody to salute the flag—somebody who had insulted us. But the flag was not saluted and has not been to this day. Then it was said that the salute was not what we sought, but to prevent the landing of a boatload of ammunition intended for Huerta. The ammunition landed, however, and it has been shown that it reached Huerta in due season without interference on our part.

"When that reason was shown to be untenable a third one—and possibly the real one—finally was advanced. It was said that our seizure of Vera Cruz was a move to compel the retirement of Huerta. It seems possible that this is true, although we had promised the Mexicans that we would not interfere in their affairs and told them more than once that we wanted them to handle their own affairs.

"That is why the Mexicans could not understand us and that is why they show little faith in our promises."

WE WANT THE AMERICAN FLAG UNSULLIED.

"Now, my friends, we want not only American efficiency in business, in efficiency in the organization of business, in the protection of the factors of human industry and commerce, we want the American flag unsullied and the American name honored throughout the world."—From Mr. Hughes' speech at Chicago.

MANANA

Manana, which is Mexican for "watchful waiting," is the Democratic keynote in the campaign. The Wilson drive is to begin "sometime" after September 1; but no definite engagements have been made, it is announced, for him to commence making political speeches. He has tentative engagements to make some Western visits about the middle of September but nothing positive. Plans are being formulated for carrying on a campaign to capture the woman vote of the country, but who will make the speeches on this phase of the controversy has not been determined. It had been expected that Mr. Bryan would speak in the Maine campaign, but it is now believed he cannot do so, but will make some speeches later. And so it goes. Watchful waiting will prevail while, in the meantime, Mr. Hughes is carrying on a positive campaign and arousing the entire Western country.

WILSON'S POLICIES BLOWN UP.

Charles Evans Hughes did have explosives with him when his motor car was searched by a Canadian soldier, but they were under the candidate's hat. Mr. Hughes will set them off on his Western tour and some of Mr. Wilson's policies will be blown up.—New York Sun.

MORTON'S GREAT SHOWING.

Cleveland Pitcher Should Rank Among Leaders.

In discussing the leading pitchers of the land very few have entered the name of Guy Morton among the elect. Yet if the Cleveland club maintains its morale Morton will likely be ranked with Walter Johnson before the year is out.

Morton calls Vernon, Ala., his home. He is over six feet, weighs 178 pounds and was twenty-three years old June 1. He joined the Cleveland club late in 1914, and despite the poor aspect of that organization then he won nine games and lost but five. Last year, working with the disintegrated Cleveland machine, Morton won sixteen games and lost fifteen, permitting only a trifle above two runs to the game.

When Cleveland began to absorb class in the spring and develop power Morton started in to institute a reign of terror. He has already rolled back the Tigers, White Sox, Browns and Red Sox with his invaluable stuff. Today there isn't a harder pitcher in the country to beat, and he is only twenty-three. If this Cleveland slabman doesn't prove to be another Johnson Mathewson or Alexander the dope is false.

PRIVATE GOLF COURSES.

Increasing, but Several Are of Less Than Thousand Yards.

Miniature and privately owned golf courses are increasing in number throughout the country. Several of the former laid out this season run less than a thousand yards, but afford excellent facilities for the little group of enthusiasts who play over them at every opportunity.

The privately owned courses compare favorably with the average big club links, but naturally are restricted to very wealthy golfers who can afford to pay for large stretches of land, laying out of courses and the upkeep of the same.

The Laughing Hyena.

Although the hysterical laughter of the laughing hyena is not, as was once supposed, the outcome of a deliberate attempt to decoy unwary travelers to their doom, this strange animal is, nevertheless, one of the most cunning of dumb animals. He is so suspicious of everything he does not understand that the sight of even a bit of string at once puts him on his guard. Trappers are aware of this fact and generally use the stems of creeping plants instead of string of any kind in setting their spring traps.

What Housewives Are Glad to Know

Home Cookery

Jelly Cake With Nut Filling.

Make the cake as usual and just before rolling fill with a stiff fudge icing made by boiling together two cupfuls of brown sugar, a cupful of sweet milk, lump of butter the size of an egg and a teaspoonful of vanilla when done. Boil until it is thick without scorching and then beat as you do fudge. Just before it threatens to get too hard turn in a cupful of nut meats of any kind and spread on the warm cake. Roll and slice with a hot knife.

Calf's Liver En Casserole.

The liver should be left whole, weighing two pounds. Lard with strips of salt pork. Place in the casserole on a layer of chopped vegetables, using a cupful of celery, one-half cupful each of turnip, carrot and onion (all measured after chopping) and a little parsley. Surround with the same, add a scant teaspoonful salt, one-fourth as much pepper and a cupful of hot water. Cover and cook in a moderate oven for one hour.

White Turnips and Peas.

Select white turnips the size of apples, as round as possible. Peel carefully and cut off a slice at the bottom so they will rest firmly on a plate. Then scoop out the center and boil in salt water, being careful not to let them get so well done that they will fall apart. Fill the center with cooked peas and serve on a small, round plate with a little doily beneath the turnip cups.

Stewed Lambs' Hearts.

Trim and soak hearts in cold water. Make a dressing of breadcrumbs seasoned with onion, herbs, salt and pepper. Drain the hearts, stuff with the dressing and skewer the top to close the opening. Put in a stewpan, half cover with boiling water, cover the pan and put in the oven to simmer slowly until tender. Thicken the gravy, flavor with table sauce, boil up and serve.

Blueberry Tea Cakes.

One egg, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, salt, one-third of a cupful of shortening, one and a half cupfuls of sweet milk, one and a half teaspoonfuls of soda, two teaspoonfuls of cream tarter, rounded a little; three cupfuls of flour and, lastly, one pint of blueberries.

Red Raspberry Muffins.

Two cupfuls of flour, a pinch of salt, one cupful of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one egg. Stir well and add, last of all, one cupful of red raspberries. Bake in muffin tins in a hot oven.

An Aeroplane Mouse.

Washing Fluid.

One ten cent box of potash, 10 cents' worth of salts of tartar, 5 cents' worth of dry ammonia, one gallon of water. Dissolve the potash in the water, set on the stove and let come to boiling heat. When partly cold stir in the salts of tartar and ammonia. Put in a jug well corked. Use one-half of a cupful to a boiler of cold water in which a cake of hard laundry soap has been cut. Wet the clothes first, put in the boiler and let come to boil. No rubbing is necessary. This will not injure the finest fabric.

Paring Knife Waste.

A dull paring knife will waste enough in one season to offset the cost of many good ones. Every thick potato peeling represents an inexcusable waste. One or two good paring knives should be a part of the equipment of every kitchen.

Natty Neckwear a Fall Feature

Interesting "fixings" for the neck were never so charming nor individual. There is something piquant and becoming for every kind of blouse and every woman. This picture is of white net, with corners of collar and revers daintily embroidered, edged with val to match the heart shaped drape of the jabot. Design by the Association of American Neckwear Manufacturers.

Choose the Corset With Great Care

Two things should be considered in buying a corset—whether or not it is entirely comfortable and whether or not it gives you a shapely form. If it is not comfortable, by wearing it you may seriously injure your health. If it is not suited to your build it will materially detract from your personal appearance, and it is the duty of all of us to look as well as we can. By this is not meant that we should spend just as much as possible on our clothes. It is not necessarily the woman who spends the most money on her clothes who makes the best appearance. The woman who chooses her clothes thoughtfully with regard to materials, styles and colors will always be well dressed and will appear at her best for the reason that she will have no need to think about her clothes while she is wearing them, but can turn her whole attention to other matters.

A well fitted, comfortable corset has more to do with a woman's appearance than many of us imagine. Discomfort makes ease and grace impossible, and an ill fitting corset will spoil the appearance of a pretty dress.

Kitchen Kinks

Always use ice water when mixing pie crust.

All bacon is improved by having hot water poured over it before frying.

A teaspoonful of vinegar put into homemade candy will prevent it from becoming sticky.

Put plenty of butter into the cake you wish to keep for any length of time.

Ether is a good thing to use for removing grease spots from clothing.

When marking linen handkerchiefs with indelible ink, first starch the handkerchiefs and iron them smooth. They can then be marked clearly.

When making egg custard pies always heat the milk to the boiling point before mixing it with the eggs. The undercrust will always be crisp.

Too many iced drinks are bad in hot weather.

Never use a very hot iron on mohair.

Serving Food In the Sickroom

Food served in the sickroom should be served well. Properly cooked food arranged tastefully on a tray will stimulate appetite.

The things to be considered in serving food for the sick, says Miss Olive Sheets, instructor in domestic science in the Kansas State Agricultural college, are cleanliness, attractiveness, proper preparation of the food and the convenience of the patient.

It is not necessary that the housewife have special equipment for serving the sick, but dainty linens, dishes and silverware should be used. The tray should be light in weight, durable, easily cleaned and attractive in appearance. White enameled papier mache trays are good.

A tray cloth that just fits the tray is to be preferred, but a clean napkin neatly folded will answer the purpose. The dishes on the tray are arranged in the form that will suit the patient and in as attractive a way as possible. Often a color scheme can be carried out in a well cooked menu, and this adds charm to the sickroom meal. A flower or a spray of leaves lends cheer. It is not essential to have flowers from the greenhouse. A daisy from the field or a clover blossom brings a message from the outside that brightens the room.

ASCRIBE BAD WEATHER TO WAR FRONT GUNS

Steamship Officers Convinced Firing Causes Rain and Wind.

Captains and officers of the Atlantic liners trading to New York are firm in the belief that the unusual rains and violent windstorms which have been so frequent this summer are partially due to the continuous firing of the heavy guns on the continent added to the explosions on the sea.

Captain Capper and the officers of the Cunarder Pannonia said the weather in the channel was the worst they had ever experienced at this time of the year, and in London there were not five sunny days the whole of July.

Reports brought from Paris by the officers of the French liner Rochambeau stated that the sun had only shone for three days out of the thirty-one in July, which is usually the sunniest and hottest month of the year at the French capital.

Captains of Italian liners trading to New York from Genoa state that the weather in the Mediterranean instead of being calm and hot is subject to frequent violent windstorms with heavy downpours of rain similar to those which occur in the latitudes of the "doldrums"—that is, ten degrees either side of the equator.

Reports from northern Europe state that the summer weather there is the same as it is in England and France and more resembled March in its boisterous winds and rain than June or July. Russian meteorological statistics show an unusual amount of rain and excessive cold. In Moscow up to the middle of July there had been no sign of summer or of the hot weather which usually sets in before June. In the Scandinavian countries the weather has been as dull, damp and chilly as it has been reported in England.

Southern Germany has been subjected to violent rains, and Lake Constance is abnormally high, according to reports just received. Austria, Hungary and the Balkan provinces, as well as Turkey, have experienced a series of storms all through June and July.

THE COUNTY FAIR IS IN FULL BLAST

Tomorrow Will Be The Last Day

There Will Be Many Special Attractions and Good Racing

Result of Races.

In the 2:20 trot Lancer got first money in three straight heats; Joe Star, second; Hall Hopper third, Earl D. fourth, Violet Patch fifth, Counselor Dome sixth, Pearl Barron seventh, Dick McPherson eighth. Time: 2:19 1-4, 2:19 1-4, 2:21.

Josie Russell took three straight heats in the 2:29 Pace and Trot, Topsy King second, Mobel Simmons third, Mandy Lee fourth, Prince Gayton fifth. Time: 2:28 1-4, 2:21 1-4, 2:23 1-4.

Driver John Youngs, of Chemical wagon No. 1, received first prize at the Fair grounds today. Driver Garnet Alnut, of wagon No. 2, received second premium. This is an annual event with only the fire teams competing.

The second day of the Oswego County Fair opened yesterday morning with ideal weather. About five thousands persons paid admission to the grounds.

The crowd was somewhat disappointed that Governor Whitman was unable to attend, but his place on the programme was filled by Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo, who gave a short address from the bandstand, in front of the grandstand.

The balloon ascension was a success, and the parachute drop was made close to the grounds, as there was no wind to carry the balloon. The other attractions were given as scheduled, and the racing was exciting. There was a large number of persons in the grandstand to witness the first day's programme.

The 2:17 pace and trot for a purse of $250, and the 2:28 pace for a purse of $200 will be held today. There has been eight entries for the later contest, and eighteen for the 2.17 contest.

Owing to the large number of out-of-town visitors attending the fair, the Fire and Police Commission, through Chief E. J. Dyer, has secured the services of a number of out-of-town detectives. Chief among these is Edward Buell of Syracuse. These men will look after pickpockets, and watch for crooks that are known to the police departments of other cities. Already suspicious characters have been brought to the Police Station and ordered out of town.

A SAD ACCIDENT

MARGARET FORAN WAS DROWNED IN RIVER

Margaret Foran, the six year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Foran, of Syracuse, was drowned in the Oswego river at 6:45 o'clock last evening, while playing at the Baudoin boat landing in West First street.

The child was visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clark of West First street. The boat landing, where the littue girl and a small boy by the name of Edward Geis were playing, is about 1,000 feet south of the raceway of the American Woolen Company's plant.

The child was reaching over the docking and in doing so lost her balance and fell into the water.

Fred and Clarence Brown, who were fishing in a boat in the middle of the river, heard the cries and came to the rescue. Both jumped into the water, but were unable to locate the child.

Coroner E. J. Cusick was notified and organized a searching party and the body was found about nine o'clock last night within two feet of the shore. There is a strong undercurrent at this particular place and it was extremely fortunate under the circumstances that the body was located.

The mother and father of little Margaret were in Waterloo where Mr. Foran was conducting a carnival and they were notified by telephone and arrived in the city shortly after midnight.

Margaret was a sweet dispositioned little girl and had endeared herself in the hearts of many friends during her short stay in Fulton, she having come here to visit at the time of Old Home Week.

The funeral will be held from Mr. Clark's home at 506 West First street, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. Rev. Charles Olmstead officiating. Interment will be made in Mount Adnah Cemetery.

They finished their journey home on the trolley. Mrs. Brown lost her purse in the accident.

CHARGED WITH PERJURY

WOMAN ARRESTED UPON COMPLAINT OF HUSBAND

Mrs. Eva Waite, formerly of Adams, was arrested in this city last night by Patrolman Joseph Longhway of the Oswego Police Department on a warrant issued on complaint of her husband, William Waite, charging her with perjury.

It is alleged in the complaint that Mrs. Waite, with John Wheeler Knapp, fifty-one, of No. 503 Erie street, Fulton, on July 10 obtained a marriage license from City Clerk Thomas H. McGinnis of Oswego. In obtaining the license it is alleged she gave her name as Eva Rose Mocher, age thirty-six, and her residence as No. 20 West Bridge street, Oswego.

The complaint alleges that Mr. and Mrs. Waite were married at Watertown on April 26, 1915, and that the ceremony was performed by Rev. Frederick J. Davis, pastor of the Episcopal Church of that city. Mrs. Waite was taken to the Oswego county jail. The warrant was issued by Judge Joseph H. Gill of Oswego.

NEVER STOOD BETTER

A year or so ago everybody was talking about the United States being the hated nation of the earth. It seemed we did not have a friend in any of the foreign countries. Germany and her allies hated us because we were furnishing munitions to the Allies. The Allies hated us because they thought we ought to join their side of the contest against Germany. The neutral nations of Europe envied us because we were so far removed from the struggle that we could profit by it while all of them were suffering on account of it.

But all of that has changed. Today, we stand better abroad than we ever stood. The Germans are finding that we are indeed neutral. The Allies are finding that we are giving them a square deal and nothing more. The neutral nations are finding that we are assisting the stricken people of all nations, and are doing our level best to end the war by encouraging peace.

Then, our diplomats abroad have had an influence. The affairs of the warring nations have been placed in the hands of our representatives. An American somewhere is handling the official business of every nation at war. And in every instance it is being handled properly and with absolute fairness to all concerned. So we have come from the hated nation to the favored nation simply by attending to our own affairs and giving the other fellow a square deal.

In discussing our standing abroad, Mr. Morris, our minister to Sweden, made a statement recently to this effect: "I feel that in both the Scandanavian countries and in the belligerent nations the prestige of the United States was never any higher than it is today." And he is in position to know, and to feel it, for he has been right at his post all of the time and is in touch with the people generally of all of Europe.

All of this ought to be indeed gratifying to Americans. It ought also to close the mouths of those who have been braying that we have been unneutral or that we have not proper diplomats abroad. And it ought also to encourage all of us who some way feel that the United States is to be the leader among the nations, the mightiest political power that has been.

TWO RESULTS

Albert J. Neukon, of Toledo, entered his name in the race for the Republican nomination for state senator. After the ballots were printed he decided that he did not want to make the race, and requested that his name be withdrawn, but it was too late. So he went into the newspapers with display advertisements, and urged the voters to vote against him—"Vote Against Me" is the way some of his advertisements were headed. When the votes were counted Tuesday night it was found that Neukom was nominated.

In Cleveland, John Frey was a candidate for committeeman on the Republican ticket. He died two weeks ago, after the ballots were printed. The committee advertised the fact; all of the newspapers in Cleveland carried the story of his death; circulars were sent out by the candidates who hoped to be elected in his stead. But when the vote was counted it was found that the dead man had been nominated, receiving more votes than all of his competitors combined.

Thus we have a demonstration of the electorate voting for a man who advertised for people to vote against him, and for a dead man. And this in two of our most intelligent cities!

In the first instance, the voters did not take the candidate at his word despite his advertisements. Evidently they wanted him nominated, regardless of whether he desired to make the race or not. It may be that the voters displayed splendid judgment; we are unacquainted with the gentleman in question. But in the second place, nothing but stupidity can account for the voters voting for a dead man.

The people do not take enough interest in their own affairs. They do not pay enough attention to politics. Having the ballot, they do not go to the trouble of using it properly to the extent they should. They take elections too much as a matter of course, and printed names upon the ballot too much as a matter of fiction.

CHINA FREED FROM OPIUM

China is finally freed from opium. She has been struggling to get away from the drug for several years, and has been making headway. But it was not until the other day when Great Britain issued an order that no more opium was to be exported to China that the unhappy nation finally gained the point that will forever banish the drug from her territory, or prevent its importation.

Most of us think of China as the natural home of the opium habit, but the truth is that it was literally forced upon her by the British. At least England encouraged its exportation to China, and even contested China's right to exclude it. British exporters saw to it that the habit was contracted by as many Chinamen as it was possible to corrupt, and the drug was always obtainable by the Chinese people. It was in the long ago, it is true, but it is a dark chapter in English history—this foisting upon a nation a deadly and stupefying drug.

The opium was produced in India and sent to China by British merchantmen. The trade became wonderfully profitable. Great fortunes were built up through it, and the state profited along with the individual merchantmen, so no influence great enough to overcome the influence of those engaged in the trade could be brought to bear upon the authorities to end the horrible traffic.

Some years ago when China herself began legislating to prevent the importation of the drug, the British authorities resented the interference with the trade, claiming that the British merchantmen had a right to sell it to the Chinese merchants. Many conferences followed, and the whole world became interested. But it was not until the other day that Great Britain finally decided to prohibit the exportation of opium from any of her provinces to the Chinese nation.

The act recalls the effective manner in which Japan did away with the use of opium in the island of Formosa, which she obtained at the close of the Japanese-Russian war. When Japan got possession of the island, several million of the inhabitants were addicted to the use of the drug, and its importation and sale was a considerable enterprise. But Japan at once took hold of the matter herself, and controlled the trade. She decreed that every one who used opium must take out a license before a certain date. After that date no licenses would be issued. The drug would be sold only to those having a license entitling them to buy it, and the licenses were not transferable. In other words, she allowed those addicted to the habit to secure it for their personal use, but allowed no one else to acquire the habit. As the opium users died off, the traffic ceased. There are at this time only a little handful of opium users left in the island, and they must apply to a government officer for the drug. No one has acquired the habit since Japan took possession of the island, hence the use of the drug will entirely end with the death of the few remaining victims.

CANADA'S ASSISTANCE

More than three hundred and ten thousand troops have enlisted in Canada since the war began—more than Great Britain had in South Africa during the four years of the Boer war. About two hundred thousand of these troops have been sent across the waters to assist the Allies with the war. Thirty thousand casualties are recorded among the Canadian troops. Surely this showing by the Dominion is one that ought to leave no doubt in the mind of the Britisher as to the value of the country in times of war.

But Canada has been of further assistance to the Allies than in the sending of men to the front. She has helped to feed the people of England and France, and to clothe them. She has lavished money upon equipment and munitions. She has turned all of her industries over to the war department, and is making millions of shells and tons of powder. And she is sending copper and nickel and steel in fabulous amounts to the mother country.

There has not been in evidence at any time the slightest spirit of disloyalty upon the part of Canada. She has met her obligations to the mother country—and more. She has not even complained at the burden. The people are heavily taxed to pay the expenses, they are sending their sons to the front to die, they are working night and day to aid the Allies. And Canada cannot hope to get anything in return; she does not expect anything in return. She has made the sacrifices simply because she felt herself a part of the British empire, and was loyal to that empire. Had she refused to make such sacrifices, England would have been helpless to compel her.

—A faithful wife in her quiet way does a lot of things for her husband that she never gets any credit for, such as making an engagement for him at the dentists.

CHICKEN PARALYZED? HE WANTED TO KNOW

Excited Man Takes Barnyard Patient to Bayonne Doctor.

Bayonne, N. J.—A tall and well dressed man recently walked into the office of Dr. John T. Connelly, city physician here, excited and out of breath. He had a chicken under his arm.

"Doctor, can a chicken have infantile paralysis?"

The doctor looked puzzled and then smiled as the chicken was placed on his desk for examination.

"This chicken has been acting strangely, and I became curious," the visitor continued.

The city physician had been working night and day fighting against the spread of paralysis in Bayonne and had answered many foolish questions, but this one was beyond him.

The expression of the doctor's face was enough for his caller, for he seized the chicken, threw it under his arm and raced from the office without waiting for an answer.

ONE IN EACH 44 PERSONS IN U. S. HAS AN AUTO

2,445,664 Were Registered in 1915, Providing $16,213,387 For Good Roads Work.

Washington.—Motor vehicles registered in the United States numbered 2,445,664 last year, and $18,245,713 was paid by their owners as registration and license fees.

The number of motor vehicles averaged registration for every forty-four persons in the United States. Iowa led with one for every sixteen inhabitants, while in Alabama there was only one for every 200 persons.

BERNSTORFF'S WIFE COMING.

Will Shortly Join German Ambassador. Was an American Girl.

New York.—Countess von Bernstorff, formerly Miss Jeanne Luckmeyer of New York, who has not seen her husband, the German ambassador, since the European war began, is shortly to join him in Washington. She will come to America on the Frederick VIII. early in September.

The countess is the daughter of a naturalized German and has been known to refer with pride to the fact that she was born an American. The family left New York years ago, and the father died in France. While Count von Bernstorff was attached to the German embassy in London his wife became one of the most popular women in the diplomatic corps. She is said to be in high favor with the kaiser.

FERRETS MAKE HIS LIVING.

Grimley Takes Them Around to Rid Farms of Rats.

Kildare, Okla.—A. Grimley of this city has several ferrets, and he makes his living by taking these small animals to some farm and ridding the place of rats at 5 cents a head.

His six ferrets killed 118 rats on one farm in forty minutes recently and are trained to put the rats in a pile outside the building when they catch them.

Mr. Grimley has been following this occupation for several months now and is planning to make trips all over the United States with his animals, making his way as he goes by killing the rats at farmhouses and storage places.

HUMAN EMERGENCY BRAKE.

Big Butcher, Baffled by Levers, Succeeds With His Hands.

Philipsburg, Pa.—Otto Huffman, manager of a meat market, bought an automobile recently and, after making a trial trip and receiving instructions, undertook its management.

All went well until he tried to stop the car. There Otto struck a snag. Just as his predicament was becoming serious the giant butcher brought his strength into play. Leaping out, he seized the car and by sheer strength brought it to a standstill.

Washington.—President Wilson recently appointed Marjorie J. Bloom as postmaster at Devils Lake, N. D. There has been a controversy over the postoffice which has lasted more than a year.

Mrs. Bloom's husband was nominated twice for the office and rejected each time by the senate. Last May H. S. Davies was nominated to the position, but later quit the race.

REPAIR OWN ROADS

When Macon (Mo.) Motorists Find Hole They Fix It.

CALL AID IF JOB IS TOO BIG.

Farmers and City Residents Unite in Keeping Highways Fit by Doing Work Themselves—Harmony Between the Two Brings Good Results.

Macon, Mo.—Macon county is full of patriotic citizens these days who carry hoes to do emergency work on the roads. The hoe, and sometimes a shovel also, is carried behind the motor car, and whenever the public spirited citizen runs into a mudhole or a place which he thinks he can improve with a little work, he gets out and does it. It is considered bad citizenship here to pass over a mudhole without trying to repair it.

Farmers used to smile when the town men talked about working on the roads, but since they have shown so much interest in the matter the farmers welcome them in the all important road work. Of course one man and one hoe can't do any great amount of work, but the man can start on the job, and if he finds it too big to tackle he can give the emergency signal with his motorcar horn, and there are plenty of farmers who will respond to his call and help do the job.

Dr. A. B. Miller, former president of the Macon Good Roads club, leader of "The Man With the Hoe" organization, said:

"The biggest thing the town man with the hoe does on the country road is to convince the farmer that he is really in earnest in this matter of good road work. When the farmer is satisfied that his city brother is going with him he will go to the limit. It means that before long we are going to have in this county such a sentiment as will vote almost unanimously for any proposition that tends to insure roads that will be good all year.

"We are approaching the era of hard surface roads. When we get everybody thinking and approving the road campaign it will be an easy matter to get the money necessary to carry on the work. It is no uncommon thing in driving over the country to see a preacher or a merchant on a highway alone tearing up weeds, shoveling dirt in a mudhole or cleaning out a ditch with a shovel. The work of these volunteer workers is bound to result in a perfect highway system. The fundamental is to get the people firmly decided on a thing and then they will go after it."

TOO SPEEDY FOR JERSEY.

Four Auto License Seekers Caught by Catchy Question.

Ardmore, Pa.—Four young men of this place are "sore." They are testers for an automobile manufacturing concern and they need drivers' licenses in New Jersey. So they went over to the state across the river to take the required examination as to their fitness to serve as chauffeurs on Jersey roads.

"If," one of the questions asked, "you were preceded by a machine going forty miles an hour and holding the middle of the road, on which side would you pass it?"

All four answered that they would hold to the rule of the road and pass on the left.

"In that case," the examiner told them, "we don't want you fellows driving automobiles in New Jersey. Inasmuch as the car in front is exceeding the speed limit by a good deal, you have no right to pass him on any side."

SUFFOCATED IN MUD.

Diver's Head Imbedded in the Ooze of a Pompton Stream.

Pompton, N. J.—His head imbedded in mud, Thomas Mahoney, twenty-two, of New York city, was suffocated under ten feet of water in the Pompton feeder here. Nearly two hours later friends brought the body to the surface.

Four chums saw the youth, an expert swimmer, dive from the bottom of an overturned rowboat. They thought he was swimming under water. Frightened when he failed to come up, they dove for his body, but could not lift it from the muddy bottom until help arrived.

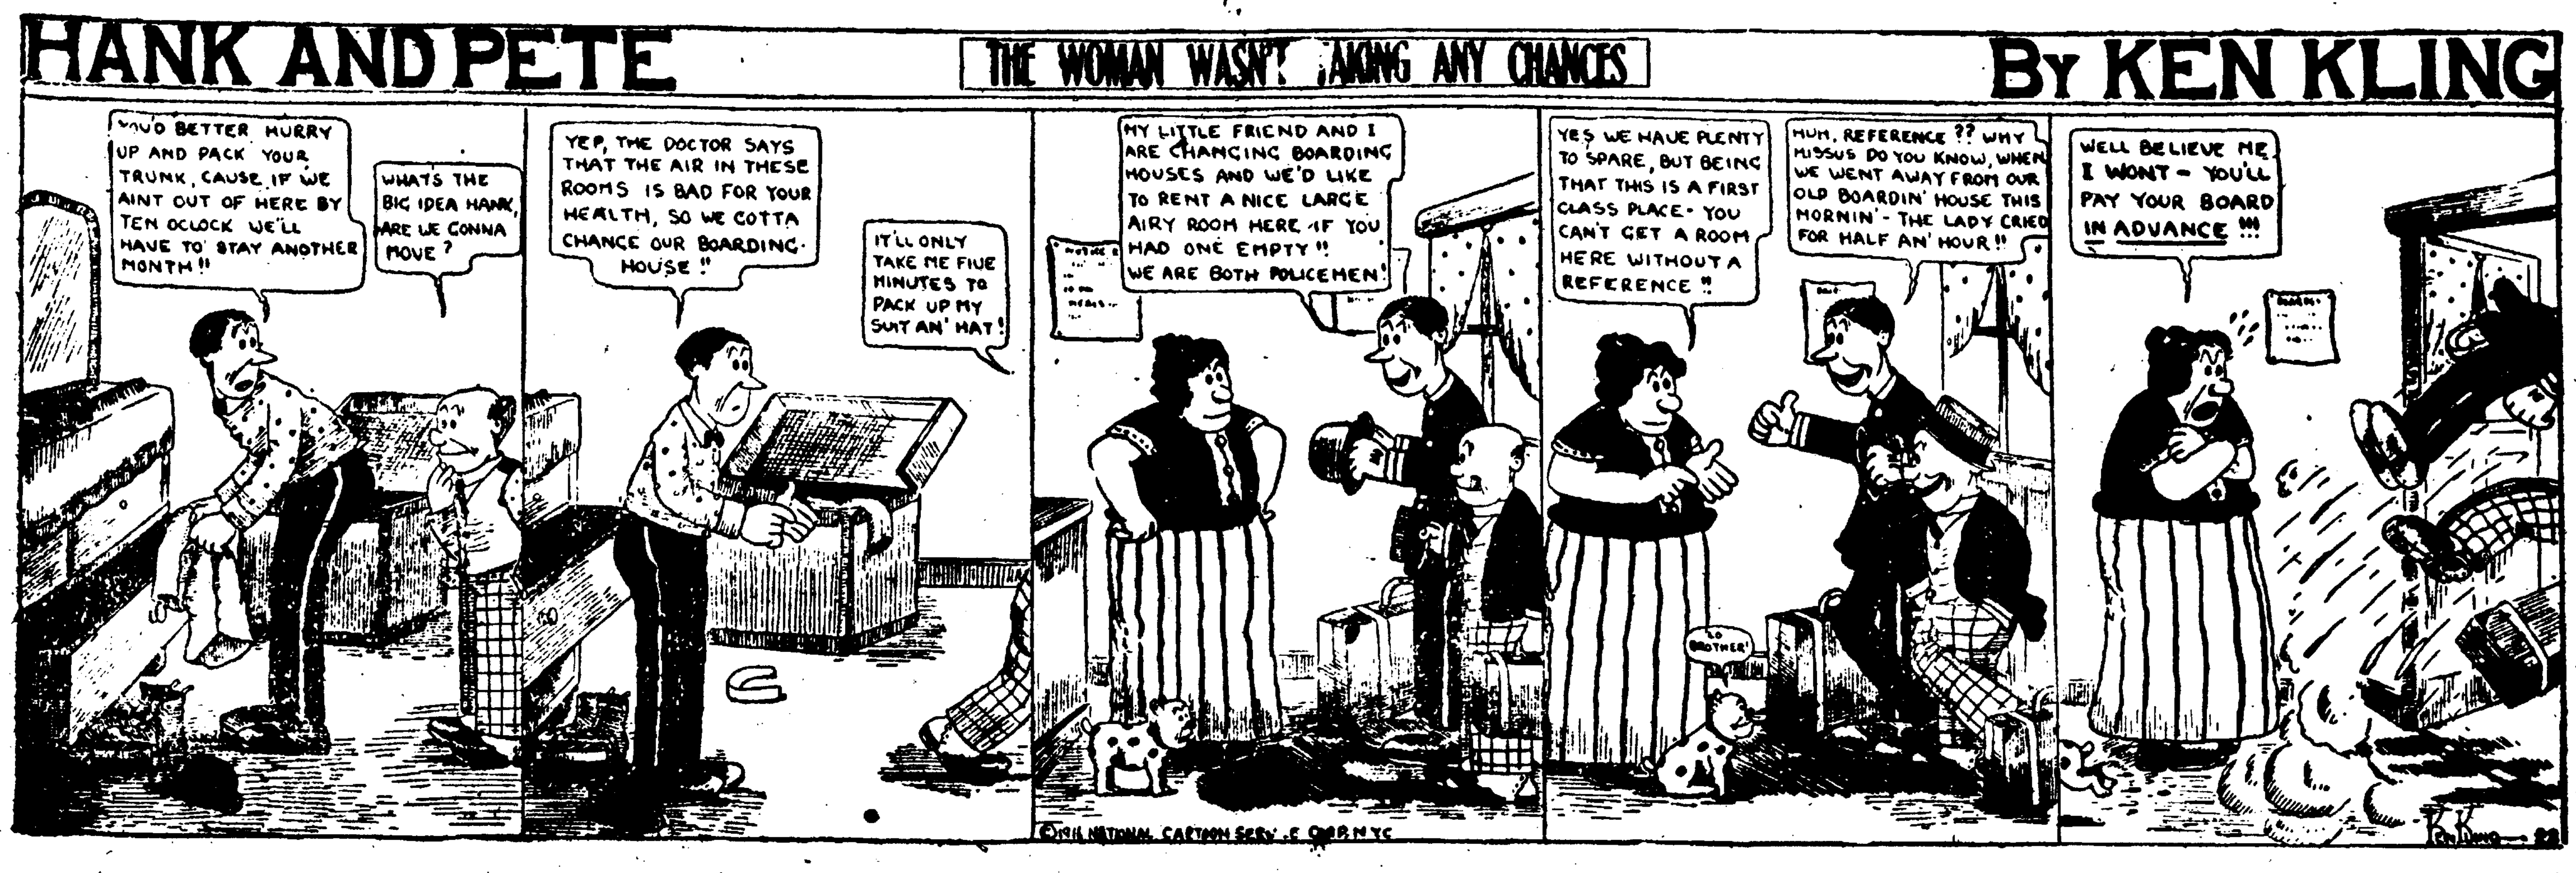
SNAKE HAS INDIGESTION.

Natural That It Should Have, After Swallowing China Eggs.

Middletown, Conn.—When Mrs. Elmer Marvin of North Lyme went to the henhouse recently she saw a blacksnake coiled in a hen's nest. She didn't scream, but reached for the hoe and "went to it." Noticing some protuberances on the reptile, she applied the implement vigorously and, to her surprise, hoed out two china eggs which it had swallowed with half a dozen hen's eggs. The snake seemed stupid and to be suffering from a touch of indigestion.

Women and Pain.

"You women bear pain more heroically than men." "Who told you that—a doctor?" "No; a shoemaker!"



PACIFIC MAIL STEAMSHIP CO. RESUMES ORIENTAL PASSENGER SERVICE

(By United Press)

San Francisco, August 18—The Pacific Mail Steamship Company will resume its Oriental passenger service tomorrow when the oil burning, 10,000 ton steamer "Eduador" gets under way from here for Honolulu, Yokahama, Kobe, Shanghai, Manila and Hong Kong.

The Pacific Mail company quit the trans-Pacific trade when the seamen's law became effective, on the theory that the law imposed too many hardships on the steamship companies for the trade to be a paying proposition. But ith freight bringing $20 a ton because of the war shortage of ships the company was soon reorganized.

As the new ships are oil burners they do away with the picturesque but uncomfortable process of taking on coal at Oriental ports. Travellers probably will be gload to change the romance of this spectacle for the more prosaic act of taking in oil. Oil is taken in much as water. A long procession of orientals used to load the ships with coal from handbaskets, also loading the passengers' eyes, ears, noses, throats and luggage with a lot of coal dust.

RILEY MAD GOOD MONEY SOMETIMES

Cleveland, August 18—Robert McLaughlin, playwright, who visited James Whitcome Riley at his home in Indianapolis shortly before the Hoosier poet's death tells the following:

"A young woman hustled up and introduced herself to Mr. Riley at Palm Beach.

"'Oh Mr. Riley', she said, 'I enjoy your poems so much, I'm told you get $50 a word for them. Isn't it just grand to make so much money?'

"'It is,' agreed the poet, 'but think how many days I have to sit around without selling a single word.''

THE FEEDING OF DAIRY COWS

Government experts claim that feeding a dairy cow is more or less like running a factory. In the latter some of the power goes into maintenance of the machinery, and all above the necessary operating power goes into production. That is the case with dairy cows, experts say. All the food she consumes above her maintenance need goes into milk, and the more food a cow consumes above a fixed ration, the greater quantity available for production. It is wise then, to feed liberally, and up to the full capacity of the cow. Farmers' Bulletin, No. 743, on "The Feeding of Dairy Cows" has just been issued by the Department of Agriculture, and is a valuable treatise on this subject, and in addition to explaining theory and practice followed by the big dairymen of the country, it contains several recipes for soft feeds which are valuable in themselves. Representative Luther W. Mott, of Oswego, will be glad to send a copy of the bulletin to all who write to him and ask for one.

FARMERS TO ORGANIZE TO GET GOOD SPRING WHEAT PRICES

(By United Press)

Fargo, N. D., August 18—Spring wheat growers through both the Dakotas and Minnesota tomorrow will confer here on a plan to combine and demand what they consider legitimate prices for their grain.

O. S. Morris of the editorial department of the Non Partisan - Leader, Fargo, will be one of the speakers. The Leader is the organ of the Farmers' Party that recently swept North Dakota in a political primary victory.

"Each raiser of spring wheat will get a chance to tell of the cost of production of spring wheat," said Morris today. "We shall then add a reasonable profit and arrive at a reasonable price per bushel. When that price isn't paid, farmers will be equipped to store the wheat a sufficient length of time to command the proper price. Discrimination must be stopped.

ONE KILLED, SIX HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Oneida, August 18—Walter L. Whitney, forty-nine, well known business man of this city, was instantly killed when an automobile driven by Dr. Frank C. Drake of Oneida overturned when the machine went over an embankment one mile west of North Bay yesterday afternoon. Five others in the car were more or less injured, one probably fatally.

The injured:

Dr. F. C. Drake, sixty, Oneida, cut and bruised about the head.

Benjamin Garvin, thirty-six, Oneida, bruised about the face and body.

Miss Theresa Griesner, injuries to back, broken hip and internally hurt; probably will die.

Miss Margaret Jeffers, left arm broken, at wrist and elbow.

Miss Mary Greeley, bruises.

Miss May Keiser, bruises and minor injuries.

The young girls are residents of Schenectady and had been spending their vacation at the Sylvan Home, Sylvan Beach.

SYRACUSE AUTO CLUB PARADE

Mayor V. C. Lewis received an invitation today from the Syracuse Auto Club to participate in the automobile parade. The event is given under the nameof "Sac-Buster Day" and classifications have been made for the entrance of cars.

Mayor Lewis turned the matter over to R. L. McCully, president of the local club, who is endeavoring to secure a list of Fultonians desiring to make the trip. A trophy valued at forty dollars will be awarded the town, village or city appearing in the greatest number with or without decorations.

President McCully is very desirous of obtaining a list of entries to compete in this event.

INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE HERE

The Industrial committee of the Chamber of Commerce has as their guests today two representatives of a manufacturing concern now located in the state of New Jersey.

A thorough inspection was made by these men with a view of locating in this city. The nature of the concern is clothing manufacture and should the natural facilities of this city induce them to locate here, palmy days would again prevail.

No definite decision could be learned from the committee.

THE MOVIES AT FULTON

PHOTOGRAPHS BEING TAKEN AT THE FAIR TODAY

Little Bo-peep has lost her sheep,
And can't find them anywhere;
It inside the gates she'd take a peep,
She'd see them at Fulton Fair.

Because all of the Fairies, with Mother Goose, the Old Woman who Lived in the Shoe, Jenny Wren, Baa, Baa, Black Sheep, and the whole population of Elfin Land, are out at the Fair today being photographed by the Comera Man for the Fairy Tales Film Company.

These films will be produced and then shown at the Quirk under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Lee Memorial Hospital of Fulton. Every beautiful scene in about Fulton will be shown on the motion picture screen, every live business house will be visited by Old Mother Hubbard in search of relief for her dog and the most beautiful faces of the coming belles, as well as those who are now reigning, will take their part in telling the story of "The Fairies at Fulton Fair."

The Fairy Tales Film Company's scenario man has written a real picture play for presentment at Fulton, filled with dramatic situations, ingenious comedy, and fantastic appeals. And the whole will be made so artistically attractive as to be of equal interest to the child and the adult.

It needs only to mention the names of Mrs. George Gibbs, Mrs. David Lipsky, and an even hundred other leaders in social affairs in Fulton, to indicate the value of the work being done by the Fairy Tales Film Company for Fulton—for all of the ladies connected with the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Lee Memorial Hospital are the patronesses of the play that is to be —"The Fairies at Fulton Fair."

Look for the page advertisement in this paper, telling of the day of the exhibition at the Quirk, giving all information as to the sale of tickets for the entertainment—this advertisement is a picture in itself, showing the Fairy Ring, Old Mother Goose, the Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe—and the shoe itself as big as a house.

If the civic interest of Fulton will arise to the occasion, we will have something unique in the way of a record and monument of local activities.

The headquarters of the Fairy Tales Film Company in Fulton will be the Quirk Theatre; and it will be pleased to meet or hear from any, all, who feel a call to help the good work. A prize of fifty dollars, gold, will be given to the writer of the best Fairy Story with local scenes—in later issues of this paper full particulars as to the contest will be given.

Keep this in mind—your efforts are to be useful to and for your own town institution—the Lee Memorial Hospital.

EXPERTS WILL HAVE BETTER FACILITIES

STATE HEALTH DEPARTMENT OPENS PARALYSIS LABORATORY ON LONG ISLAND.

(By United Press)

Roslyn, L. I., August 18—Completing arrangements to give Long Island the most adequate facilities with which to meet the epidemic of infantile paralysis, Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, has opened at Roslyn, a branch office of the State Department of Health, to be maintained until the epidemic is under control. A furnished house has been placed at the disposal of the department and a staff of scientific experts will be located in this office.

Prominent citizens of Roslyn, including Henry D. Walbridge, Frank Bailey and Willard D. Straight, are aiding the State Health Department in providing funds for the maintenance of the office. Free advice and consultation to all residents of Long Island on the subject of infantile paralysis will be provided and laboratory facilities will enable physicians to have examinations made quickly to assist in the diagnosis of suspicious cases.

Dr. George Draper, formerly of the Rockefeller Hospital in New York, is in active charge of the office at Roslyn. Dr. Fort W. Caldwell, formerly assistant to Surgeon General Gorgas in the Panama Canal Zone, and now superintendent of the Allegheny General Hospital in Pittsburg, will direct the sanitary work. Dr. W. H. Youland of the State Laboratory Staff will be in charge of the diagnostic work. Four other physicians, chosen for their familiarity and experience with infantile paralysis, will be detailed to the Roslyn office.

STATE AUTHORITIES ELIMINATE FOUR GRADE CROSSINGS AND MODIFY A FIFTH.

(By United Press)

Albany, August 18—Through the construction of a new county highway by the State highway department the Public Service Commission, second district, has been enabled to do away with four grade crossings and divert traffic from the fifth in Delhi, where within a short distance the present road crosses the tracks of the New York, Ontairo and Western railroad five times.

The new road will be built north of the tracks. All parties interested agreed that $12,000 worth of paving only should be charged against the elimination project, all over that amount to be paid for by the highway commission.

In addition to the elimination of the crossings the order of the commission provides that plans shall be submitted for the modification of ten private farm crossings within the elimination area.

COLLECTED ON DEALER'S BOND

LAW PROTECTING FARMER'S PRODUCTS IN MERCHANT'S HANDS IN OPERATION.

(By United Press)

Albany, August 18—Never again will the New York state farmer lose on unpaid farm products in the hands of merchants who go bankrupt. State Agriculture Commissioner Charles S. Wilson today has the first case under the amended law bonding commission merchants, to his credit. He collected on the merchant's bond and paid the farmers. In this case a New York city house went bankrupt. The department collected $3,178 on the bond. Checks were sent to the farmer creditors, most of whom live in the Hudson River district. Thirty-one checks were mailed, the amounts paid varying from $1,599 to $2.74.

The department of agriculture is doing its best to safeguard the producer who sends his products to commission merchants or dealers. The law provides that all commission merchants must obtain licenses and file bonds.

When the law became effective it was not well understood and there was some opposition on the part of the commission men to complying with it, but recently this has disappeared.

EVERY DROP HE CAN SPARE

HEALTH DEPARTMENT WORKER OFFERS BLOOD FOR PARALYSIS VICTIMS.

(By United Press)

Albany, August 18—Physicians of the State Department of Health today declared that they believe in the blood treatment of victims of infantile paralysis.

It has been shown that when a person recovers from this disease he is immune for the remainder of his life. Immune particles take their place in the blood of a victim and it has been shown that those afflicted with infantile paralysis frequently improve when innoculated with blood from a person who has recovered. The immune particles fight the germs of the disease and in most cases bring about a cure.

The State is getting track of persons who have had the disease with a view to securing blood from them for use in the treatment of others. Dr. Henry L. K. Shaw found that one of the assistants in the State Laboratory in Albany had taken the disease when young.

"I'll give every drop of blood I can spare to help them," the young man told Dr. Shaw.

CONDUCTORS AND MOTORMEN HAVE ACCEPTED PROPOSED AGREEMENT.

Oswego, N. Y., August 18 (Special)—Employes of the Syracuse, Lake Shore and Northern have accepted the proposed agreement between the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railways Employes and the officials of the Empire United Railways. There remains but one item in dispute and it is believed that this will be settled upon at a conference between the union and railway officials. Results of this conference will be made later.

This one provision, which both railway and union men refuse to make public, it is said is one that has caused trouble in the past, but with all the other teerms of the pact agreed upon it is not believed that this one clause will be allowed to stand in the way of a final seettlement.

The result of the vote of the workmen on the Oswego city lines has not been made public, but it is said that no matter what way they voted it would not materially affect the result. The result will be made known soon, it was said.

While many of the clauses of the new agreement it is said were not heartily approved by the union it is said that they accepted them rather than make trouble and believing that the railroad officials would in return make the concession regarding the one mooted point.

George Keenan, international vice-president of the association is in charge of the union side of the dispute while T. C. Cherry represents the railroad.

TWO BAND CONCERTS WERE GIVEN LAST NIGHT

The band concerts were greatly enjoyed last night on both sides of the river. On the West Side Phillips' Band, of Oswego, rendered snappy fox trots, one steps, etc., while on the east side the local Elks' band was appreciated.

The younger people were probably greater enticed by the strains from the West Side, owing to the fact that community dancing was permitted. A large number of people responded to this and were kept under the strict observation of our local police force.

This evening a concert will be given on the West Side.

Ottman, Justin Morrill, Wallace W. Russell, C. E. Hammond, T. H. Marvin, Elmer Harper and W. D. Jones.

TROLLEY MEN ARE DIVIDED

SOME OF THE FULTON EMPLOYES WANT TO GET IN AS MUCH TIME AS POSSIBLE.

Motormen and conductors on all electric railroads in this city and throughout Central New York are voting today on the question of whether they want to work but six days per week.

In case the question is carried affirmatively the State Federation of Labor will be asked to draft an amendment to the "One Day in Seven Rest law" to include carmen. Trolley men in Rochester and Utica have already voted in favor of the proposition.

There is not by any means concerted action on the part of the trolley men for the day off. Some of them want to continue the way they are at the present time and object strenuously to being forced to take a day off. They need the money they say.

Others, however, favor the amendment. The vote today is expected to show a sharp division of sentiment and it is predicted that which ever side that wins will pull through by a narrow margin.

When the one day in seven rest law was placed upon the statute books of the state it was generally believed that the trolley men were included, but the matter was taken to the courts and it was decided otherwise. Since that time there has been more or less agitation in favor of the matter, but nothing definite has been done because of the opposition of some of the carmen themselves.

Some branches of the union wanted an immediate appeal made to the state federation so as to have them included. Others objected to this and to decide the question the union officials decided to put the matter to a vote. Today's balloting is the result.

While some members feel that they prefer the extra day's wages to the day off, officers of the union predict that eventually it may be possible to have the wages increased so that the men will get as much in six days as they do now in seven, the same as they have been raised so that the men earn now as much in nine or ten hours as they used to earn in ten or twelve.

The state federation of labor will hold a meeting next Tuesday at Glens Falls and the matter will be taken up at that time. The result of the vote will be known to the union officers by that time.

The workmen who favor the change say that they are entitled to the benefits of the law as well as other classes of labor pointing out that in many states methods have been adopted in which men employed on public service corporatiosn have been allowed the one day of rest without interfering with in the least with the work of the corporation. On plans laid out each man has a certain day of each week to himself, this day being changed weekly so that in a year's time each man will have had a certain number of Sundays off and at the end of five years it would be shown that the legal holidays of the years had been equally apportioned.

SUBMARINE HUNT.

To Test Efficiency of Civilian Motorboats In Wartime.

MANEUVERS SEPT. 5 TO 12.

Any Craft That Carries Three Passengers and Has a Twenty-four Hour Radius Is Eligible—Will Learn Mine Planting and Signal Work.

Washington.—Great importance is being attached to the maneuvers of the motorboats in connection with the naval training cruise of civilians under the guidance of officials of the navy department. It is expected that at least 500 owners of motorboats will respond to the call for the mobilization of such craft on Sept. 5. The maneuvers will continue until Sept. 12.

Motorboats of any size that are capable of carrying at least three passengers and have a cruising radius of twenty-four hours are eligible to enroll. The boats, divided into three classes, will do patrolling, mine planting and sweeping, scouting, defending ships from attack, countermining and signaling.

TYPES OF CRAFT TO BE IN MANEUVERS.

Three districts have been set aside for the mobilization. One lies south of Barnegat and includes Philadelphia; another is from Barnegat to New London, which includes the craft in New York waters, and the third is the territory east of New London, in which Boston is included. Great Britain has used motorboats against submarines effectively.

GIRL A HOMESTEADER.

Miss Briggs Will Raise Fruit Upon Land She Pre-empted.

Mountain Home, Ark.—Miss Nettie Rogers, eighteen years old, has filed a homestead claim on 150 acres of land on Flint ridge and will engage in fruit raising and truck farming.

Miss Rogers is a recent graduate from the Monticello Agricultural school. She is also the youngest homesteader in this part of the state and one of the very few women who have manifested the grit to attempt to cultivate a rough mountain tract of land anywhere in this vicinity.

Her homestead is adaptable to fruit and truck growing, and Miss Rogers believes that what she learned at the Monticello school, sustained by the personal effort that she is prepared to apply to cultivation of the soil, will bring an adequate reward.

LEAVES PRAYER FOR SON.

New York Woman, In Will, Hopes For His Future.

New York.—After leaving the bulk of her property to her son, Arthur Edward Schifferman, Mrs. Eugenie Schifferman, who died in her home in this city, wrote this prayer in her will, which was filed recently in the surrogate's court:

"May my money, which I have earned and saved up during long years of toil and struggle, bring good luck and happiness to my dearly beloved son Arthur, and may it help him to fully regain his health and to lead a good, useful life. God bless my dearest boy. I beseech my dear brothers to help and guide him in a loving and forgiving spirit."

FEEDS 5,100 CATTLE.

Buys Them In New Mexico and Fattens Them on His Ranch.

Centralia, Kan.—Henry Skinner, one of Centralia's boys, has on full feed now on his ranch near Medicine Lodge 5,100 head of cattle.

Skinner goes down into New Mexico, buys up a big bunch of native animals, brings them up to his ranch, grasses them awhile and then puts them on feed. The cattle have to be taught to eat the grain, which is done by gradually mixing the grain with alfalfa.

OLD GAME CATCHES FARMER.

Sends Cash to "Widow" Coming to Wed Him—She Doesn't.

Eastford, Conn.—Hear the sad tale Philip Voorhis, bachelor farmer of this quiet town, tells. In a Rochester (N. Y.) newspaper he read an ad. A lonely young widow of that city yearned for a good, true husband. Voorhis answered the ad. and, he avows, got a reply. All that was needed was $18, and she would hurry to Eastford, meet him, perhaps happily mate with him. As it happened all her available funds were tied up in a stock deal.

Gladly Philip sent the $18. He met the train the widow named; he awaited several trains. No widow tripped out from one of them nor even fell, stumbled or was thrown out.

At Philip's mournful request the police investigated. They learned that at the two addresses in Rochester the widow gave had lived a man whose wife received numerous letters. The Rochester police say Philip's anticipated mate is known variously as Mrs. Hatch, Mrs. Mack and Mrs. Loevere.

FOUND AFTER 21 YEARS.

Man Whose Mother Thought He Was Drowned Will Go Home.

Pratt, Kan.—Charles M. Short, who has been mourned as dead by his mother, Mrs. M. A. Annett of St. Joseph, Mo., has been found in this city and is alive and well.

Short tells a peculiar story of a roaming life, which he has at last decided to stop and go home to his mother. About twenty-one years ago Short left his home at Excelsior Springs, Mo., and started out for himself.

He went to San Francisco, where he went on the seas as a sailor. He never wrote his mother, but a word to a cousin in Nebraska gave the information that he was a sailor on a certain boat. This vessel was reported sunk, and there was no report of Short's name in the list of survivors.

His mother then mourned him for dead until recently a flash came over the wire from the cousin in Nebraska that Short had been found.

CURE FOR INSOMNIA.

Austrian Physician Says It Is Merely a Case of Stretching.

Vienna.—A well known Austrian physician, Dr. Ebstein, claims the discovery of a physical exercise that will cure insomnia. As explained in the Physical and Diet Therapeutics Journal the cure consists of the simple process of grasping with both hands the head board or rail of the bed and of straining upward until the arm and shoulder muscles are fatigued.

Sleeplessness in most cases is caused by irregular blood circulation in the brain, Dr. Ebstein explains. This comes to pass because of the slight difference in altitude between the head and the heart when one is lying down. By raising the arms and straining upward the physician claims the flow of the blood to the head is increased, while at the same time a certain degree of fatigue aids in getting to sleep.

A KNOTTY PROBLEM.

Citizen Marines Wonder if They Should Be Called Submarines.

Philadelphia.—Can a citizen volunteer for training in the duties of the United States marine corps, holding himself in readiness to take the place of a regular marine killed in war, be properly termed a sub-marine? That is what the "rookies" now at the marine corps training camp in Lansdowne, Pa., would like to know.

Friends of the citizen "sea soldiers" are telling them that a marine, not regularly a marine, although coached in the signals and likely to be called upon to "pinch hit" for a regular marine, must necessarily be a sub-marine.

The "rookies" themselves say that Noah Webster overlooked this knotty problem when he wrote his best seller, and they are calling on sports editors to decide the question.

PROPOSAL ON A PINE STRIP.

Girl Artist In Burnt Wood Sends Reply to Lonely Lumberman.

Elizabeth, N. J.—Miss Mary Hanna, a burnt wood artist in a novelty plant here, found on a strip of pine a message from a lonely Wisconsin lumberjack reading:

"If a girl finds this board, my name is Peter Peterson, and I want a wife, for I'm lonesome. Address Peter Peterson, General Delivery, Green Bay, Wis."

Miss Hanna admitted a postal showing Broad street at its busiest and carrying a message not discouraging was already on its way to Green Bay.

BOY ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Tries to End Life Because, He Says, Mother Beat Him.

Waterbury, Conn.—Nine-year-old Stephen Williams of 135 Charles street attempted suicide by leaping from the guard about the unfinished Brooklyn bridge, over the Naugatuck river, because, he said, his mother beat him.

Passersby caught the lad by the ankles just as he jumped and dragged him to safety.

Sisters Meet After Fifty Years.

Scranton, Pa.—Mrs. Ella Anderson, aged sixty-six, and Mrs. Fannie Merrick of Little Marsh, Pa., sisters, embraced each other at a family reunion in Elbridge park recently after not seeing each other for an even half century. They were brought together by a third sister, Mrs. A. C. Shaw of Elmira Heights, N. Y.

ENVY KING'S SON.

Italian Boys Would Like to Visit Front Like Prince.

IS LOVED BY THE SOLDIERS.

Heir Apparent to Italian Throne Has Had Some Remarkable Adventures. Has Ridden In Aeroplanes and Submarines and Shot Wild Boars.

Rome.—The most envied boy in all Italy is Humbert Nicholas Thomas Jean Marie—envied not because he is heir apparent to the Italian throne, but because he is the youngest boy who has been officially permitted to see the Italian front.

This only son of King Victor Emmanuel is but twelve years old and has had some remarkable adventures. He is head of the young explorers of Italy, a body that corresponds to the boy scouts in America, and he has done a lot of things that any boy would like to do. He has gone up in aeroplanes, down in submarines, steered warships, sailed boats, shot at wild boars and ridden cavalry horses.

But the things he is proudest of are his visits to the front, for he has been there not once, but many times. His first visit was a matter of considerable family discussion. In the royal family of Italy all such matters are talked over in the same fashion that they would be in any large American family.

At the front young Humbert displayed the same fearlessness that has characterized his father during his stay there. He went practically everywhere, fell in love with the soldiers, was petted by them in return and, all in all, had a fine time.

Brought up in the tolerant manner of his father, Humbert is all boy, through and through, and is not averse to some of the mischief that characterizes the American boy.

OLD WOMAN MAKES HAY.

Although Eighty-four Years Old, She Can Mow and Has a Fine Garden.

Cookeville, Tenn.—Mrs. Nellie France, aged eighty-four, who lives near Beaver Hill, mowed hay recently. "Aunt Nellie" enjoys remarkably good health. She has a splendid garden which she has made herself, doing all of the hoeing.

While her hay was being mowed she went to the hayfield and asked permission to drive the mower, which was being pulled by two large mules. Her request being granted, she made several rounds in the large hay field. She did the work with steady nerve and insisted upon driving longer, but the overseer, fearing that she would overexert herself, prevailed upon her not to do so.

The day following, however, she donned her sunbonnet and went back to the hayfield and raked all day.

She frequently rides horseback from her home to Monterey, a distance of eight miles.

ANCIENT COMMUNITY HOUSE.

Relic Discovered Near Santa Fe Said to Be 1,000 Years Old.

Santa Fe, N. M.—The discovery of a hitherto unknown community house, estimated to be a thousand years old, at Otowi, the prehistoric settlement thirty miles west of Santa Fe, was announced recently by Mrs. L. I. Wilson of Philadelphia, in charge of an archaeological expedition of the Philadelphia Commercial museum.

Pottery of an unknown design and an immense sacrificial altar are among the relics found in the newly unearthed ruins.

GETS FIRST CHICAGO PENSION.

John Agnew, Eighty-five, Had Been City Employee Since 1852.

Chicago.—John Agnew, eighty-five years old, who until July 1 this year had been a city employee since 1852, received a check recently which was the first payment by the municipal pension board under the pension act passed five years ago.

The presentation was made by Mayor Thompson. Mr. Agnew's sixty-four years of municipal service began with membership in the volunteer fire department.

"PRESIDENCY" BOOK

NOW READY

Contains Facts, Figures, Dates and Data About All Past And Present Elections

SETTLES ELECTION ARGUMENTS INSTANTLY

If you want to know how the political "machine" works; if you want to know the "strength" of each state; if you want to know how your state and other states have voted during the past twenty-five or thirty years—in other words, if you want to know a hundred and one different things about politics that the "other fellow" doesn't know, you have only to secure a copy of "The Presidency of the United States" and all of this desirable information will be yours.

This little book has been compiled by experts at great expense, and the information it contains is absolutely reliable and strictly non-partisan. It is not only intensely interesting but has a distinct educational value that makes it desirable for school children as well as for grown-ups.

"The Presidency of the United States" will be used by thousands of people this year as a quick and ready reference for information on all past and present elections, and as "final authority" for settling all election arguments and disputes.

The ability to answer correctly the questions this book contains indicates a more intimate knowledge of past history and current events than is possessed by the average citizen. Many a surprise is in store for anyone who thinks to do so without "brushing up."

We were fortunate in securing a supply of these books for immediate delivery. If you want one you can secure a copy at this office for "only ten cents."

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," was the favorite saying of old David Crockett. Those who believe in this motto will find in "The Presidency of the United States" an abundant supply of historical facts and non-partisan information upon which to base their statements and arguments during the 1916 presidential campaign.

Secure your copy at this office right away before the supply is exhausted. tf

ARMY BANS WATERMELON.

Breeds Flies, as Rind Can't Be Effectively Destroyed.

El Paso, Tex.—Gloom spread over the army camps here with the news that watermelons have been banned by the authorities.

It is not that melons of the southwest carry infection or that they are unwholesome. The army fly expert is behind the order. He has discovered that watermelon rind is the only kind of garbage that cannot be properly burned or effectively buried. To watermelon rind is attributed the present fly pest, and flies, says the expert, breed disease.

TAGGART'S DOG IN CAPITOL.

He Leads Pointer to Democratic Cloak Room—Page Watches Him.

Washington.—Senator Tom Taggart introduced an innovation in the senate recently that stirred that austere body to mild revolt. Taggart led a pointer dog into the Democratic cloakroom, it was learned.

The senator from Indiana said he did not take the dog into the senate chamber. He declared that it was a valuable dog, and he did not care to turn him adrift. A senate page guarded the canine during the session.

Street to Be Named For Gallieni.

Paris.—The municipal council of Paris has charged one of its committees with the mission of choosing a street or square to be named after the late General Gallieni.

Chief Meyers, Brooklyn Backstop.

John Tortes Meyers, familiarly known as "Chief," has fooled the wise ones. McGraw of the New York Giants thought that the old warrior's big league days were over. Last year he was released and was apparently pointed for the bush leagues, when

JOHN T. MEYERS.

Manager Robinson of the Brooklyns signed him. This year he has come back with a vengeance and is one of the potent reasons why the Robins are leading the league. The old warrior is once more hitting the ball with old time vigor and is up in the .300 list. His catching is high class, and he is doing well on the bases.

Moran on Easy Street.

Frank Moran, the heavyweight pugilist who was recently defeated by Jack Dillon, is now training at Tulsa, Okla., for his fight with Carl Morris there on Labor day. Frank recently stated that he had enough money invested to bring him $3,000 a year. He also said that he would whip Morris and that he wanted another chance at the world's championship.

Bobby Wallace Joins Browns.

Rhodencie J. (Bobby) Wallace, former American league umpire, has signed to play the remainder of this season with the St. Louis Americans. For many years Wallace was star shortstop for the Browns, but two seasons ago joined the American league staff of umpires. He has done no umpiring this season, holding the position of first substitute on the staff.

Ball Players of Long Ago.

Old Cap Anson recently declared that Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker had nothing on Bill Lange and that it wasn't a question of Johnson, Matty or Alexander being the greatest pitcher of all time, for Amos Rusie was far and away superior to any of that trio or, for that matter, to any twirler that ever mounted the hurling hill.

Virginia Has Hunter's License.

Virginia has now on its statute books a license law for hunters. The cost to hunt in one county is $1 and the entire state $3. Landowners and farmers have the privilege of hunting on their own farm or, obtaining the permission of owners, may hunt upon land immediately adjoining without paying a license fee.

Bigbee Becomes a Pirate.

Carson Bigbee, outfielder for the Tacoma team of the Northwestern league, has become the property of the Pittsburgh Nationals for $5,000. Bigbee came from the University of Oregon. He is batting [illegible] and has stolen fifty bases.

New Infielder For Cubs.

The Chicago National league club has purchased Third Baseman Sicking of the Norfolk (Virginia league) club. He has a batting average of .326 for eighty-five games and was sought by four other clubs.

Light as Chaff

The Scornful Caddy.

Jones' opinion of himself as a golfer was very much greater than his skill warranted.

Recently he was invited to play on a certain famous Scottish ground as a visitor. Armed to the teeth with clubs of all sorts and sizes, he set off and, followed by a caddy, proceeded to play.

He buried his ball in every bunker, gully and bit of landscape and muttered naughtily. After half an hour of it he turned to his silent caddie.

"Really," he murmured ingratiatingly, "this is the most difficult course I have ever played on."

"Hoo did ye ken?" replied the lad in quiet scorn. "Ye hevna played on it yet!"

A Welcome Visitor.

The new minister was invited out to supper. He was a bachelor, and when he helped himself to the biscuits for the third time he looked across the table at the hostess' little girl. "I don't often have such a good supper as this, my dear," he said in his most propitiatory tone. "We don't either," said the little girl, smiling; "I'm awful glad you came."—Christian Herald.

Different Atmosphere.

Flanagan sat on his front doorstep enjoying the balmy freshness of the spring evening.

Presently his neighbor, Murphy, passed by the fence for a chat.

"A foine av'nin'," said he pleasantly. "But why isn't Mrs. Flanagan wid ye enjying the air?"

"Sure, Mike," replied Flanagan, "the missus has gone for a change av air."

"Has she, now?" replied Murphy, interested. "And Oi hope the change will do her good. And where was she after goin'—to the shore, Oi suppose?"

"Then ye suppose wrong," Flanagan informed him. "Sure, an' isn't she seated at this moment on the back door step?"

Ready Politeness.

Gertie had been to a party, and mamma said when she returned:

"I hope, Gertie, you said 'No, thank you,' oftener than you said 'If you please.'"

"Course I did, mummie. I hadn't been eating more than half an hour before they began saying 'Don't you think you've had enough?' and 'Aren't you 'fraid you'll make yourself ill?' and I said 'No, thank you,' every time."

THIS IS MY DUTY.

To use what gifts I have as best I may;
To help some weaker brother
where I can;
To be as blameless at the close of day
As when the duties of the day began;
To do without complaint what must be done;
To grant my rival all that may be just;
To win through kindness all that may be won;
To fight with knightly valor when
I must.

Mating Hens For Egg Production

Just why one hen is a loafer and another as like her as two peas in a pod is a good layer has always been a poser to countrymen, says the Farm and Fireside.

Raymond Pearl has spent nine years delving into this mystery. Look the world over and no one can be found who has investigated this matter quite so carefully in a scientific way as he has done at the Maine experiment station. He now is fully convinced that it is possible for a poultry keeper to control the egg production quality in his hens by breeding and thus insure heavy egg production in a large proportion of the pullets hatched. Pearl's work has not been mere scientific theory. He has bred, hatched, raised and tested thousands of birds with which to demonstrate his opinions.

His discovery reduced to its lowest terms is that the quality of heavy egg production descends to the pullet through her father and that, in order to insure a large proportion of the pullets hatched being heavy layers, their father must be the son of a heavy layer.

Little Helps For the Laundry

Calico shrinks in washing. When making it up allow one inch to the yard for this.

When washing new black stockings add a handful of salt and tablespoonful of vinegar to every two gallons of water.

Stockings washed before wearing will last in good condition far longer than those not washed.

To set green, blue, lavender and pink colors in wash goods soak in alum water before washing, two ounces to a tub of water. Black, dark blue and gray should be soaked in strong salted water.

The proper way to wash and dry woolens, flannels, etc., is to wash them in lukewarm water and pure soap and to hang them on the line dripping wet without wringing. If dried in this way the shrinking will be so slight as to be almost unnoticeable.

Magical Usit

Now all you ladies who suffer (yes, suffer, for you do) from unsightly wrinkles can drive them away forever. Usit, the pure nut-oil skin food, the "Arab's Secret," a preparation used by famous Eastern beauties for centuries can be purchased at any first class drug store.

This wonderful preparation (not a face cream), is positively guaranteed to clear the complexion of all wrinkles, whether caused by age, worry, work or exposure. Rub it into the skin with the finger tips at night just before retiring, and in a short time every wrinkle will disappear, your hungry, faded skin will get back its healthy color, its well nourished smoothness, and the lines in your face will be replaced by youthful roundness. No other treatment is necessary.

Usit is well named the "Wrinkle Chaser" for no wrinkles can exist where it is used. It is guaranteed to contain nothing that will cause hair growth.

Go to your druggist today and get a bottle of Usit for 50 cents. Try it tonight and see how fine your face feels in the morning. But remember Usit is put up only in opal bottles. Take nothing else.

The most painful cases of sunburn are relieved instantly by Usit.

For sale by the Fulton Pharmacy and dealers everywhere.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

LAST DAY OF THE COUNTY FAIR

Free For All Race Is On This Afternoon

Also a 2:25 Pace and Trot

The third day of the fair of the Oswego County Agricultural Society was marked by a reecord crowd. The racing was the feature of the day and a large crowd filled the grandstand to witness the contests. The horse racing this year is attracting more attention than in any previous year in the history of the fair.

Connie Mack led in the 2:17 pace and trot yesterday in three straight heats, with L. D. Sheldon, driving Akfor, second; McMinarion, third, and Peter Patch fourth. Time: 2:19 1-4, 2:20 1-4, 2:22 1-4.

The 2:28 pace required five heats for a decision. Belle Volo got first money; Noble Wilkes, second; Roy C. Wilkes, third; Minequa Princess, fourth.

The scheduled attractions were carried out, including "Big Jim," the wrestling bear, who succeded in throwing two men who attempted to put him on his back, and the daily balloon ascension and parachute drop, which took place at 4:30 o'clock. The balloonist made his drop just outside the fence surrounding the grounds.

Today's racing program is to be an exceptionally fine one and will include the 2:25 pace and trot for a purse of $250, and the free-for-all for a purse of $250. There has been twenty-two entries listed for the former and fifteen for the free-for-all, including Lancer, who took the 2:20 pace and trot in three straight heats in Wednesday's program.

Communications From Gulf Region Cut Off

(By United Press)

San Antonio, Texas, August 19—All communications except by government wireless have been lost south of here and the army officers today are still waiting to hear the details of the damage done by the Gulf Hurricane at Brownsville and to the army camps on the Rio Grande. Reports from General Parker stated at Fort Brown that the tents had been levelled and the camps flooded. The Illinois, Iowa and Virginia militia were forced to move into public buildings. He also added, however, that the worst of the storm had passed. No loss of life was reported.

AFTER SEVERAL DAYS LULL, FIGHTING BEGINS

(By United Press)

Petrograd, August 19—Heavy fighting has broken out on the Russian front east of Kovel, after a lull of several days while the Russians are pressing their advances in Galicia and near the Carpathians. The War Office announced today stubborn fighting along the Stoehod River. The Czar's troops broke the Austro-German position and captured the town of Topoly. Considerable advances were scored in this fighting.

EIGHT HOUR DAY TO BE GIVEN

(By United Press)

Washington, August 19—President Wilson today, in a formal statement of a proposal for the settlement of the railroad difficulty between the railroads of the country and the railroad brotherhood. He indicated his intentions in this statement that an eight hour day be granted the workers. This seems to mean a barely possible and entirely fair program he said and he thinks that the public might expect its acceptance at any time. It is believed that the president is prepared now that if the brotherhood accepts this program to throw the burden of blame of the strike on the railroad owners if a strike results.

(By United Press)

Albany, N. Y., August 19—Up to noon today thirty-four new cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the health department from different points in the state outside of New York city. RADIO STATION OUT OF COMMUNICATION

"CATHOLIC WEEK" IN NEW YORK

FIRST CONFERENCE OF CATHOLIC SOCIAL AND CHARITABLE WORKERS OPENS TODAY.

(By United Press)

New York, August 19—The first conference of Catholic social and charitable workers ever held, opened here today.

Rt. Rev. P. J. Muldoon, Bishop of Rockford, Ill., chairman of the social service commission of the American Federation of Catholic societies; Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, of Washington, president of the Catholic charity conference of the United States; Sir Joseph Frey, K. S. K., president of the German Roman Catholic Central verein and John Paul Chew, president of the Catholic Press association of the United States, called the conference.

This conference preceded the fifteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Catholic societies, which starts here tomorrow and continues until August 23. The week is known as "Catholic Week in New York."

Twenty thousand Catholics were expected to attend from all parts of the United States. Fifteen hundred delegates will attend, representing three million members and, indirectly thirteen million others Catholics in the United States.

The speakers for tomorrow include Cardinal O'Connell, Bishop James A. McFaul of Trenton, Governor Whitman of New York, and John Whalen, national president of the organization. The business sessions of the convention will consider divorce, social reform, censorship of moving pictures, the Catholic theatre movement and other reforms.

Rev. Philip Gordon, of Winnebago, Neb., one of the two Indian Catholic priests in the United States, will represent the Catholic Indian Bureau.

OFF NEWPORT TOMORROW

FIRST WAR GAME OF THE ATLANTIC FLEET BEGINS

(By United Press)

Newport, R. I., August 19—Hasty preparations were being completed by the Atlantic reserve fleet today for the defence of the coast line against an enemy attack tomorrow. Battle ships, destroyers, mine layers, submarines and fleet trains are at their posts and set to repel the invasion.

At the first peep of Sunday morning's dawn the Atlantic fleet will attack and attempt to effect a landing with its theoretical army of invasion. It will be the first of this year's war games, worked out by the War College.

The problem is: The reserve fleet, in command of Rear Admiral J. M. Helm, with the destroyer flotilla, will defend the approach to the vital parts of the coast from an attack by the present Atlantic fleet, with the submarines as auxiliaries. Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight will act as umpire on the new superdreadnaught Pennsylvania. Particular stress will be laid upon the value of battle cruisers as an attacking force against a slower, but heavier armored defending squadron. The radius of action will be about that of last year's.

LAST DAY OF COUNTY FAIR

CLOSED WITH TWO EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD RACES.

The 1916 Oswego County Fair Association was fortunate in having fine weather during the past four days and as a consequence nothing marred the success and pleasure of this annual event. There was an unusually large and fine display of automobiles by our local dealers.

The races yesterday were interesting and exciting, both races being won in three straight heats. In the 2:25 pace and trot Hal Hopper took first money; Bird Song, second; Topsy King, third; Spanish Hall, fourth, with Dukelate and Pearl Wilkes in fifth and sixth positions. Time: 2:20 1-4, 2:19 1-4; 2:23 1-4.

The Free for all had but four starters, Bert H., having been withdrawn. The four horses finished in all three heats in first, second, third and fourth places as follows: Symbol Meath, McKinney's first, Wathen and Jennie Lee. Time 2:14, 2:14 1-4, 2:15 1-4.

Frank Burns, F. A. Gage and E. J. Schem were the efficient judges with John W. Stevenson and Mark Hammond, timers.

Owing to the strict enforcement of the ordinance that chilrren under sixteen years should not be admitted the attendance was not as great as in past years.

George Perkins, George Dumas, W. M. Hinsdale and W. F. Foster received first and second premiums for their display of flowers.

Gordon Mace of Academy captured second premium in the taxidermist department.

The team of carriage horses belonging to S. C. Pendergast of Phoenix received the blue ribbon. They were driven by Miss Mamie Farley of this city.

The poultry exhibit was the largest this year in the history of the society. N. N. Ward, superintendent of the poultry building, estimated that about 3,000 birds were on exhibition.

John J. Young, driver of Chemical Company No. 1, took first honors in the contest at the fair grounds yesterday for miscellaneous entries. Garnett Alnutt, driver of Chemical Company No. 2, carried off second prize. The prize was $15, and this amount will be turned into the firemens pension fund.

The proprietor of the show in which a man eating shark has been on exhibition at the fair grounds, left town last night and failed to remove his exhibit. A number of complaints were made to Dr. A. L. Hall, health officer, and the official made a trip to the grounds and decided to bury the shark.

Will Not Accept Eight Hour Day

(By United Press)

St. Paul, Minn., August 19"We will stand out against the eight hour day and President Wilson's present plans for averting the strike, as we understand it now even if every other railroad in the United States accepts the plan," said Lewis W. Hill, heading the Hill interests today. The Hill interests control the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington Lines. "Such a plan means receivership for the roads," Hill continued, "In addition it would cripple our service in the south. Of the twenty-eight railroads operating under the eight hour day principle, every one without an exception is in the hands of the receivers. We won't be. We would not have any increased freight rate to balance the increased cost. We simply will not accept the principle.

IRON MOULDERS ARE FRIGHTENED

(By United Press)

Bridgeport, Conn., August 19—Threatened with the loss of their homes and small savings accounts and even possible imprisonment, 300 striking iron moulders today wired an appeal to J. S. Ballentine of Cincinnati, president of the iron moulder's union of North America. The Deputy Sheriff rapidly set about to investigate the provisions made for the protection of the cottages owned by the strikers and their bank accounts under the $200,000 damage act brought forth by four companies whose men went on a strike recently. The act brought forth followed the success of a man who obtained a $250,000 judgment against the strikers in the Danbury Hatter's Union.

THE CORN FIELDS

The corn fields are more beautiful at this time, perhaps, than at any other season. They are not as wavy or as darkly green as when the corn was about waist high, and the leaves of the stalks have begun to rustle a little, but they are beautiful in their stateliness over and above what they are at any other season.

But so far as that goes corn is by all odds our most beautiful crop—more beautiful than even our growing wheat for there is about it at all times an individuality possessed by no other vegetation. When it first comes above the ground in long, straight rows of pale green, the weak stalks tremble in the spring winds, or bow to the north at the pressure of the southern breezes. Within a week or two it has taken on a darker hue, and the blades quiver in the summer sun in regimental formations. The brown ground still shows through the stalks, between the furrows, and as one drives rapidly by such a field the rows remind him of the old fine-tooth comb which was in evidence in the earlier days in every well regulated family.

Then the plants raise themselves upward, and branch out until the tips of the leaves kiss each other in delight. The dews settle upon the leaves, and trickle back in drops to the stalk, and the "silk" comes out gloriously, and the tassel forms, trembling upon the very tips of the plant, to shatter and scatter its pollen to adjoining rows. Even before it is "laid by" it has assumed a rugged attitude, and one of vigor.

But now it is princely in its majesty. The ears have formed. The "silk" is growing darker as it protrudes from the end of the ear. The tassels have scattered their pollen, and the edges of the blades have been sharpened by the warm nights, until they sing as you walk through the field and when coming into contact with your clothing.

High as the head and higher; heavy at the ground, and tapering like a fishing rod to the very end. Groaning at the burden of the heavy ear it bears, and yellowing from time, even as all of us must surrender the hues of youth to the more somber hues of the departing years. Oh, there isn't anything upon the farm more beautiful than a field of corn—unless it is the farmer's daughter with her rugged health and wholesome smile that greets you with the generous greeting of the great outdoors.

THE COUNTRY NEWSPAPER

Our papers, our little country papers, seem drab and miserably provincial to strangers; yet we who read them read in their lines the sweet, intimate story of life, says William Allen White in Harper's Magazine. And all these touches of nature make us wondrous kind. It is the country newspaper, bringing together daily the threads of the town's life, weaving them into something rich and strange, and setting the pattern as it weaves, directing the loom, and giving the cloth its color by mixing the lives of all the people in its color-pot—it is this country newspaper that reveals us to ourselves, that keeps our country hearts quick and our country minds open and our country faith strong.

When the girl at the glove counter marries the boy in the wholesale house the news of their wedding is good for a 40-line wedding notice, and the 40 lines in the country, paper give them self-respect. When in due course we know that their baby is a 12-pounder, named Grover or Theodore or Woodrow, we have that neighborly feeling that breeds the real democracy. When we read of death in that home we can mourn with them that mourn. When we see them moving upward in the world, into a firm and out toward the country club neighborhood, we rejoice with them that rejoice. Therefore, men and brethren, when you are riding through this vale of tears upon the California Limited, and by chance pick up the little country newspaper with its meagre telegraph service of 3,000 or 4,000 words or, at least, 15,000 or 25,00; when you see its array of countryside items; its interminable local stories; its tiresome editorials on the waterworks, the schools, the street railroad, the crops and the city printing, don't throw down the contemptible little rag with the verdict that there is nothing in it. But know this, and know it well; if you could take the clay from your eyes and read the little paper as it is written you would find all of God's beautiful sorrowing, struggling, aspiring world in it, and what you saw would make you touch the little paper with reverent hands.

THE SIDE BAR BUGGY

Remember the side-bar buggy! You had been used to the old-fashioned springs, at the ends of the vehicle, with the body cut away where you entered—a good enough vehicle, you though, for any one. Then somebody invented the side bar buggy, with the piano box bed, and visions of ease and elegance loomed before you.

Perhaps the side bar buggy you knew the best had red wheels—and how hard you tried to keep them clean. You'd drive around a mud-puddle always. You'd have the body of the buggy as black and shiny as a piece of polished mahogany, and the wheels washed and polished to an eighth of an inch of the tire. Then, with a linen lap-robe, with a big red rose worked in the center—or what passed for a rose, although no rose was ever so bright or contained so many colors—you drove up to the front gate of her whom you proposed to take ut for a spin.

And such a spin! The old horse got the line under his tail occasionally, and you had to lean far out over the dash board to remove it. If you went eight miles an hour you were afraid you'd give the horse the heaves. But the glistening red spokes of the side bar buggy and the colory lap-robe, and your own linen duster—say, but those were the days!

Even the hitching rein was a thing to be considered—a strip of leather with a metal clasp that could be hooked or unhooked in an instant. It was carried beneath the seat of the buggy. Some times, just by way of showing what could be done by the way of putting work upon a set of harness, the hitching rein was sewed to the bridle bit, and the end of it tied fancily into the white ring of the harness. But that did not happen often; generally you used the hitching rein that fastened with a snap, and was removed when you unhitched the horse from the post in front of the lady's residence—where the old horse had fought the flies and dug a hole in the earth for all the world like the hole the picnickers dig in the earth about the pegs they pitch at in the contest.

But it was the buggy itself—the side bar buggy! Precious days of more precious memories—of moonlight nights and shady drive-ways! The automobile has nothing on the side bar buggy of other days, no more than the boys of today have it on the boys of yesterday.

CENSORSHIP ON THE BORDER

It will not of course be useful to inform the hostile Mexicans just where our troops are located and what motions they make. The punitive expedition following the Columbus raid was hampered by overanxiety of newspaper men to get everything on the wire even before it happened.

But full accounts of just how the soldiers are faring on the border are an entirely different matter. There will be no excuse for any censorship about the quality of the food they are receiving and efficiency of mobilization.

The country is trying out the experiment of placing its reliance on these state troops. It is entitled to know at once just how the thing is working, without having to dig the facts out of black covered government reports a year or two later, when interest in the matter has been lost. Also if any contractors are working off bad beef and unsuitable clothing, the sooner the public realizes this yellow treachery, the better. Newspaper correspondents should be given free rein on such matters.

MOTORISTS AND PEDESTRIANS

The number of accidents in the public streets from careless use of automobiles is alarming. But when one thinks of the carelessness of the general public, it is really a wonder that there are not more.

In towns and cities crowded with motor cars and trucks, one sees as much indifference to safety as in small villages. Half the people, on trying to cross a street, never look either way to see if anything is coming. The only way for the drivers to avoid accident is to run on their lowest speed and keep their horns blowing.

Many motorists are unwilling to reduce speed much below ten miles an hour. Even in thick tangles of teams and people, their theory is to keep honking and let the public jump. This is intolerable. But it is not more perilous than the dreamy carelessness of pedestrians who never use their eyes, and expect others to be wholly responsible for their safety.

—The principal issues of the campaign to some minds are Mr. Hughes's whiskers and President Wilson's homely face.

MAJORS GET MANY COLLEGE STARS

Unusual Number of Varsity Players Join Pro Ranks.

FEW OF THEM WILL STICK

Detroit and Connie Mack Landed Some Promising Material — McGraw Secured a Couple—Big League Scouts Haunted Campus Games.

An unusual number of college baseball players have entered the big league this summer. How many will be prominent by the time the big league season ends?

If the usual average obtains, the successful ones will be in a minority. Yet, again, some of the neophytes have displayed ability on the university diamond which bespeaks at least a certain amount of success.

George Smith of Columbia, for example. After he has been sweetened down, there would appear to be strong likelihood of his being a valuable member of the Giant pitching squad. And Pie Way has also gone to McGraw's team. Way is a husky youth, who has speed, control and curves. He may develop into a big league star.

Detroit Gets Good Player.

Watt, the Columbia captain, has signed with Detroit, and Andy Coakley says he has no doubt this player will make good in big company. Watt, he says, is one of the closest students of baseball he has ever met. He is always considering how to improve his game and will develop swiftly, Coakley thinks. It is reported from New Haven that Mahan will sign with the Americans, but Ernest Soucy said in New London the other day that Mahan was not going to play professional baseball.

"He turned down an offer from the Boston Braves to my personal knowledge," said Soucy, "and I don't think he will play ball unless he receives an offer of a salary much larger than he has yet received."

Athletics Have Good Catcher.

Jing Johnson, the Ursinus pitcher, made his debut for the Athletics against the Red Sox and received a fearful lambasting. Red Carroll, the Tufts catcher, however, made a fine impression, catching Johnson in fine style and nipping three men who attempted to steal second.

The idea is not to make baseball an end, but merely a means either to completing their education or of laying aside means to assist them in business projects. But others, it is to be feared, have not looked into the future, at least not beyond the immediate future. Baseball, if they make good, will pay them more at the outset than they could reasonably expect to earn in business, and that is the lure. A few will probably catch on at once; others eventually will be transferred to the minor leagues for "development." Very few college men ever return from the so called bushes. Even assuming they not only succeed, but become famous as professional baseball players, what does it all amount to in the end?

Lure of the Diamond Is Strong.

Some years ago one of the colleges had a brilliant baseball player. He was also a brilliant student. His inclinations were toward law, but he went into the big leagues, where his value was established at once. He stayed with one club a number of years, then he went to another and after twenty years of service slowed down. Now he is running a minor league team. As he looks back into the past and asks what baseball has done for him he must find the answer rather depressing. His professors when he left college agreed that he had it in him to succeed in almost anything to which he directed his mind. But the quick money and the evanescent fame of the professional diamond were too alluring to be resisted.

Scouts Attend Ball Games.

"It would be well if the colleges and universities took steps to combat this annual descent upon their players of big league managers, whose only thoughts are selfish, whose only ideals are mercenary," said a writer recently. "College coaches who work with one eye on the teams they coach and the other on big league managers from whom they expect a handsome gratuity in return for student ball players should be suppressed and promptly. Go to a college game in which players who stand out above the average are competing and you will see scouts from professional lines watching every move of the men whom they expect to sign, studying them and sizing up their points as though they were live stock."

GOOD CATCHERS ON BENCH.

Giants and Dodgers Each Have Pair of Them in Reserve.

In Bradley Kocher, Otto Miller and Lew McCarty the Giants and Dodgers have three catchers who probably would be regular backstops if they were on other teams than those harboring such receivers as Bill Rariden and Chief Meyers.

All three men are cool headed, capable catchers, and in addition are hard hitters. Miller and McCarty divided the backstopping for the Dodgers last year, but both are warming the bench now that Meyers is wearing the spangles of the Brooklyn club. Kocher joined the Giants last fall and has proved himself to be a very fine understudy for Rariden.

Visits Mountains and Returns a Greatly Changed Boy.

New York.—Donald, the twelve-year-old son of H. S. Rushmore of Jamaica, N. Y., went to Mount Beacon, N. Y., for a rest.

"When Donald went away," said his father, "he was four feet ten inches in height and weighed seventy-two pounds. He had always been a light eater. When he got back eight days later Mrs. Rushmore was so amazed at the change in his appearance that we measured him again and found he was five feet two and three-quarters high and weighed eighty-two pounds.

"A friend of mine who lived in this same house (83 Shelton avenue) sent his fifteen-year-old son last year up to the mountains in Maine, and he grew five inches in five weeks."

RAILROAD WAIF FINDS A HOME

Conductor and Wife Adopt Baby Abandoned on Track.

Glassboro, N. J.—Recently a boy two weeks old was found abandoned on the tracks of the West Jersey and Seashore railroad. After a narrow escape from death he was brought here by the crew of a freight.

Arthur Shinn, a conductor on the line, announced he and his wife, who live in Chestnut Ridge, would adopt the child.

BUILDING GIANT ZEPPELIN.

Description of Air Craft Has Been Received in Washington.

The giant Zeppelin transoceanic air liner promised by Germany to help her merchant submarines defeat the purposes of the British blockade is nearing completion near Lake Constance. Official information was received in Washington telling of the giant air craft.

The great passenger carrying balloon is hundreds of feet longer than the largest of the war Zeppelins which have been used in the bombardment of English and French coast towns and the air raids on London and Paris.

Inflated the newest German product will be 787 feet in length, more than one-seventh of a mile. The giant airship is designed to carry a dead weight load of 88,000 pounds. This is the equivalent of 580 persons of average weight.

Work on the huge machine is being pushed as rapidly as possible. However, the information contained no definite estimate of the probable time of the completion of the Zeppelin that is designed to break the British cordon about Germany and free German commerce.

SPONSONS ARE LATEST.

May Be Feature of Future Submarine Craft.

A new [illegible] in submarine construction which is said to promise greater safety for the crew is the development of the sponson. Steel sponsons may be made a feature of future models of underwater craft.

They will make the submarine ride higher when she is sailing on the surface and as a result are expected to make her a more effective platform for gunfire.

High riding would also help in loading and unloading and add to the comfort of the crew. It is not expected that the addition of sponsons would materially diminish the speed of a submarine so equipped.

NEARLY KILLED BY SKEETERS

Almost Drain Life Blood From Young Man in Indiana.

Michigan City, Ind.—Crazed by loss of blood, exposure and lack of food, his body covered with mosquito bites and clad only in a shirt, Stanley Bolowski, twenty-three years old, was found in a marsh near here. His face and body were so swollen from the attacks of the insects he was almost unrecognizable. As he had been missing from his home for several days, he is said to have wandered in the swamps since that time.

Railroad employees discovered Bolowski, and he was taken to a hospital. He was employed as a riveter until May 30, when he was thrown out of employment. Physicians marveled that Bolowski is alive. They believe he suffered a sunstroke or was overcome by heat. A great deal of blood was drained from his body by mosquitoes. He will recover.

Grim Consolation.

During the peninsula campaign a general officer of the French army was severely wounded in the leg, the surgeons deciding on examination that amputation was necessary.

The officer, seeing his valet shedding tears, asked: "Why do you weep, Germain? It is a fortunate thing for thee. You will have only one boot to clean in future."

HER FIRST DINNER PARTY.

And Why She Didn't Know Just What to Say to the Cook.

They had been married only three months, and it was their first dinner party, consequently they were both a little flurried when the time drew near for the guests to arrive. She had arranged the table herself and stood surveying the effect.

"Do you think everything will go well, dearie?" she asked for the untieth time.

"Of course. Why shouldn't it? I'm really sorry for the fellows who are not married. They have to give their dinners in restaurants."

"Oh, how sweet of you, dearie," she gurgled. "And I'm really sorry for the poor girls who have no nice husbands."

She wandered around [illegible], then stood still and listened.

"Hush! There's a car[illegible]e."

And they hustled into the living room. But the carriage rolled on. He looked at his watch. It was 7.

"How foolish of us! Of course no one would dream of coming before the half hour," she said. "You know, lovey, one always says half an hour before the real dinner hour."

Half an hour passed. Not a soul put in an appearance. The clock struck 8. The bride burst into tears.

"I've never been so insulted in my life. My friends always accepted my invitations before I was married."

"So did mine, even if I did have to invite them to restaurants."

"I shall go home to mother, and you can go to your old restaurants as much as you please."

"Oh, don't let me keep you."

She rushed into her bedroom and began piling her pretty things pellmell into a suitcase. Then she gave a cry. Her eye fell on a heap of white envelopes in the corner of a drawer.

"Husband!" she called out in a tragic voice. "Here are all the invitations. I forgot to mail them."

They looked at one another for a moment; then he opened his arms and she fell into them. The blissful moment of reconciliation was interrupted by a voice from the kitchen, "Would yez be havin' any dinner tonight?"

"Oh," the bride cried, "what am I going to say to cook?"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Criticise Yourself.

A little less criticism of others and more thorough criticism of ourselves would have a tendency to make us lenient to and sympathetic with the faults and follies of others.

Enough to Do Already.

Little Mary had frequently been scolded by her mother for tying her sled on sleighs and had promised to reform. One day her mother saw her going past with her sled tied to a bob. She called her in and told her how dangerous it was and also that the law did not allow it.

"Don't talk to me about law," said Mary. "I have all I can do to keep the Ten Commandments."

Found the Word.

The late Thomas Lowry of Minneapolis was a great wit and a great story teller as well as a great financier. He needed $1,000,000 one time for one of his railroad enterprises, and he went to New York to get it. On the morning of his arrival a friend met him at the hotel and asked, "What are you doing, Tom?"

"I am going downtown to get $1,000,000."

"Can you do it?"

"My boy," said Lowry impressively, "in the bright lexicon of youth there is no such word as fail."

That night Lowry came back to his hotel after a hard day. The same friend met him. "Did you get the million?" he asked.

"No," replied Lowry, "I didn't. I opened that bright lexicon of youth, and the word was in it."

Wanted Back Action.

After many efforts the aspiring singer had managed to get permission to give a trial performance at the local music hall. The house was full, and he warbled in his sweetest tones. Everything seemed roseate until suddenly a hoarse voice came from the side of the stage:

"HERE, YOU, COME OFF!"

"Here, you, come off!" roared the stage manager. "Can't you see you're emptying the house?"

"Er—I don't seem to be a success, then?" said the amateur timorously.

"Success! Huh!" snorted the manager angrily. "At clearing them out you're the most successful chap I ever met. Now, for goodness' sake, go and sing outside and drive 'em in again!"—London Tit-Bits.

BUILDING A CHARACTER.

Let building up your character be your constant effort in life. If it is a little harder to build up character than reputation, it is only so in the beginning. For mere reputation, like a poorly built house, will cost as much for patching and repairs as would have made it thorough at first.—Beecher.

Better Than She Thought.

Young Husband—Darling, I have a confession to make. My salary is 30 per cent less than I told you before we were married! Young Wife—Oh, that's all right, Tom; I calculated on 50!—Judge.

A Dream Fulfilled.

Dream premonitions have always left me somewhat incredulous when they happen to other people. But they sometimes happen to me. The other night I had a vivid dream of a man walking toward me in a principal street of my native town. He smiled, we spoke a few words—in the dream.

It was a man I hadn't seen or thought of for at least twenty years, and, though I had completely forgotten him when awake, I knew him in the dream. You will guess the sequel. Next afternoon I encountered him at the front door and started as he mentioned his name. He had the same smile on.—London Opinion.

Feminine Confidence.

"I shall never scold my husband again for spending so much time at the club."

"Tell me about it."

"Well, last night a burglar got into the house, and my husband knocked him senseless with a poker. I've heard several men speak of him as a poker expert. He has evidently been practicing at the club for just such an emergency."—Judge.

Why the Quail Quailed.

What made the quail quail? For fear the woodpecker would peck her.—Exchange.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

This week we give the last of a series of extracts from essays on THRIFT, this one from an essay written by Miss Laura Marie Noque, of a Long Island City High School for which she received the fifth prize of $10.00 in gold.

"The thriftless man has no share in the progress of the world. He spends all he gets, and can give help to nobody. He is indeed always calling for help. In fact, he is the born slave of the thrifty people. It is not what a man gets that constitutes his wealth, but his manner of spending and economizing.

"Any attempt to live beyond our means adds nothing to our reputation, and takes much away from it, for the world, sooner or later, is sure to know us for what we are.

"The very principle of saving, itself, irrespective of the amount saved, if one saves all he can, establishes a reputation for the saver, which helps him to live better in the present and protects him in the future."

Foxglove.

In some places in England the foxglove is regarded with awe as a "witches' flower," the peasants saying that the witches use the bells of the blossoms as thimbles. In most parts, however, the "we sma' folk that bode no ill" are the beings that "sweetly nestle in the foxglove bells," and in Ireland the plant is called the fairy cap.

ANOTHER CASE OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS WAS REPORTED TODAY.

An Italian family by the name of Dominick residing at Lewis's Corners west of Fulton, summoned Dr. Terpenning, who upon arriving found a two year old child suffering from the dreaded plague. The child was affected in both lower limbs and has been unable to walk for more than two days.

Dr. Hall was notified but owing to the fact that the case was not within his jurisdiction he could not take action.

The case of little Agnes Plumber is improving and it is thought by the officials that the child will recover.

Two more quarantines were placed today for the reason that the people were in some way exposed to the disease. Three quarantines were raised this morning.

COPIES OF FISH AND GAME LAWS

CAN BE SECURED AT CITY HALL FREE OF COST

Several hundred copies of the syllabus of the fish and game laws have been received by City Clerk Adkins and copies will be passed out to persons who may apply for them. The syllabus contains much useful information for sportsmen. In it are the dates of the open and closed seasons for birds, animals, fish and some information regarding the use of state lands. All sportsmen are urged to do all in their power to prevent forest fires.

A resume of the syllabus is hard to make as it is in itself, but a digest of the larger laws and contains notices of further things in which more information must be had of the conservation commission.

A few rules may be set forth:

Black and Oswego bass are in season hereabouts. The minimum length at which they may be taken is ten inches. Fifteen is the maximum number for one person and twenty-five when there are two or more persons in a boat. There is no closed season for striped bass, although the minimum length at which they can be taken is twelve inches. The minimum length at which lake trout can be taken is firteen inches and there is no closed season for them in Lakes Erie and Ontario. The season in other waters closed September 30th.

Pickerel and pike may be taken from May 1 to March 1. Pikeperch commonly known as yellow and wall eyed pike may be taken until March 1, but the minimum length is twelve inches. No closed season is set for yellow perch.

Brook, speckled, rainbow and red-throat trout may not be taken after August 31. The minimum length at which they may be taken is six inches and a day's limit is ten pounds to a person.

White fish may be taken until September 30th and in Lakes Erie and Ontario at any time, in any number or quantity. In inland waters the minimum weight at which they can be taken is three quarters of a pound in the round Otsego whitefish may be taken until October 31, but of a length not less than nine inches. There are certain restrictions for specified inland waters set forth in the syllabus.

No rules are set forth as to netting, net fishermen being advised to consult the law or write to the commission. Set lines may be used under license issued by the commission except in waters inhabited by trout to take whitefish, bullheads, catfish, eels, perch, sunfish, carp mullet and dogfish providing an order specifying the waters and fixing the season shall first be made by the commission.

Under the rules adopted by the commission set lines shall not be more than 500 feet in length nor contain more than 300 hooks set not less than fifteen inches apart. A person must not own nor operate more than one such line. Nothing but dead bait shall be useod, and no minnows, either dead or alive, shall be used for bait; no fish other than the kind mentioned shall be taken.

Spearing or grappling hooks may be used except in waters inhabited by trout, for taking whitefish, mullet, carp, catfish, dogfish, bullheads, suck-eels, at any time providing an order specifying the waters and fixing the season shall first be made by the commission. Eel weirs and eel pots prohibited except under license.

HAVE STARTED A CRUSADE

NEIGHBORING LAKE RESORTS AND ROAD HOUSES UNDER THE BAN.

Syracuse, N. Y.—The Syracuse Moral Survey committee has started again.

This time the association has secretly conducted an investigation of Onondaga lake resorts and road houses and have found wholesale violations of the liquor and gambling laws, a preliminary report declares.

The evidence collected by the Association's detectives will either be placed in the hands of District Attorney George W. Stander or sent to Excise Commissioner George E. Green, at Albany.

The detectives found gambling in many forms in progress at some of the resorts and also discovered that beer was being sold in open defiance of the law. Crowds of young girls were swilling down beer in unbelievable quantities, the report states.

Policemen in the employ of the proprietors of the resorts made no pretense whatever to stop the gambling devices the detectives declare while the liquor was sold openly and without making the slightest pretense to comply with or evade the law.

The investigation of the committee is the most sweeping since its sensational swoop down upon the houses of ill fame in this city and the consequent closing of the "red light" district in this city together with many of the gambling houses and questionable hotels.

The committee also investigated these same fields in the second probe, but found conditions greatly improved, the reports says.

The latest investigation was made by hired detectives brought into the city from the outside and employed and paid by the Moral Survey committee, of which the Rev. Frederick W. Betts is chairman.

HEAVY SUNDAY TRAVELLING

THOUSANDS OF TOURISTS GO THROUGH FULTON EVERY DAY.

Ninety-three automobiles passed the corner at Broadway and First street Sunday afternoon within fifteen minutes, which would be at the rate of 372 an hour.

A census of traffic in Oswego county will be made by a number of special patrolmen on a date not yet fixed for the benefit of the state highway department.

The information will be compiled at the local office and sent to the State Commissioner of Highways to be incorporated in his annual report. On the detailed reports the name of the road is to be shown, the weather, the number of motorcycles, of this state and of other states passing, the number of automobiles of this and other states that pass and also the number of trucks, single and double rigs and information as to the loads they carried.

It is believed that the census will be taken early next month. Patrolmen will be stationed on all the important roads.

BAND CONCERTS AND DANCING LAST EVENING

It was proven last night that band concerts were a success in this city. The local Elks' band played on the east side, with Phillips' band, of Oswego on the west. Community dancing was permitted on West Broadway and after listening to the Elks' band people would either motor or go by trolley to the scene of action on the west side. There were about 100 couple enjoying the cool, open air dancing, conspicuous among them being Edna Hadden, who is a graceful little nine year old dancer.

It was thought some time ago that community dancing would have to be abolished by the city owing to the numerous complaints rendered, but the idea of having a section of the city street set aside for dancing proved a good one and West Broadway was selected.

On the program with the Elks' band were two solists Parker Van Buren and Edmond LaPorte. "Park" pleased the large audience with "Loading up the Mandy Lee" and received much applause. Mr. LaPorte rendered "Memories."

The concerts thus far have been a success and it has been decided that soloists will be heard hereafter.

TROLLEY AND AUTO COLLIDE

A Studebaker touring car belonging to Mr. E. Becker, of Sodus, was struck yesterday afternoon about five o'clock, while crossing over the lower bridge.

The trolley car approaching the city from the north was swinging around the bend on the bridge when the rear of the car swung out and caught the rear fender of the auto. It smashed the fender and the auto was dragged back nearly two rods before the car was stopped.

Fortunately no one was hurt.

We want every person, who has an interest in Fulton to take an interest in YOUR daily paper.

ELECTRIC RAILWAY EMPLOYES DISPUTE ON S., L. N. AND N. LINES WILL BE SETTLED.

Settlement of the wage dispute on the Syracuse, Lake Shore and Northern lines and also the question of the change in the hours of "runs" will probably be reached at a meeting of all the employes of that road Monady. The question of the change in runs is the only one that has been holding up the signing of the new agreement between the company officials and the employes, all of whom are members of the Amalgamated Association of street and Electric Railway Employes.

The agreement when signed will be effective until the first of May, 1917, unless the receivership of the roads ends before that time. It is not expected, however, that the receivership will end until some time after that and the new agreement may be extended beyond.

The dispute between the men and the company it was learned today has been drawn out because of an arbitration clause in the old agreement. They prefer to settle the trouble peacefully and without resort to arbitration if possible by dealing direct with the company officials. A committee is now at work on a schedule of hours and it is believed that the whole matter can be arranged satisfactorily.

MOTHER GOOSE AT THE FULTON FAIR.

For the first time in the history of the wanderings of that famous Old Woman of our nursery days, Mother Goose visited a fair—and that right here in Fulton.

The Camera Man of the Fairy Tales Film Company caught the old lady, and her gander just as they were trying to get by the gateman at the fair without a quarter; and she was followed an taken during her every visit of the day. So that the good people of Fulton will be able later, to see Mother Goose and all of her creations—Tom, the Piper's Son, with his squealing pig, Simple Simon and the Pieman, the Pigs that went to Market, the Cow with the Crumpled Horn—and Mother Goose milking her, and a host of other familiar names, smile out at them from the canvas at the Quirk.

In the picture, the Mayor of our town, the President of the Fair Association, the Judges of events with the objects of their judgment—horses, cows, sheep, goats, and all the rest, will be seen quite to the life; and the roller skating bear has been included for good measure—to the end that the kiddoes who have missed the fair shall have another chance this year.

About one half of the picture is complete—the monster shoe of the Old Woman Who Lived in the Shoe is now standing in the fair grounds ready to be occupied and photographed by the magic camera as soon as the school children can be assembled for the purpose.

Later scenes in the story to be told are to be taken on the farms of Mr. C. R. Guile and others near Fulton; and we are to have a real life-sized movie story all our own.

The ladies of the Lee Memorial Hospital are doing a wise and useful civic work, as well placing their funds in a way to be much augmented by the showing of this motion picture—they surely merit, and no doubt will receive, the support of every live citizen of Fulton.

PEACOCK CLUB MEETINGS.

Two meetings of the Peacock Evangelistic clubs will be held next Sunday. One in the State Street M. E. Church, of which J. H. Howe will be chairman, and representatives will be Frank Lester, H. C. Dana, George Halstead, Alexander Dale, A. B. Kinne, Stephen Bernhardt, David Shaw, S. W. Merrill, J. M. Brown and Brice K. Steele. The other meeting will be held in the Rowlee Schoolhouse, and the chairman will be E. E. Merrill, and the representatives will be Warren Tallman, Ernest Norton, W. J. Ottman, Justin Morrill, Wallace W. Russell, C. E. Hammond, T. H. Marvin, Elmer Harper and W. D. Jones.

MOST RIGID INVESTIGATIONS

MEN AND WOMEN TRAVELERS STRIPPED AND SEARCHED BY GERMAN OFFICIALS.

By Carl W. Ackerman

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Copenhagen, July 20 (by mail)—Everyone who leaves Germany today via Warneumuende for Denmark is stripped to the skin. Ears, nose, teeth and toes are examined to see that no information or plans for the enemy are being carried out.

Reichstag members, wives of officials, correspondents and laborers are treated the same.

An American crossing the border yesterday remarked that before long it would be necessary for the inspection station to be built into Baltic sea so that the travelers could undress on the German border, walk into the water and swim to a waiting station near the ferry and wait for the clothes and baggage to be examined and forwarded by canoe.

When travelers leave the train enter a small wooden shed, resembling in many respects a temporary bath house at an American beach. Here the passports are taken away and shoved into an enclosed room where they are examined. The holders are given numbers.

When the passport of a traveler is finished he is called to another room where he is questioned about the objects of his journey. From here the wayfarer goes to a large room when the baggage is examined while detectives stand in front and in back to see that nothing is slipped by.

Every scrap of paper or card board is taken away, even wrappings and paper lining to boxes. Cotton is removed from medicine bottles. Cigars are examined, some are cut open, chocolate in sealed packages is opened, the wrapping destroyed and half the chocolate broken up into bits to see that nothing is hidden.

Shoes with a new half sole are opened. The searcher feels everything, examines canes to see whether they're hollow, opens umbrellas, holds every collar up to the light to see that nothing is written on the linging.

"After the baggage is examined," said an American woman who crossed the border yesterday, "the men and women are taken into separate compartments, about the size of a large individual bath house and there every bit of clothing is removed. Women are examined by women, men by men.

"The searcher went through every piece of my clothes, examined the border of my underwear and held almost every inch of my clothes up to the light. Even the roses I wore were examined petal by petal, my wrist

"I had to take down my hair and my scalp was examined thoroughly—watch was opened back and front, so also my shoes, umbrella and hat. I suppose, to see that I didn't have a map of Metz concealed thereon. Then my ears, teeth, hands, toes and back were examined, but fortunately I was not a suspicious woman because I was not washed in alcohol to see if there were any concealed maps drawn on my skin. The alcohol and a basin of water with towels were there and on a shelf I noticed a bottle of aromatic spirits of ammonia and drinking water for those who might faint under examination, but in every way the women were courteous and gentle."

After that was over the passengers were permitted to board the ship, but there they soon encountered a score of spies who watched for every move and who listened to every remark. The Germans take no chances with anyone.

Articles which are taken away during the examination are wrapped up before the eyes of the traveler and posted back to an address he gives of any friends in Berlin. Only suspicious articles are confiscated.

At present no rubber goods of any kind can be taken out no matter if it is the most necessary article. Not an ounce of rubber leaves Germany today.

HELEN E. CALKINS.

The death of Mrs. Helen E. Calkins occurred early this morning at her home at 169 South Second street. The deceased had been a resident of this city for fifty years and was the wife of the late Perry Calkins. The only near survivors are several nephews and nieces. The funeral will be held from the home Monday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. The Rev. M. J. Peters officiating. Burial will be made at Mt. Adnah cemetery.

THE PAJAMA NIGHT GOWN

A ONE-PIECE GARMENT THAT IS BECOMING QUITE POPULAR.

By Margaret Mason,

(Written for the United Press)

Again of nighties now I sing,
Of nighties sheer that closely cling,
So fine they'll pass inside a ring,
And O, they cost like anything.

New York, August 19—If there should be a shortage in the Georgette crepe output goodness knows what would become of us. Not only are most all our day clothes made of this filmy fabric, but all of our night clothes as well. So we couldn't go out and we couldn't go to bed. The chances are we'd take the only course left to us and go daffy.

However, no such dire calamity presages at the moment of going to press. The Georgette crepe industry flourishes; so likewise does the diaphanous nightgown fashioned of this far from opaque material.

The georgette crepe nighty is truly a thing of beauty, but hardly a joy forever as it scarcely has the lasting qualities of a nainsook or even a crepe de chine gown.

Some of the most exquisite models are the most simple, relying on the perfection of the material for their charm. One Empire model of flesh tinted Georgette is sleeveless and os bordered around the neck and the armholes with a heading of fine footing. A wide band of flesh satin ribbon run under the footing makes the high waistline.

A unique finish on another flesh toned model is formed of tiny pale blue baby ribbon. One with this finish in pink, and another in mauve are also shown. All of the gowns come in white and ivory also.

Another charming finish is a tiny hemstitched banding of the Crepe Georgette itself, either in blue or mauve on either flesh gowns and pink, blue or mauve on the white.

Lavender, by the way, is rapidly superseding that erstwhile Frenchy Favorite, pale blue, as a combination with flesh underwear and touches of mauve are found on nearly every smart new article of lingerie this season.

The pajama girl is not the rarity now that she used to be. She is no longer the pink pajama girl, however, although she still is the pink of perfection. Alluring indeed are the 1916 pajamas of maize, mauve, blue or rose broche narrowly banded in lavender, all save one which has a nile green finish.

For the vacillating maid who cannot quite make up her mind between the enchanting nighties and the alluring pajamas comes a pajama night gown, if you please. It is of pink batiste, crepe de chine or Crepe Georgette and is cut in one with a nightie top and an ending of full pantaloons like Pierrot always wears with a cunning lace edged frill around the ankles. Bifurcated fashions also have spread to negligees, and a recent imported model has full Turkish trousers of crepe de chine, a crush taffeta girdle of contrasting shade, and a blouse and loose coat of crepe georgette. The blouse is finished around the neck with a wide fringed double ruche of the taffeta.

LAWYERS BEING HELD UP

A new swindling game is being worked on lawyers in this section.

A man giving a bogus name has walked into the offices of several attorneys, says he lives in a nearby town and then relates how his nephew has just had his hand cut off in a railroad accident and he wants to bring suit. The lawyer accepts the case and then just as the man is leaving the office he asks for a loan of $5 and proffers his note. In several cases he has been successful.

The canning season is here and the Hospital will appreciate any donations of canned fruit, jelly, etc. The hospital also solicits fruit, berries, etc., with or without sugar for canning. 506c

The Worm That Turned.

Just by looking at him as he sat in the witness chair one could tell that he was harmless, but a close inspection would also have revealed that there lurked behind his narrow and apologetic orbs a latent fire indicative of a past when his life had been all his own—a past now long distant. His general air was that of one having been detected by the minister while hoeing his garden on Sunday.

"YES, VERY."

Counsel for the plaintiff in the case proceeded to ask him the usual questions:

"Please state your name to the jury."

"John Jones."

"Your age?"

"Fifty-eight."

"Married?"

Then it was that John slid lower into this chair as a flash of determination came into his eye, and he answered in an voice that could be heard distinctly.

"Yes, very."

In the rear of the room a woman of 250 pounds glared at the timid little witness as he was seen trying to conceal a half-worried smile beneath his straggling mustache.—Indianapolis News.

Rise Above Them.

Then welcome each rebuff
That turns earth's smoothness rough,
Each sting that bids not sit nor stand, but go!
Be our joy three parts pain!
Strive and hold cheap the strain;
Learn, nor account the pang; dare, never grudge the throe. —Browning.

Bad Place to Talk Shop.

"The trouble with some men," said an observer, "is that they have such an exaggerated sense of caution that they cannot adapt themselves to new conditions quickly enough. They are like a certain recruit in England. He was a typical, cautious English store clerk before he was taken into the army, and he was not making very rapid progress in military science as it is taught to the rookie.

"'Charge!' yelled the drill sergeant one day. But the recruit stood stock still.

"'To whose account?' he inquired with instinctive caution."

Reason For Insistence.

The vicar of a certain parish in England stopped an aged parishioner and congratulated him on his approaching marriage.

"I am sorry," he added, "that a prior engagement will prevent me from performing the ceremony on Tuesday, but no doubt my curate will do just as well."

"Oh, nowt o' t' soort!" ejaculated the old fellow. "That be 'anged for a tale! Mebbe, now, ye'd be at liberty on Wednesday?"

"Well," was the reply, "I certainly shall be free on Wednesday, but"—

"Then Wednesday it is," went on the prospective bridegroom. "Just mak' a note on it, parson."

"But surely," protested the vicar, "you'll never postpone the wedding for twenty-four hours"—

"Aw'd postpone it for twenty-four year if necessary," came the firm reply. "You've allus done this job for me, an' you allus will as long as Aw live."

Then the vicar remembered that the old fellow had been three times previously married.

Most and Least.

Fred was told that if he were to take the castor oil without complaint he would get 5 cents to spend for candy. Then his mother sent him to the corner drug store with 15 cents—10 cents for the oil and 5 cents for the candy.

Arriving at the drug store Fred decided to buy the sweetmeats first and told the clerk that he wanted a nickel's worth of candy.

"What kind of candy do you want?" asked the clerk.

"Gimme the kind you get the most for a nickel," answered Fred.

The clerk complied, and Fred said rather reluctantly:

"Now gimme some castor oil, I want the kind you get the least for a dime."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Shrewd Beggar.

A man while walking with two ladies through one of the principal streets of London saw a man begging. One of the ladies, who had evidently seen the mendicant before, said:

"This is the most singular man I ever heard of. No matter how much money you give him, he always returns the change, and never keeps more than a penny."

"Why, what a fool he must be!" remarked the man. "But I'll try him and put him to a little trouble."

So saying, the man pulled from his pocket a sovereign, which he dropped into the beggar's hat. The mendicant turned the coin over two or three times, examined it closely, and then, raising his eyes to the countenance of the benevolent man, said:

"Well, I'll not adhere to my usual custom in this case. I'll keep it all for luck, but don't do it again."

The donor opened his eyes in astonishment and passed on, while the ladies smiled with delight.

The Children's Play Corner

Curious Experiment.

Take a piece of pasteboard or heavy paper about five inches square; roll it into a tube, with one end just large enough to fit around the eye and the other end smaller. Hold the tube between the thumb and first finger of the right hand (do not grasp it with the whole hand); put the large end close against the right eye and with the left hand hold a book with the edge squarely against the side of the tube. Be sure to keep both eyes open and there will appear to be a hole through the book and objects seem as if seen through the hole instead of through the tube. The left hand can be held against the tube instead of the book, and the hole will seem to be through the hand.

A Milk Toast.

And drain the foaming cup
Of pure, sweet milk that's full of vim;
'Twill help you to grow up.

Long live the mooly cow, I say,
For she is kind and good.
She eats green grass all through the day
To make us healthful food.

Call Ball.

This game is good fun and is best played out of doors with eight or ten players. One is chosen to toss the ball, and each player is given a number. The players take positions not farther than the ball can easily be thrown. The tosser, when throwing the ball, calls one of the players by his number—8, 10, 2, or whatever he may choose. The player of that number must run and catch the ball, not letting it bound more than once. A good tosser keeps the players on the alert, guessing who will be called next, and by sometimes calling one at a good distance from himself excitement is lent to the game.

Boy Scouts Under Canvas.

Reports which have come to the national headquarters of the Boy Scouts of America movement in New York city from all sections of the country indicate that there are more boy scouts under canvas this summer than ever before in the history of the organization. Scout camps have been established in practically every larger scout center in the country. In some of these camps as many as 1,500 boys will receive the benefits of outdoor life and training in the fascinating and practical subjects of scout craft.

Shadow Tag.

The player who is "it" tries to step or jump on to the shadow of some other player and if successful calls out the name of the player. That player then becomes "it." Children should keep in the sunshiny places where a shadow can easily be made.

Riddle.

A certain room has eight corners; in every corner sits a cat, on every cat's tail sits a cat, and before each cat is a cat. How many cats in the room?

A Frock For Midsummer

For the midsummer garden party or tea this frock of figured organdy and taffeta is the last word in fashion. Narrow frills of the silk outline the tunic and collar.

Floral printed organdy combined with plain taffeta would make up charmingly in this design, with draped skirt and dainty jumper held in at the waist with triple belts stitched above a tiny peplum. The underblouse is of taffeta, the front, back and sleeves being cut in one. Whether the tunic is made with or without points at the sides and back is a matter of personal preference. In medium size the dress requires 4½ yards 36-inch figured organdy and 3½ yards taffeta.

By closely observing the cutting guide it will be noticed that some sections of the pattern are cut from an open width of material and some from the fabrics after it has been folded in half. The blouse front and back section is laid on an open width, and from the material remaining at either side the sleeve bands and collar may be cut. For the short sleeve cut off lower part of sleeve along double "oo" perforations.

The skirt is cut entirely from the organdy that is folded in half, because the front and back gores are laid directly on the lengthwise fold of the goods. This rule also obtains in cutting the foundation.

One has a choice of three or four lines for the neck. For the open effect, cut out neck of blouse ⅝ inch above small "o" perforations. The corners of the collar may also be cut off, changing the pointed effect if desired. The small "o" perforations along the lower edge of the tunic indicate how the points may be cut off at the sides and back.

The fabrics of the moment have much to do with the appropriateness of the styles. The soft finished, pliable materials adapt themselves to all modes, whether they be perfectly straight or puffed; shirred and plaited.

The First Comedy.

The first recorded comedy was played at Athens B. C. 578, when Susarion and Dolon, the earliest traveling actors, performed a comedy of Susarion's composition on a movable stage mounted upon four wheels. The new form of play was so successful that the actors were rewarded by the grateful populace with a cask of wine and a basket of figs. Susarion belonged to Megaris, a state of ancient Greece, whose inhabitants were celebrated for their coarse humor and who in their villages during the evenings were wont to hold what they called a comus, really a revel, in which impromptu acting, coupled with buffoonery, played a considerable part. From this word we have our comedy.

Weather and the Moon.

Those who ascribe potency to the moon at certain stages of its visible march eastward through the nocturnal heavens as a matter affecting terrestrial weather appear to overlook the fact that the operation of that luminary is constant and that its changes are going on all the time. Why special magic should be imputed to the change from one quarter to another, from crescent to full, from full to gibbous, from gibbous to the final wane, is difficult to understand. Yet sober minded men and women will gravely inform you that there is such magic and will believe it rather more sincerely than they believe some things in their Bibles.—Lowell Courier-Citizen.

ARMY BANS WATERMELON.

Breeds Flies, as Rind Can't Be Effectively Destroyed.

El Paso, Tex.—Gloom spread over the army camps here with the news that watermelons have been banned by the authorities.

It is not that melons of the southwest carry infection or that they are unwholesome. The army fly expert is behind the order. He has discovered that watermelon rind is the only kind of garbage that cannot be properly burned or effectively buried. To watermelon rind is attributed the present fly pest, and flies, says the expert, breed disease.

TAGGART'S DOG IN CAPITOL.

He Leads Pointer to Democratic Cloak Room—Page Watches Him.

Washington.—Senator Tom Taggart introduced an innovation in the senate recently that stirred that austere body to mild revolt. Taggart led a pointer dog into the Democratic cloakroom, it was learned.

The senator from Indiana said he did not take the dog into the senate chamber. He declared that it was a valuable dog, and he did not care to turn him adrift. A senate page guarded the canine during the session.

Michelangelo's Attempt at Suicide.

Michelangelo after receiving a painful injury to his leg by falling from a scaffold while at work upon "The Last Judgment" became so melancholy that he shut himself in his room, refused to see any one and "resolved to let himself die." Fortunately his intentions were frustrated by the celebrated physician Bacio Rontini, who learned by accident of his condition.

Busy All the Time.

Little Howard came in the other day, crying and rubbing several bumps caused by a series of "butts" administered by a pet sheep.

"Well, Howard," said his sympathetic auntie, "what did you do when the sheep knocked you down?"

"I didn't do anything. I was getting up all the time."

Force of Habit.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Little Girl's Visit to Fairyland.

A WONDERFUL ADVENTURE.

Beautiful Things She Beheld on a Remarkable Journey—Song That Always Drives Away Loneliness—Other Reading Games For Small People.

Now, youngsters, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly, I am going to tell you the story of

THE ENCHANTED SHELL.

Myra wandered along the beach, wishing very much that she might see a mermaid, or a merman, or at the very least a sea serpent. She was lonely and wanted something exciting to happen.

"If only the days of fairy tales were not over!" she sighed as she sat down in the hollow of the rocks and rested her curly head against some lovely seaweed dried by the sun. As she looked dreamily out to sea she was startled to hear some one singing close to her ear:

"Oh, don't you know the way
To the land of elf and fay,
To that fair strand of golden sand
Where it is always day?
Then follow, follow me!
To my cave beneath the sea."

Myra delightedly raised her head to find that the song seemed to come from the mouth of a large conch shell lying close to her. As she gazed the shell grew larger and yet larger until it opened invitingly to her.

"Oh, this is too lovely!" cried the little girl, tripping into the shell without much hesitation.

As she tripped down the mysterious passage of the seashell the light grew more and more rosy, the music more beautiful. It was indeed like a song from fairyland which still led her on.

Suddenly the hall widened into a marvelous green chamber, in which grew wonderful sea flowers. On a throne made of pearl sat a very lovely lady, with long golden hair, pink cheeks, smiling eyes, robed in green with trimming of fluffy white, like the crest of a wave.

"You are right welcome, my child," she said to Myra, who stood abashed before such beauty. "I am the spirit of the seashell, and it is my voice which sings to little children whenever they bend their heads to listen. They who hear my song are never lonely again. They realize that the world of fairy lies very close to them."

As she spoke soft music sounded, and Myra seemed to be lifted up, up, up, until she found herself lying on the rocks just as she was when she first heard the song of the shell. As she sat up she caught sight of the shell and, snatching it up, carried it home with her, remembering the words of the fairy, "Those who hear my song will never be lonely again."

GIRLS BACK HOME ADMIRE THE PICTURES OF BOYS ON BORDER

One Writes to Washington Guardsman and Hopes to Meet Him When the Stay on Frontier Is Over and He Returns to Capital.

The Ghost Walks and Men Are Made Happy, but They Find Few Places to Spend Their Money—Other Camp Notes.

SOLDIER boys along the border who permit themselves to be photographed and later find their likeness reproduced in newspapers had better look out. This is leap year and "all's fair in love and war."

"You can't always sometimes tell," is the way Private Howard Hiltner, Company M, Twenty-second United States infantry, sums up the situation. Hiltner is stationed in Warren, Ariz., where eight companies of his regiment are camped close by the signal corps and field hospital units of the District national guard.

Hiltner and several other members of his company were on guard at the water tanks on the mountain side above Warren that hold the water supply for the community. A representative of the press who accompanied the District troops to the border climbed up the mountain to take a photograph of the surrounding country. To give it a warlike touch he asked Hiltner to take a position beside one of the tanks so that he was shown in the foreground of the picture.

A week or so later this photograph was published and, with it, the information that Hiltner formerly lived in the national capital.

Letter From Lonely Girl.

Then Hiltner obtained the following letter way out here in Arizona:

Dear Friend—No doubt when you read this you will think the writier is a fit subject for an insane asylum. But it is just this way:

I am alone up in this town. I am from the sunny south—South Carolina. And reading the news I found a picture of a fine looking fellow, and he did look so lonesome I thought of writing this right away. Then I said he might be married, and then maybe he would say some things which would not look nice in print.

But today I just feel so blue and was looking in my writing box when I found your picture again. So forgive me if I have done wrong in writing you, but I am going to live in hope of receiving a reply to this.

It is so very hot here I know it must be dreadful on the border. Hope you are not working too hard and that you are enjoying good health and being good. I will send you the picture which I cut from the paper. I am your unknown friend.

P. S.—By the way, you are from this town? I like it quite well, as much as I have seen of it.

You can see by this picture how lonesome you look. Most any girl would take a chance on receiving an answer. In fact, a number already have remarked about your good looks, but I did not tell them that I did not know, as it would be too bold, so I kept my secret to myself.

Please return picture.

The picture referred to in the letter is a clipping from the Washington Star showing a reproduction of Hiltner's photograph and the view beyond.

The Ghost Walks.

The Sixty-ninth of New York, first out of the armory and last to leave for the border, was the first regiment for whom the ghost walked. The men had begun to doubt that there was any money left in Uncle Sam's strong box for fighting purposes when Paymaster Captain William Brennan dropped into McAllen from Harlingen appropriately guarded with the pay for the soldiers of the First brigade.

Great doings followed the trail of the ghost in the Sixty-ninth. The men had their money at last, and then they discovered that there was no place to spend it.

Many passes were issued, to be sure, but the drink stores in Mission were guarded, and no soldier was allowed to enter one. And, anyhow, they close in Texas at 9:30 o'clock. The boys of the Second and Fourteenth were in the same boat. But they had their money.

Pay day has made all the difference in the world to the soldiers. Nearly everybody has been broke, and those who could have been sending home for money. Those who had the coin lent it to others, as far as their roll would go, until at last all were in the same boat. Of course this doesn't apply to the millionaire privates and officers with big incomes.

The Weather Bad.

The weather in Texas now would make the best natured person in the world peevish at times. The old residents, one and all, declare that they have not seen the like of it in seven years, and they don't know what to make of it and give other such qualifications, but the fact remains that the weather is there and the troops are experiencing it. As an illustration:

For four consecutive days heavy downpours were the regular thing. On one day there were ten separate and distinct showers. These rains do not soak more than a few inches into this heavy loam soil, but they play havoc with conditions on the surface of the roads. One day the main street of McAllen is a mass of soft, puddly mud. The next, however, so intense has been the sun that 75 per cent of the mud has disappeared and parts of the street are as dry as if there had never been any rain in months. So from getting accustomed to the mud the soldiers have suddenly to face new conditions that mean dust in a couple of days. All this change from the disagreeable to the other extreme of the disagreeable is trying on the nerves, and some amiable dispositions are on the breaking point.

However, by gradual degrees the men are getting used to conditions. While contentment is not here, resignation is beginning to appear, and the boys will ultimately not find their work there so irksome as it has been to many.

Horses Were Unbroken.

Had the Maryland men in Camp Ord for whom the consignment of horses arrived the other night known that more than half the number were unbroken western bronchos they would have been less happy. But not until they first tried to ride them did they discover that many of them had evidently never been saddled and were unfamiliar with the bridle.

One of the horses refused to be mounted. Volunteers were called for, but the boys had a good look at the wicked eyes and slashing hoofs of the enraged animal, and it was a case of "let George do it" until Private Brewer of Company B, one time horse breaker by profession, undertook to handle him. With one swing Brewer was in the saddle. In a second the horse was bucking, rearing and kicking. The horse did everything but lie down, and for awhile things looked bad for Brewer. His skill conquered in the end, however, and in a half hour the horse accepted defeat gracefully.

The men in the Maryland camp are becoming more and more pleased with army life and, knowing it to be what it is, are surprised that recruiting back home has not been more successful. Several of the enlisted men have signified their intention of enlisting in the regular army when the troops go back to their home stations. Many of the officers have applied for assignment temporarily to the regular regiments in order that they may get a more detailed education in the duties of an army officer, and in several cases this request has been granted.

Suffrage Smokes.

When the Pennsylvania suffragists sent a big box of "smokes" down to the soldier boys on the border they had no idea that they were going to inspire any of the embryo Kiplings in khaki to burst forth into song. Nevertheless that is just what has happened. Here's the evidence, as culled from the Butler (Pa.) Citizen, which has a war correspondent right on the spot where the "smokes" are being enjoyed:

SUFFRAGIST SMOKE.

While our boys down on the border
Keep the Mexicans in order
There's none to think that duty is a joke;
Over burning sands patrolling
They're in need of much consoling,
So the suffragists are sending them a smoke.

While they're puffing those perfectos
Burglar bands of insurrectos
Had best be careful where they dare to roam,
For each heart in khaki packet
Has great love (with sand to back it)
For the kind and thoughtful ones he left back home.

When he adds to sense of duty
Memories of that thoughtful beauty
Who in tenderness has sent her boy a smoke,
It brings such an inspiration
That he fights like all tarnation
And he makes a fighting bobcat seem a joke.

When the greasers have sought cover
And the cruel war is over
Recollections of the "smoke" will linger still,
And when comes the day for voting
You will find he'll still be toting
Recollections of that smoke—you bet he will!

For Progressive Training.

Colonel Harry H. Bandholtz, chief of staff of the division at McAllen, has called for the daily schedules of all the regiments of the division on the border to frame a progressive scheme of instruction designed to bring all units into form at approximately the same time. Heretofore the hardening has been directed by the brigadier generals and the colonels.

Regular army officers believe that within three months the division could be brought not to the grade of first line troops, but, as one of them expressed it, to "near first line troops." For the present the plan of marches in large organizations will probably be abandoned and the unit of instruction may revert to the squad. Seasoned officers are impressed with the army saying that "you can't feed calculus to a kindergarten," which they regard as the American idea of military education, and while the division is by no means rated as a kindergarten the analogy in some respects is not remote. An experienced army officer summed it up thus:

"It takes just as long to train one kind of soldier as it does another, whether cavalry, artillery or infantry, because training is discipline, and discipline is habit, and you can't acquire habit in a week. No matter how intelligent a body of troops may be, they may go all to pieces under fire unless thoroughly disciplined. I saw that happen in the Spanish-American war."

CANADA'S LADY.

The Duchess of Devonshire Back In Old Scenes.

A FRIEND OF QUEEN MARY.

The Daughter of a Former Governor General, Lord Lansdowne, Returns to Ottawa, This Time With Her Husband, the Duke of Devonshire.

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire are likely to prove a great success in Canada when the duke takes the place of the Duke of Connaught as governor general. As for the duchess, she will be welcomed to Ottawa by hundreds of friends and acquaintances who recall the years of her girlhood, which she spent there as Lady Evelyn

DUCHESS OF DEVONSHIRE.

Fitzmaurice during the governor generalship of her father, the Marquis of Lansdowne. The duke, although head of one of the most historic houses of England—that of Cavendish, thus occupying a position in the very front rank of his sovereign's peers as owner of a dukedom dating from the seventeenth century—and a Knight of the Garter, is the most simple and unaffected of men.

Enormously rich, his wealth being derived from ancestral estates that extend over some 200,000 acres and from big mines in the counties of Lancaster and Derby, he is a very clever and sound business man and can boast that he has never had an idle moment in his life. He has been chairman until now of a great shipbuilding company and of a number of other big industrial and mining concerns, mostly connected more or less directly with his. He owns almost the whole of the prosperous and important seaside town of Eastbourne, which he and his duchess have done much to develop.

The Duke of Devonshire is perhaps the most intimate personal friend of King George, while the duchess is the mistress of the robes and dominant member of the household of Queen Mary, their close relations with one another dating back to their early girlhood.

USES FOR MINT.

Be Ingenious if You Would Wring All Its Flavor.

There are innumerable ways in which the ever present spearmint bed ought to be utilized besides for the regular mint jelly, ice or punch.

First.—Boil a sprig with new potatoes, beans or peas.

Second.—In spicing young beets add a sprig to the heated vinegar and spices, or in canning the same simply lay a few leaves in the top of the can before sealing.

Third.—Chop finely and sprinkle, just before serving, over an iced fruit compote or over a sweet fruit salad.

Fourth.—Used in the same way over a chicken or veal salad it gives a decidedly piquant flavor.

Fifth.—Add, chopped fine, as you would parsley, to deviled eggs or ham.

Sixth.—Chop coarsely and add three heaping tablespoonfuls to one-half cup weak vinegar with brown sugar to taste, to serve with roast lamb.

Seventh.—Last, there is no greater delicacy than candied mint leaves if one has the patience to make them successfully.

As Others See Us.

The last but by no means the least important thing to attend to in dressing is to see that everything is neatly arranged in the back. This is not so difficult as is generally supposed. A long mirror is almost a necessity, and many startling views would not be disclosed if a cheval glass were included in the toilet set. The hanging of a skirt, the placing of fancy pins, the finest detail of the arrangement of the hair, the adjusting of collar and waist from the back are all such little things, but can ruin the effect of the whole costume if not properly arranged.

Uncooked Ketchup.

Chop together half a peck of ripe tomatoes, three red and three green peppers without the seeds, four celery stalks and two onions to make uncooked catsup. Add a cupful of tarragon vinegar, half a cupful of black and white mustard seed, a cupful of brown sugar, a teaspoonful of black pepper, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, half a cupful of salt and a pint of vinegar. Mix well and put into jars.

NO TAX ON "NEAR BEER"

MUST NOT CONTAIN OVER ONE-HALF PER CENT. OF ALCOHOL.

"Near Beer" or "temperance beer" cannot be taxed and can be sold at picnics, outings, in dry towns and other places where the sale of the regular beer is prohibited.

This is a ruling just handed down by the Excise department at Washington and received by internal revenue officials in this city today.

If the beverage contains the smallest fraction over one half of one per cent. of alcohol, howexer, it is taxable and persons selling it are liable to all the penalties of selling without a license.

But few if any Central New York Companies manufacture the "near beer," for the reason that it ferments rapidly and becomes the genuine article when exposed long in the sun. If it is shipped a long distance and during the journey changes into the real stuff and is sold as "near beer" the manufacturer is responsible for the penalties if an excise inspector takes it into his head to make an examination.

The manufacturer of "near beer" was started by the manufacturers of soft drinks. They were required to pay no tax on their product and the brewers objected. The Excise department took the matter up and decided that the brewers could also be exempt if they could produce a beverage containing less than the stipulated amount of alcohol. It has previously been the custom of the excise officials not to allow the manufacture of taxable and non-taxable articles in the same plant.

"Temperance beer" is made in the same way as regular beer. During certain stages of manufacture it contains the same amount of alcohol as the other, but is then diluted until it is very weak.

"COLD STORAGE" STAMPED EGGS

WILL PROTECT CUSTOMERS AGAINST IMPOSITION

A recent ruling of Commissioner Dillon of the State Food and Markets department was to the effect that every cold storage egg must be stamped with the words "cold storage."

There are 650,000,000 eggs in cold storage in this state.

Now the question arises. Who is going to stamp these 650,000,000 eggs?

Commission merchants who deal in eggs insist that the retailers, the little dairymen and the delicatessen dealers must identify every one of the 650,000,000 eggs that comes out of cold storage to the consumer.

Perhaps the families of the delicatessen dealers, and the grocers would find great happiness and enjoyment in imprinting "cold storage" on all such eggs. Besides the practice would teach the younger generation the delicacy of touch. The imprint must be made gently, very gently. Otherwise, there would be need, in the case of some eggs, or in some cases of eggs—or gas protectors, and gas protectors are expensive. They are in great demand "somewhere" in every country that is fighting in Europe. The manufacturers of gas masks are making as much money as the capable and industrious hens are earning—not for the farmers—but for the commission merchants and the retailers.

But if neither the commission merchants or the retailers and their families wish to undertake the job of stamping 650,000,000 eggs there are many "bad eggs" in this town who might be willing to accept the job as egg stampers.

And surely employment in a cold storage warehouse would attract them. Think of working with the mercury around freezing point while without good eggs, respectable citizens are being parboiled in a temperature ranging between eighty and one hundred degrees.

GOOD DEEDS.

DAIRYMEN MAY STRIKE OCT. 1

FARMERS WANT MORE MONEY FOR THEIR MILK

Commissioner John J. Dillon of the State Food and Markets Bureau believed that his department should be empowered to act as agent for marketing dairy products with the purpose of preventing a general strike of milk producers. It is officially announced that the department has received information that the dairymen have about made up their minds to strike October 1, unless their demands for increased pay were met by the dealers.

An investigation is now being made by the Wicks' joint legislative committee and by the Department of Agriculture. The Department of Foods and Markets has been studying conditions from the viewpoint of the producer and is prepared to recommend the placing of the office at the disposal of the farmers in an effort to obtain more money for them.

While Dr. Dillon's statement is not clear on the point, its tenor indicates that he does not contemplate an immediate advance in large cities such as New York, but proposes to give the dairymen more money by eliminating costs and reducing the profits of distribution.

"The plan," says the statement, "needs the co-operation of the dealers, but it can be operated without them. The dealers on the other hand need the milk and they cannot get along without it. They would not be afraid of a strike because they know all the farmers will not continue for very long to spoil their milk. Such a procedure would also alienate the sympathy of the consumer and after a temporary disturbance would work for the advantage of the dealer."

New Method of Teaching Children

Winifred Stoner, Jr., who could recite the first book of Vergil when she was three years old, could speak six languages when she was six, is a finely developed child physically, alert, amiable, joyous, normal in every particular. She was prepared for college at the age of ten. The gain in time made in imparting knowledge to her was solely the result of utilizing all the time children usually devote to play for acquiring information. This was accomplished through an advanced Froebel system originated by Mrs. Stoner. Every game contained interesting information, and the familiar objects in daily contact were fraught with charm. The trees, the birds and flowers, colors, sounds—everything contributed to natural education. Memory was installed; concentration and observation were developed.

Our Flora.

American florists, it is declared, are now able to produce in this country practically all the flowers and plants for which they were formerly dependent on Europe. "With the exception of certain bulbs indigenous to Holland, and boxwood, there is nothing which the American grower cannot produce better than any foreigner," says an expert.

GOOD CAUSE FOR ALARM

These Figures Will Make Fulton People Take Notice.

Deaths from kidney disease have increased seventy-two per cent in twenty years. People overdo nowadays in so many ways that the constant filtering of poisoned blood weakens the kidneys. Beware of fatal Bright's disease. When backache or urinary ills suggest weak kidneys, use Doan's Kidney Pills, live carefully, take things easy and avoid heavy eating. Doan's Kidney Pills command confidence, for no other kidney remedy is so widely used or so generally successful. Home endorsement is the best proof of merit. Read this Fulton resident's story:

Mrs. Peter Pullen, 311 Erie street, Fulton, says: "I had lumbago and could hardly get around to attend to my housework. I used two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and they acted just as represented. I have had no trouble from my back or kidneys since."

POULTRY and EGGS

HENS NEED VACATION.

Period of Rest Should Come During the Molting Season.

It is the practice of some to get their pullets laying as soon as they can, preferably in the fall of the year, and keep them laying more or less during the winter and then with the return of warm weather to force them to lay to the top notch and keep them at it as long as possible, writes Grant Davis in the American Agriculturist. When they are laid out they are at once disposed of. Managed in this way, a hen is not fed through an idle season, but there are objections which make the plan impracticable in the majority of cases. If a hen is kept on for two or three weeks she must have a vacation. To try to force eggs all the time not only will meet with failure, but will put the hens out of condition and permanently impair their productivity too early in their career. Centering around the season of molt should be the season of rest, and the true way to hasten the molt is to give the hens a preparatory vacation with change of diet.

For some years I have made it a practice practically to stop feeding the hens about the middle of June. Before this some of the underlings will have got into the roving and grazing habit, and with the early sun they are out in the fields looking for bugs and picking grass. But the majority of them resent the omission of their usual feed of grain and will stand around looking for it, but in a few mornings they, too, will start out to hunt without waiting to be fed. With a small feed of some grain at night they get along very well. They soon get rid of that surplus fat and their whole system gets a renovating. On the range they acquire hardy habits and thus general health improves in tone and vigor.

Of course this plan of summer management refers to farm conditions or when a sufficient range is available where the fowls can get a good part of their living from weed seeds, grass, waste grain, insects, etc. It is also adapted to the farm in that it reduces to a minimum the care of the flock at a time when farm work is most pressing and all available labor required for planting and harvesting.

Managed in this way, I find that the hens are disposed to begin the molt. By the middle of August the new feathers will be started on the majority, although there are always some stragglers. At this time I begin feeding again. It is surprising how quickly they respond in egg production. They will continue laying well all the fall, slacking up only on the approach of cold weather in the latter part of November. Eggs always command a good price during the autumn, even in the early portions, when it is still warm.

THE PARIS STYLE HINTS

NEW FALL COLORS AND COMBINATIONS SOME FRENCH CREATIONS—BROCADES AND BEAD EMBROIDERIES.

Writing from Paris, where notwithstanding war conditions, there will be a showing of new modes this month, my correspondent sends a number of interesting style items. The very dark brown that has been in for several seasons, is gaining new prominence in fashionable combination, with beige, plum and aubergine. Costumes of plum colored materials are embroidered in beige, in gray and in blue, and navy blue is embroidered in combinations of all these shades.

Coat Dresses and Furs.

Long coats and coat dresses are

McCall Design

notable in the new showing for Fall, and the odd collars and capes that made their appearance in "Summer Furs" this year are to be repeated for cooler temperatures. Gray mole is to be very much worn, with broadtail and all the natural pelts including sable, while Australian opossum that came into prominence some seasons back and lapsed into complete oblivion is revived, for the gray contrast that promises to be the smart note in accessories. Rabbit no longer in masquerade—is frankly brought out in capes, bands and other trimmings for sumptuous warm wraps and coats.

Sashes and Girdles.

The narrow show string girdle of the Summer is repeated, and tied in a number of new ways. Sashes tied under the left arm are a feature of girlish frocks. Brocaded ribbon especially velvet flowered brocades on a satin ground are notably important. Such sashes usually have the ends trimmed with tiny overlapping ruffles, fringes or metal laces, to keep them flat and allow the full beauty of the design to manifest itself.

Whole dresses built of ribbon combined with lace or net are very notable. Skirts in evening gowns are a bit longer yet one does not see much of the "long all round" type that has been propheeied for the coming seasons. Lucile comes pretty near this length in most of her formal gowns, and it is well to bear this tendency in mind in planning ahead. Certainly skirts can not go higher than the Summer's showing, so they must come down to change. Fullness remains, and the liking for cross trimmings, but all flares are out and hoops a dead issue in the world of fashion.

Fall Brides

Bridal outfits for Fall will be carefully selected but comprise few pieces of Lady Duff Gordon's advice is followed. She argues with reason that styles change so fast that a woman would better reserve some of her expenditure until after the wedding and fill in with up-to-date articles as needed. It is a great mistake to suppose that fashionable women hesitate to wear repeatedly a dress that suits them, rather than to constantly change for the mere sake of novelty. In street attire especially modish women with plenty of means, are apt to be conservative. Not everyone will agree that the bridal gown should be worn only once, and laid away in lavender with its accessories, but aside from this most people will consider the advice sensible.

LUCY CARTER.

BACON WILL OPPOSE WHITMAN

THE GOVERNOR'S ENEMIES TRYING TO AROUSE OPPOSITION.

(By Times Correspondent)

Albany, N. Y., August 19—With former Ambassador to France Robert Bacon in the field as an opponent to Governor Whitman in the Repub primaries, political enemies of the state's executive are now looking around for a man to enter the lists against him. Harvey D. Hinman, of Binghamton has refused to do so.

In Central New York there are many Republicans who would join in a battle against Governor Whitman. Francis Hendricks of Onondaga county is one. Mr. Hendricks has been opposed to Hughes since the latter attacked him during the insurance investigations, Mr. Hendricks being state superintendent of insurance at the time. As a delegate to the Republican convention at Chicago Mr. Hendricks voted early and late against Mr. Hughes and was joined by the other delegate, Willard A. Hill. Governor Whitman was one of Hughes' most enthusiastic boosters. It is said that during the convention Mr. Hendricks threatened Mr. Whitman that he would oppose him for renomination and re-election if the latter did not stop his open advocation of Hughes. Whitman was deaf to his threat and made the speech nominating Mr. Hughes. As a result Mr. Hendricks is ready to fight Whitman and looks upon the present situation as his golden opportunity.

In other counties in this section of the state the anti-Whitman movement is growing. Republicans all over the state are afraid that Whitman will not be their strongest candidate and that he might be defeated by Justice Seabury, avowedly, Democracy's best. Most of the organization leaders, however, cling to the opinion that it is better to take a chance and stand pat rather than turn the governor down as this would be an admission that his administration has been a failure and furnish the Democrats with huge bales of campaign material.

The chief trouble with the effort to wrest the nomination from Whitman is the inability of the leaders to find a suitable man to run against him. Harvey D. Hinman, of Binghamton was the man most often suggested, but it is now said that he will not enter the race.

William Barnes of course is back of the move to defeat Whitman. Theodore Roosevelt is another who is not strong for the renomination of the chief executive and the strange spectacle may yet be presented of these two bitter political enemies working for the same end.

Roosevelt has been invited by the Syracuse Republican Escort Club to make an address there and launch the battle against the governor at the annual banquet of that organization. Roosevelt has not yet replied to the invitation.

Republicans in this section when talking for publication declare Whitman is strong enough to run. Privately, however, they are wishing they had a stronger man to make the race against Seabury.

So far as known no petitions of any candidate to oppose Whitman have been circulated in this section, but this is due to the fact that the anti-Whitman forces have not yet been able to agree upon a candidate to run. Under the present direct primary law it is said to be much harder to wage a fight against the organization than under the old convention system. A man must be made of money to wage a state-wide contest in the primaries as he now has to build up a personal machine of his own in nearly every county of the state. The organization on the other hand simply uses the office holders to circulate the necessary petitions while the independent candidate has to secure his own help through a state-wide canvass.

Betting odds in New York city favor Judge Seabury and it is admitted that unless Hughes carries the state against Wilson by a large figure, carrying Whitman along, that the latter has a slight chance to win.

SHARK FIGHTERS TO ESCORT FAMOUS SWIMMERS IN 40-MILE DASH TODAY.

This is one of the longest races ever staged. The shark fighters are keeping searchlights constantly playing on the swimmers.

BRANNIGAN IS RING PIONEER.

Is Now Thirty-one and Started Fighting When Thirteen.

It is popularly presumed that among the present day boxers old Jim Flynn, the fighting fireman of Pueblo, holds the record for years of service within the ropes and Sam Langford and Sam McVey the mark for the greatest number of return matches. This is all wrong. Both records are held by Patsy Brannigan, the little red haired battling bantamweight of Pittsburgh. He is the "grand old man" of the game.

There are several older boxers than Brannigan in years in the ring, but not in experience. Flynn is in the sixteenth year of his career. Brannigan is beginning his nineteenth annual campaign. Reference to the record books shows that he is now twenty-eight years old and that he began his career in 1904, when he was sixteen. These figures are not correct. Patsy never had them changed because he is a bit sensitive about his age, but if he was put under oath he would acknowledge that he is going on thirty-one and engaged in his first bout at the age of thirteen.

DO YOU GET FULL MEASURE

OSWEGO COUNTY MOTORISTS WILL SOON BE PROTECTED WHEN BUYING GAS.

Rules and regulations for the governing of the sale, distribution and prices of gasoline to Oswego county motorists, as well as to those of the other parts of the state may be issued soon as the result of an investigation State Superintendent of Weights and Measures Farrell has been conducting throughout the state. He has collected some very interesting data after months of effort with his inspectors throughout the state.

With the price of gasoline sky high those who have occasion to purchase it are necessarily jealous that when they part with their money that they do not receive full value. It maye be that in many instances that they do and in many other instances they do not. This remains to be seen and superintendent Farrell will make his announcement if there is any to be made in the near future.

All along the highways and by ways of the state where touring cars operate, automobile stations are met with, garages they are called, and at them all manner of supplies may be obtained. When there are no garages if often happens that gasoline or "gas stations" as they are called are met with instead. At these points "gas" can be and is purchased, and there hangs the story which may result from the data upon which the state officials are working.

Superintendent Farrell is not so sure that all the gasoline pumps that are used to transfer gasoline from the tank of a dealer to that of an automobile owner are absolutely accurate. Before making his experiments he appeared to be of the belief that in many instances the purchaser did not receive full measure because of the loss of motion of the action of the pump or for some other scientific reason which few understand, but are likely to when the results of the investigation are made known.

Just who is at fault for the little discrepancies in full measure which were reported to the state superintendent of weights and measures is not at this time known. Nor is it known whether any one at all is at fault. It may be mechanical imperfection but just what is amiss is being awaited with an eagerness little short of breahtlessness on the part of many autoists who have felt all along that it was all but usury to be compelled to pay so much for gasoline when a few years ago before new oil wells were discovered, which to their minds, should increase the supply, it could be bought for a much lower figure.

When Fritz Reichmann was state superintendent of weights and measures, he instituted a crusade against the automatic gasoline pumps as well as enlightening the public who purchase gasoline in this manner that they were not always getting full measure for their money. He went into the matter freely and thoroughly and as a result it is said that many of the pumps in question were either regulated if they were inperfect, or closed down. At any rate things were improved for not until the present year has there been a second movement made toward making it certain that gasoline pumps should not be permitted to either get out of order or to fail to perform their full mechanical duty as regards giving honest measure.

Mr. Farrell is expected to make public the report within the next few days. Rules and regulations for the guidance of the purchasers of gasoline at pumps are expected to be contained in the document which will be widely distributed.

New York May Have Street Car Strike

(By United Press)

New York, August 21—New York is today threatened with a railroad strike which will involve the surface, elevated and subway lines. Representatives of the Amalgamated Street Car Employees met today with Mayor Mitchell and informed him that unless the fourteen men who had been refused work, were re-instated that a strike would be declared. Mayor Mitchel heard the employees' sid of the question and then sent for the executive officer of the New York Railways.

HUNTER ARMS CO'S. BOOKS BEING EXAMINED

(By United Press)

After a week's delay the investigation to determine whether about $114,000 of the funds of the Hunter Arms Company was used illegally to pay personal debts of the Hunter Brothers opened today in the offices of the trustees in bankruptcy of the Hunter concerns in the city of Fulton.

Andrew J. MacNaught, as special master appointed by federal Judge George W. Ray, has subpoenaed to appear at the hearing all the Hunter brothers, Nelson P. Bonney, counsel for the trustees of the arms company, and other attorneys interested in the case were on hand when the hearing opened.

The examination was conducted by Mr. Bonney assisted by Judge Hill, of Norwich, who represents several of the Hunter creditors.

The books of the company together with other documents which may give a record of the business transactions of the concern and its officers will be introduced in evidence and minutely examined.

It is believed that today's is the first of a series of hearings to be held in rapid succession so that the special master may file a report to Judge Ray before September 1st. Unless the report is presented before that time, the trustees may experience difficulty in recovering some of the money which it is alleged was not spent legally.

Hamilton Lewis will be the speaker at Dardaneers and will be assisted by State Attorney General Cattantall. Governor Frank Willis, of Ohio, will be the speaker at the Republican rally at Augusta.

TROOPS WILL GO BACK TO THEIR OWN STATES

(By United Press)

Washington, August 21—The American troops will not be withdrawn until jointly the Mexicans and Americans have met such actions as are recommended by American members. A high official said today that the statement was made as an answer to the question regarding the action taken on General Funston's reply that the troops may now be withdrawn without endangering the safety of the border. The belief was expressed that the militia on the border would be sent back to their respective states. After the troops are withdrawn from the Mexican border the patrol will be left entirely to the regular army.

MAKE AN INVESTIGATION

This would be a pretty good time for you to make a little investigation as to the character and standing and efficiency of the men nominated upon your party ticket for the various offices here in the county. Because they have been nominated upon your ticket, no matter what party you belong to, is no reason why you should vote blindly for them if they are not the proper men for the offices. So it is up to you to make a little investigation of your own.

You need not make any noise about it; just inquire around a little. Ask a few disinterested men about them. Find out what they have been doing and how they have been doing it. You certainly would not want to vote for a man at the general election, even if he does belong to your party, of whom you would be ashamed later, or for one who will not serve you faithfully and honestly and well.

Just take them one at a time—and find out about them. And this is not direceted to either Republicans or Democrats. There may be weak men on both tickets; they should not be elected no matter what ticket they are running on. And now, before the campaign starts, before men become excited, before their partisan prejudices are appealed to—now is a pretty good time to make your investigations.

The voter should be intelligent enough to "scratch his ticket." He should be able to "spot" the undesirables of his own or any other party. It is an easy thing to do—and it ought to be done whenever a weakling gets in simply because people did not know him. But you now have plenty of time in which to search out and to make a mental note of them, so that next fall when you go to the polls you can vote your party ticket and then go through it and vote against the few upon it whom you may find out ought not to be elected.

IT WILL NOT WORK

There has never been a reform measure passed in this country but the critics harped, "It will not work." They have been forced to admit in most instances, when such reforms were proposed that they were all right in theory, but they have met the arguments with the statement "It will not work."

When the federal reserve act was passed, and it was proposed to creat the regional banks, the opponents of such measure said "it will not work." But the banks were established, and they "have worked." They are standing today between the people of this country and financial depression. That is to say, the moneyed interests of this country are now helpless to bring about a financial panic as in the past. You have heard nothing about financial depressions since the banks were established, and you will not hear anything about them so long as the regional banks with their millions of money stand ready to send it throughout the country the moment it is in demand.

Now, with the proposition to establish farm-loan banks—to loan the farmers money at low rate of interest upon long time credit, there is heard in the land the criticism of old, "It will not work." But the critics are going to find out that they are again mistaken—the farm-loan plan is going to work.

The trouble with all proposed reforms is that the opponents do not want them to work. The New York bankers did not want the regional banks to work, and by the same token they do not want the farm-loan banks to work. The politicians who fattened upon the old-fashioned form of city government did not want the new Commission form to work and predicted that it would not work—but it did, and is still working in hundreds of American cities.

YES, LET THEM

Says a contributor to a publication printed largely in the interest of "big business":

"Let the business men get together through a properly constituted permanent organization, and, guided by practical knowledge, broad vision, and patriotism, pledge themselves to use their legitimate influence and their votes to oppose actively what they believe to be harmful law making."

Yes, let them. It is their right and privilege. The only thing that stands in their way is their own selfishness—a thing that dooms any such organization from the beginning. For what they would conceive to be harmful law making would in many instances be law making that would not be harmful, but helpful.

The truth is that many business men do not seem to know what is harmful law making, and what is not. Anything which interferes with immediate profits is too often considered harmful, regardless of its justice. We recall with what acrimony several business organizations fought workmen's compensation, on the ground that it was harmful lawmaking. Had they had the power in this state, the liability insurance companies would today be fleecing the employers and denying justice to the injured employes.

At this time, the armament makers would of course be in control of the organization, since they are the biggest business men in this country. And the armament makers would be using the organization in every "legitimate" way to defeat a president who does not do their bidding just as they are now trying to defeat such a president.

Every man, whether he is a business man or some other sort of a man, ought to take an interest in politics. He ought to use his legitimate influence to prevent harmful lawmaking. But he ought not to be so narrow in his vision as to consider every act that seeks to regulate big business or to give the individual some rights over the corporation, as inimical to business.

ALIMONY AND VIOLETS

"How am I expected to even begin to live on $8 a week? cried a New York woman to a judge who had granted her a divorce and that much alimony. "It's lucky for me that my father is living, or I'm sure I don't know how I could live. Why $8 a week will not pay for my violets!"

There is a strong touch of the ludicrous in the poor woman's joy that her father is living to support her. Perhaps that is all she considers any man good for.

Is it really fortunate for her that she has a father living? It's doubtful. She will very likely go on making a fool of herself as long as anybody pays her bills.

What she needs is some effective teaching in the value of money. She appeared in the court room wearing a huge bouquet of violets that scented the whole building. She needs to learn that a woman should be something more than a bouquetholder.

Labor is no curse. It is wise old nature's method of making us of use to the world and saving us from being intolerable nuisances to ourselves. If money were not hard to get, none of us would ever have solved the problem of living on $8 a week.

The woman who does not know it is possible to live on $8 a week doesn't know what living is. Far more than half the women of this country live on less than that and live happily and usefully.

The humble wives and mothers of the world do not need violets at their breasts to put perfume into millions of lives.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

We have long insisted and do now still insist that private ownership of public utilities is a curse to the welfare of every one of us citizens and a menace to the rights and manhood of the workers—those very men upon whose manliness and courage and patriotism we must rely to maintain and defend the republic, says the New York American. A strike of the street car men here in New York cannot help being a very great public calamity. It will lose the city millions of dollars and will damage all classes—the poorer classes above all. Every dictate of private interest, as well as of public concern, makes us more than anxious to see this business calamity averted. But we do not mean to be coerced either by private interest or public concern into indorsing or condoning an attitude of truculence and disregard of justice between man and man, such as some of the transportation magnates seem disposed to assume. Any other settlement of this dispute than a settlement based on mutual fair play will only result in troubles to come. We are firmly of the poinion that there is only one course of conduct by which you people can permanently assure peaceful operation of your transportation systems. You must run them yourselves. That is the answer.

MACK TELLS HOW HE BUILDS UP CLUB

Thinks It Better to Train Up Green Players.

THROWS LIGHT ON PLANS.

Baseball Expert Says It Is Too Expensive to Let the Minor Leagues Develop Stars—Predicts He Will Have Pennant Winner In Two Years.

Manager Connie Mack of the Athletics refuses to be a pessimist, although others are worrying about his ball team. He is optimistic as far as the meaning of the word goes and says that in time he will have molded together a club that will more than repay the fans for their patience with the team that is in its early stages of development. Mack listened to all comment and criticism with deaf ears until recently, when he consented to inform the fans concerning his plans.

Club Owners Satisfied.

"I am part owner of the Athletics and am perfectly satisfied with conditions, and so are the Shibes. We are willing to lose money while we are developing a new team. We do not expect the fans to patronize a losing team. All we ask is patronage when we show them a real ball team, and we will do that," said Manager Mack.

"I have everything I own tied up in this ball team and am doing what I know is best. I believe I know the baseball business and am staking my reputation on my ability to come back, and I am coming back with a greater team than ever before. I don't believe in building up a ball team as other managers do, and therefore I care nothing about the charges made by critics throughout the country.

"Seven other American league owners are perfectly satisfied with the way we run our ball team," continued Connie, "and also have confidence in my ability to construct another championship team. I have built two separate and distinct machines which have been powerful pennant winning combinations and will have another within two years. American league magnates believe in me and I will not disappoint them.

"I have been managing ball teams for more than twenty years and have tried out every method. I managed in minor leagues and learned my lesson there.

"While in the minor field I tried developing ball players from the raw material and discovered that after I had sent them up to the major leagues they had to be started all over again because they played a different style from that their new managers used. It required two or three years for the youngsters to get going, and then they were not playing their natural game.

Hard to Develop Minors.

"I made up my mind then that I would build from the ground up if ever I got a chance, and it came shortly after. I seldom go after a minor league star, not because of the ridiculous price asked for his release, but because I find he is harder to develop to my style of play than the inexperienced youth.

"Does it not stand to reason that, if a youngster with natural ability can be developed into a minor league sensation in two years and then come into the major leagues a star, the same player could also be developed into a star in the same length of time playing right under my eyes?

Rookies Will Develop Fast.

"It was three years before Collins, Barry, McInnis, Strunk, Baker and others of my old team found their stride, but this new bunch will come along faster unless I miss my guess. They have a better chance because they are getting more opportunities to play in regular games.

"I have the foundation for a great club right now. I admit that I am disappointed at the showing of several of my recruits and a few of the veterans who were left over, but I want to say that we have others coming who will fill the bill if these youngsters fail to come through.

JUVENILE STYLES.

How Young Girls Are Being Garbed a la Mode.

Long coats, which reach almost or to the dress hems, are the fashion for little girls. Made of faille silk in dull light blues, pinks, corn color or royal blue, they are just the right weight to wear over the lingerie dresses of batiste or georgette crape.

The older girl's coat is made more like the adult styles. Trecot serge, wool jersey or bolivia—a new weave that resembles somewhat chinchilla cloth—are used to make long coats that often have a pelerine cape addition that reaches to or below the elbows.

Middy blouse lines are idealized now for the betwixt and between girl. Combined with plaited or gored skirts, they make very trig looking frocks, suited for autumn school wear as well as for summer. Pongee, tussore, linen, la jera and other fabrics are used for the summer dresses and wool jersey, serge and gaberdine for the autumn school frock.

These dresses are sometimes made sleeveless so that a washable guimpe may be easily adjusted and removed. Plaited collar and cuff frills are seen on these guimpes more often than lace, the edges finished with picot or hemstitching. Challie, a material which always seems to stay in style for young girls' frocks, seems to need a touch of black velvet ribbon for a dainty finish.

Russian and middy blouses, seen in the shops, are generally accompanied by a plaited or fulled matching skirt. In middy blouse types one of polka dotted raspberry lawn has a full gathered skirt. The blouse is fashioned with a round plaited collar of white organdie, picot edged, with cuffs to match. An organdie belt is the original note of this dress. It shows only at the sides, passing through slashes in the dress in front and back.

This belt fastens at one side with two flat pearl buttons. One Russian blouse dress of pink voile is bordered and belted with matching bands of linen. The skirt is gathered and has a deep hem band of the linen.

Another dull pink Russian dress of pink linen is belted and bordered with a cream rough linen band, the blouse fastens down the front with buttons placed opposite and linked together.

Very pretty bright colored felt hats are also seen in the shops for little and big girls. They match in color the bright tones of their dresses. Small poke bonnet forms, rather jockey shaped, with a single feather or plume ornament in front, are also new. High Russian caps, covered with gathered silk, are finished with silk pompons on top and little clusters of silk roses posed at the sides.

Dresses for young girls remain very short. In extreme fashion they hardly come to the knee, while the more popular styles stop just below. Their ampleness makes them fly out prettily. The revived fashion of petticoats, which show with the swish of skirts, gives them a fluffy look.

FOR EARLY FALL.

A Chic Tam on Autumn Lines For Juveniles.

Among advanced millinery styles for the autumn are several combinations of straw and wintry looking materials, a sort of compromise between seasons. Such a hat is this toque, which has a straw rim of black milan and a tam of black pressed beaver, banded with black grosgrain ribbon and a perky bow. This is the kind of slip-on hat so serviceable till you see exactly what you want for genuine fall weather.

Close to this ring make another ring of 3 p separated by 3 s fastening the first p to the last p of previous ring and points fastening each one to one p points, fastening each one to one p of the ring of 10.

FOR HOUSEHOLD PACKING.

Autumn Brings Its Bugbear of Pulling Up Stakes.

When one must move, begin with the small, out of sight tasks that will not render the house untidy and uncomfortable long before leaving it. A little thought and a look around the house will disclose many of the belongings that are not in general use—for instance, stuff in the pantry, in the storeroom, superabundant grocery supplies, temporarily discarded clothing, superfluous ornaments, company porcelain and glassware, books, music and a thousand other things, all of which can be dislodged without destroying the appearance of the house while those abiding in the same will not be the wiser for it.

Dispose of unnecessary possessions that some one else may be glad to make use of; then pack clothing not in use into boxes and mark the contents on each box. Books, pictures and ornaments are best packed in rather small boxes that are easy to handle. Have carpets, rugs and matting cleaned, rolled and tied.

For packing kitchen utensils, jars of fruit, etc., tubs are best, for they have handles. A pot or kettle in the bottom might have several jars placed in it with bits of paper, hay or smaller articles, like knives and forks, to hold them steady, but be careful not to have anything to extend higher than the sides of the tub.

Barrels are best for the fine china and glass ware. When packing breakables, remember that every article must be prepared so that none of its surface is left exposed to pressure without support. Stuff all hollow articles as full as possible, surround all handles, stems, etc., by padding so thick that the article becomes, as nearly as possible, a solid ball. Cups and glasses should not be slipped inside each other unless well covered with padding. Plates and saucers may be made in a pile with stuffing between and the whole made solid by bands of muslin wound round them. Excelsior, hay and newspapers are all good packing material, but often kitchen towels, holders, underwear, etc., may be used to steady things and get themselves transported at the same time.

Sounded Queer.

"I like to clean up my work in a hurry," said the visitor.

"I find it advisable to string it out a little so that I will always have something on my desk in case a bore comes in," said his friend, taking up some papers.

Then the other man looked at him queerly and went out.—Kansas City Journal.

Wise Precaution.

Mrs. Jones was about to go away for a couple of weeks, and her husband said to her:

"My dear, I want to ask you one favor before you go."

"What is it?" questioned Mrs. Jones.

"Don't try to put the house in order before you go," replied Jones.

"Why, it isn't hard work," continued Mrs. Jones.

"Perhaps not," replied Jones, "but think of the expense of telegraphing to you every time I want to find anything."—New York Times.

SUMMER "IFS."

Interesting Ways to Beat Nuisances of the Season.

If there is a hole in a rubber hot water bag, a hole which cannot be mended, fill the bag with salt or sand heated in the oven. The result will be as satisfactory as if the bag were filled with water.

If you would have your summer supply of white silk stockings remain white, always see to it that they are dried in the shade and washed in lukewarm water, as heat turns them yellow.

If small ants, which sometimes get into houses, prove a pest with you, place a sponge soaked in water in which sugar is dissolved in the path of the ants. They will swarm into the sponge, which can then be plunged into hot water.

If you are leaving the house closed for a short time, rub the smoothing irons with lard to keep them from rusting. On your return dip them in hot water, dry them thoroughly and then heat them.

If you wish to make a satisfactory polish for hardwood floors, shave an ounce of beeswax into a quart of turpentine. Rub this well on the floor with a flannel cloth and then rub to a polish with a dry cloth.

If a white straw hat is streaked and soiled, try cleaning it with lemon juice and salt or salts of lemon and water. If it remains streaked, color it with one of the liquid hat colorings to be found in the shops.

If a casserole or other cooking dish becomes brown and discolored on the inside, let it stand for three days filled with buttermilk, which will, by its acid, remove all the stain.

If a rubber glove becomes torn or cut, place a strip of sticking plaster, sticky side next the rubber, on the inside of the glove.

If you wish to keep cheese from molding, cover it securely with a cloth wrung from vinegar.

If the brass polish gives out, do not worry, but instead go to work at the brass with lemon juice.

If anybody's finger is burned, dust the burn with powdered charcoal to keep it from smarting.

To Keep Goldfish Healthy.

Goldfish may be kept healthy by giving them a salt bath about every two weeks. Do it in this way: Put a teaspoonful of salt in a quart of clear water and place the fish in it for fifteen minutes—no longer. When changing the water in the aquarium, a small wire strainer will be found a great convenience. Pour all the water from the goldfish bowl, with the fish, into a basin. Rinse the bowl, dry it, fill with fresh water and with the wire strainer pick up the goldfish and drop them back into the bowl. Aquariums should be kept in a cool place and not exposed to the direct rays of the sun. Feed the fish every other morning, allowing six or eight fish one-fourth of a sheet of food cut in small pieces. Sick fish have often become strong and healthy after a few salt baths.

Egg Sauce.

Make a white sauce from a cupful of rich milk thickened smoothly with a tablespoonful of butter and flour. Season with paprika and salt and add a hard boiled egg chopped fine. This is especially good with boiled codfish.

MINUTES IN MANHATTAN

(By Gotham-Knickerbock)

New York, August 21 (Special)—A fine looking sixteen year old girl just out of the public school, whose parents are poor and do not speak English well, is worth $500.

That is one of the revelations in the confession of Yushe Botwin, leading white slave trader, with whose assistance Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith, co-operating with the authorities in large cities throughout the country, hopes to place the leaders in this frightful business behind bars.

In 1912-13 a powerful "vice trust" was discovered here. Several of its leaders were put in jail. Exposures were made in newspapers, magazines, books and even theatres. It was quite generally believed the traffic in young girls was broken up.

But today we learn the business is again going on, with many of the old leaders still at work, but using more refined means.

The old methods of serving "knockout drops" and oftentimes using force have been abandoned. They were found dangerous and unnecessary.

Instead, the vice trust leaders have agents, usually women, watching schools in poor neighborhoods. Their prey are school girls between fourteen and sixteen years of age.

These girls speak English well, have lost the foreign appearance of their parents and constitute the cream of the "trade."

A careful study is made of their home life. Only such girls are approached as are found to have unattractive surroundings and whose parents are ignorant of American laws and customs.

Once a girl is selected as a likely candidate, the young men called "cadets" employed by the vice magnates set out to turn her head.

Making her acquaintance is often done in the moving picture houses. Botwin named two picture shows which he said were run by their proprietors especially for this purpose.

The girl is then taken to dances where she has a gay time. Automobile rides to Coney Island follow, and perhaps a fine meal at a blittering restaurant. Insidiously, the cadets contrast this life with her home conditions and she is made dissatisfied.

The only hint of force comes just after the cadet has decided it is time to ruin his victim and take her from her home forever. She is hurried to another city in a nearby state and there coaxed or cajoled into writing a letter to her parents saying she has eloped and is very happy. Like as not, the old folks believe this story.

The girl is now entirely in her captor's grasp. She is given very little of her earnings—this goes to the slavers who own her. A few weeks later the slavers consider it safe to bring her back to New York.

Here she is put into a resort under an assumed name. She begins to realize what has happened, but usually is too ashamed to reveal her story, even if not too terrified to make a complaint.

District Attorney Smith has found it necessary in many cases to keep such young victims apart from their associates for ten days or two weeks before they finally are willing to tell their history.

Botwin says he knows at least 3,000 school girls of New York have been lured to a life of shame in the last ten years.

The canning season is here and the Hospital will appreciate any donations of canned fruit, jelly, etc. The hospital also solicits fruit, berries, etc., with or without sugar for canning. 506c

AN UNANSWERED QUESTION.

The Lawyer Who Asked It Was Willing to Forego Any Reply.

There is a judge on the circuit bench who hears testimony and listens to arguments after any manner he chooses. Sometimes he does a marathon around the courtroom, at other times he takes a flier out into the corridor, and again he goes into his chambers.

A certain eminent legal light wasn't on to all these curves, and he was trying an important case before the wandering judge. There was a most interesting point of law involved, and the lawyer came up well prepared to drive his argument home. The books were piled on a table in front of him.

"WHERE'S THAT FOOL NOW?"

The jurist had been sitting on the bench at the outset, and the attorney had reached the point where he wished to make the court realize the import of the matter by reading from United States supreme court decisions. He leaned over the table and hurried through the tome to where he wished to read.

Looking up, the lawyer discovered the seat on the bench was vacant. He gazed into space for a second, then asked right out loud:

"Where's that infernal fool gone now?"

And then he looked around, and there was the judge directly behind him, peering into the lawbook from which the now rather embarrassed legal light wished to read.—Case and Comment.

Getting Full Value.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the pianist, tells the story of a pupil who came to Harold Bauer and asked his terms for lessons. After the fourth lesson he said to her:

"Why, madame, do you always bring rhapsodies, etudes, swift music? Why not a quiet number, something that shows your phrasing—some andante?"

"Mr. Bauer," replied the pupil, "your lessons are too expensive—I can't afford to play the slow music."

A Nice Distinction.

A congressional committee went to a certain state to assist in opening an exposition. There was a parade in the morning in which all the visiting statesmen rode in automobiles. The local committee brought the cars around to the leading hotel. The scheme was to have two senators or representatives and two local men in each car.

After the vice president and his party had been sent away a local notable who was acting as a major domo came into the lobby of the hotel, where the statesmen were waiting, and bawled:

"Two congressmen and two gentlemen, please!"—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

GOOD MORNING JUDGE.

Mrs. Birdget Chattel was arrested by the local police Saturday afternoon for disturbing the peace. She was arraigned this morning in city court and pleaded guilty to the charge.

City Judge Wilson decided, after a volley of good advice, that a year's vacation from the city would be most expedient and bestowed upon. Mrs. Chatell a sentence of one year, to be spent elsewhere.

He also decided that the best way to dispense with her presence would be to enforce this sentence strictly and that if she be seen within the city, the Oswego county jail would be her next abode.

Benjamin Simpson from Rochester, was picked up Saturday by the patrolman, while attempting to gain entrance at the Lee Memorial Hospital. Simpson claimed that he was not at all well and the fact that he had no money, asked support of the city. Chief of Police E. J. Officer Thomas Gordon was placed in charge of the patient and states that after administering much needed medicines the patient is convalescing.

Natural Curiosity.

Joe had been working in Baltimore On the day before Christmas he received his pay and planned to go home to Washington, but first he started out to buy presents for all his family. He did this with more generosity than foresight, and when evening came he found himself at the railway station loaded with bundles, but with no money for his fare to Washington.

Somehow he got through the gate and approached the conductor. He laid the case before him and ended with a plea that he might ride to Washington on the platform of the baggage car. The conductor, his heart warmed by the spirit of the season, said, "All right; go ahead."

So Joe climbed on the platform of the car next to the engine. It was a cold night, and it was on a road where the engine takes up water from a track reservoir as it goes along.

When the train reached Washington the conductor saw Joe approaching covered with ice from head to foot, bundles and all. He came up to the conductor and said: "I sure does thank you, boss, for muh ride. You's very kind to allow muh to ride up with you, but there's jus' one question I wants to ax. Kin you tell me the name ob that river we run through back there?"—Youth's Companion.

LEGAL PAPERS BEING PREPARED

BATTLE ISLAND PAPER COMPANY BONDHOLDERS CLAIM OVER $1,000,000.

Briefs will be filed in the Court of Claims in the Battle Island Paper Company's claim of more than $1,000,000 within the next few days. The briefs being drawn by Attorney William Nottingham, of Syracuse, is for the alleged appropriation of the state of lands and water rights in Fulton in the construction of the barge canal.

When the barge canal was being constructed near Fulton the Battle Island dam was wiped out destroying the water power of the Battle Island Paper Company and rendering the sulphite mill useless. Since that time the price of sulphite pulp has advanced.

The litigation lasted for more than three years and hearings were heud in Syracuse, Rochester, Albany and other cities. Soon after the trial began the Battle Island Company went into bankruptcy. There are about 350 bondholders and if an award is made by the state it will be divided among them. There is a bondholders' protective committee with S. Guy Daley as representative.

In the hearings the state contended that the water rights never belonged to the Battle Island plant, but to the state by the right of eminent domain. There were many technicalities in the trial and a maze of theoretical arguments involving the value of the water power.

CAREER OF "BILL" JOHNSON

NATIONAL TENNIS CHAMPION JOHNSON, WHO WILL DEFEND TITLE AUGUST 28, SHUNNED THE GAME.

San Francisco, August 21—If "Bill" Johnston, national tennis champion who will defend his title at Forest Hills one week from today, had had his way, he wouldn't be the peer of all American racquet wielders. Probably he would have been mentioned in the sporting pages only as a former football player at the University of California.

It was "Bill's" mother who dissuaded him from following his football ideals and turned his attention to the tennis courts. The secret came out when Robert Johnston, the champion's fatther, discussed his son's career in an interview today.

"When Bill was about eleven years old," said the elder Johnston, "he was quarterback on the boys' football team that used to play on the vacant lots in the Hight street district. All his thoughts were of gridiron glory. He was as proud of his bloody nose and crippled legs as a soldier of a wound received in battle.

"His mother wasn't very enthusiastic about football and it was through her efforts that Bill joined S. R. Marvin's boys' tennis club when he was fourteen.

"It was plain from the start that he had natural talent for the game. His long distance running as a little tad gave him speed on the courts. All the club tournaments ended with the finals between Bill and "The Shrimp," a lad now generally known as Johnny Strachan. Together in the doubles they were invincible. Playing against each other, sometimes one, sometimes the other, would win. I believe that team is still invincible in the doubles.

"Bill has won half a hundred cups and other trophies, but I believe the prize he appreciated most was a pair of flannel pants he won at Stockton when funds were low.

"Incidentally, Marvin's boys' club also produced Maurice McLoughlin, Peck Griffin and Dr. Melville Long, in addition to Stratchan and Johnston."

POULTRY NOTES.

When range is limited spade up the runs or move the brood coop a short distance daily.

Do not feed too heavily during the summer. Your birds can and will do well on about half of what you feed during the winter.

Change the drinking water often these hot days; also see that the vessels are kept clean.

Feed very light on corn. Use more wheat and oats with plenty of green food.

Examine carefully any feed purchased during the hot summer days. See if it is sweet and clean. Be sure to carefully look after the beef scraps.

FIRM MIND NEEDED IN CULLING POULTRY

It takes a man with spunk to thin out his birds so that he may have a good working force later in the season, writes Vincent Lee in Farm and Fireside. Many times I do hate to pick up the thrifty looking hen and say, "You will have to go." In the same way to sort the pullets over and take away those that "might possibly" lay next winter calls for a fine exercise of grit. We have these birds now. It has cost us a fine penny to get them up where they are, and we dislike to part with them just when the promise of future service seems best.

But it never pays to mince matters in dealing with questionable birds. No matter how well a hen looks, if we know she is getting along in years, as a rule her profit is past. I have had hens lay pretty well for two or three years and then drop off suddenly.

It is the same with pullets that are in any way off condition. Every bird that is slow about making growth or which has a delicate appearance ought to be disposed of as soon as possible. A little extra feeding will make these birds ready for the market, and that is where they should go. It is hardly possible to take an immature, puny pullet and make it a profitable member of the flock.

From the time that bird was hatched it should have been marked for an early doom. I find that weak, slow growing birds are the ones that take the profit out of many a man's business.

Still another place where we may show good judgment is in getting our flock worked down to the capacity of the houses. There is no more disastrous thing than to try to crowd a 100 bird flock into a fifty hen house. We may not have disease to combat, but we surely will not get as many eggs, and what we do get will not be as apt to be fertile when breeding time comes round again. Most of us like to make our space as remunerative as we can. We do not feel like putting more money into houses, so we crowd. The right thing to do is either to sell off the birds or make more houses.

Scaly leg is caused by a very small insect burrowing under the scales of the legs. The affected parts should be thoroughly cleansed daily with warm soapsuds, using a hard bristle brush. Dry thoroughly and annoint with a mixture of sublimated sulphur one part and vaseline two parts. Rub well in between the scales and after a few treatments the legs will be clean and smooth. Scaly leg is contagious in the same sense that lousiness is contagious, but if taken in time is easy to cure. The picture shows a scaly leg.

Poultry Manure Valuable.

Fresh poultry manure at the present values of fertilizers would be worth 60 cents per hundred pounds. Figures from different experiment stations would give the product of twenty-five hens for twelve months' or six months as 375 pounds for the roost droppings only.

Plumping a Fowl.

The way to "plump" a dressed fowl is to dip it for ten seconds in water nearly or quite boiling hot and then immediately in cold water. Hang in a cool place until the animal heat is entirely out. Plumping gives the fowl a much more attractive appearance.

EARLY ADVERTISING.

Before and After the Advent of the Printing Press.

Advertising has now become a custom so extensive in its application and of such vital importance that it is difficult to realize that it was ever possible to do any trading without it. Yet before the advent of the printing press and the newspaper there were many hundreds of years when there was no such a thing as advertising as it is known today.

In ancient times merchants in Rome and Athens employed criers to go about the streets shouting out the quality and prices of their goods. Written notices serving as advertisements for civil attention to an auction sale or a meeting were displayed on walls any occasionally. In the old days of London shopkeepers' clerks stood in front of their stores and called out their wares to passersby, prefacing their announcements with "What do you lack? What do you lack?"

One of the first newspaper advertisements of which there is authentic record was printed in the Mercurius Politicus, London, in January, 1652. It was a publisher's announcement and read as follows:

"'Irenodia Gratulatoria, an Heroick Poem,' being a congratulatory panegyrick for my Lord General's late return, summing up his successes in an exquisite manner. To be sold by John Holden, in the New Exchange, London. Printed by Tho. Newcourt, 1652."

Here is another example of early London advertising:

"Two men beg to acquaint the public in general that they keep the cleanest barber shop in all London, where the people can have their hair cut for two pence, dressed for three pence and be shaved for one penny. One of these men can bleed and draw teeth very well. He bleeds both in the English and German method and is exceedingly careful."—New York Sun.

DAIRY and CREAMERY

THE PROFITABLE COW.

Her Value Depends Upon Ability to Turn Feed Into Milk and Butter Fat.

Invariably the successful feeder's most noticeable characteristic is liberality, says Kimball's Dairy Farmer. He loves the animal that feeds well, and much of his joy comes from seeing his charges eat. His task is that of inducing the animal to eat all it possibly can in a given time and yet utilize the feed in a manner profitable to him. The question of how much it costs to feed a cow a year is of secondary importance to him. Because he is humane he loves the cow, and because he loves the cow he feeds her abundantly enough to maintain her well. But when this point is reached his considerations are placed on a strictly business basis. He then views the cow as the manufacturer does the machine. Her value depends upon the quantity of raw material she can eat in a given time and convert profitably into a finished commodity. The important question is: "How much does it cost to produce a gallon of milk and a pound of butter fat?"

The milking strain of Shorthorn cattle is in favor with many dairymen. The cows are usually referred to as dual purpose—that is, good milk and beef producers. In England the milking Shorthorn is preferred to the other breeds of cattle for the dairy. The cow and calf shown are of the milking Shorthorn strain.

This is well recognized by all dairymen, as shown by them when they purchase cows. They ignore the cow with the small mouth, the shallow body, the flat sides, the hard, resistant hide and the wiry hair because they know that these are evidences of limited capacity. They well know that under no conditions are such cows large producers of either milk or profit. The cows with large mouths, long, deep bodies, with well sprung ribs, and hides that are soft, pliable and elastic, covered with soft, silky hair, are the ones that are selected—even though they are the ones that cost most—because experience teaches that such cows are the great producers.

But words fail to express the folly of selecting and paying a premium for such cows and then giving them no more feed than could be eaten by a cheap cow, sadly lacking in capacity.

Every cow is endowed with a certain capacity to eat, digest and assimilate food. Every cow is endowed with a certain ability to manufacture milk and butter fat from her food. Therefore it is unquestionably true that to supply the feed in amounts and quality necessary to take full advantage of the cow's ability to make milk and butter fat, even though her capacity to handle the food is taxed, results in greater production and larger profits.

The better the cow the greater her power to eat and the greater her ability to produce.

Cement Floors For Cows.

Cement floors are not wholly desirable for stabling cows unless sufficient bedding is used to keep the udders of the cows from coming in contact with the cement and to keep the pens dry enough for the calves. The most usual expedient used in this connection is to install either cork brick or creosoted block on the stable floors. Another method that is sometimes used is to place planks over the concrete or build slatted racks of planks which can be taken up from the cement and the barn thoroughly cleaned. It is somewhat questionable whether the use of planks is of any economy, although their first cost may be less. With the cork brick or creosoted block one will have a sanitary and comfortable floor and one that is fairly permanent.

Feeding Calves.

Do not feed milk in a tub or trough to calves. One calf will often drink twice as fast as another. One gets too much and has indigestion. The other does not get enough and is poor. Make stanchions to hold the calves and feed them carefully.

The Babcock Test.

The invention of the Babcock test is what has put more champions in the field than any other mechanical contrivance. People imagined what their cows were giving by the old processes, but now they actually know.

Value of Cow Records.

The dairyman will never know where he stands unless he keeps records. Test for butter fat and keep an accurate table of production for each cow. Without any record you can be a long time locating a "star" boarder.

Keep Cows Comfortable.

If you doubt the advisability of keeping dairy cows comfortable and contented, visit the man who makes the best records with his cattle and see how he cares for them.

DAIRY LORE.

Treat cows gently and avoid excitement.

Weigh the milk of each cow at milking time.

Discard the cow which has failed at the end of the year to pay market price for all the feed consumed.

The ideal equipment for handling dairy cattle, or in fact any other kind of farm stock where diversified farming is followed, always includes the silo.

The dairy cows will greatly relish and do well on the odd turnips, beets and cabbage.

AMOUNT OF GRAIN REQUIRED BY A COW

Directions as to the amount of feed required by a cow cannot, in the nature of things, be specifically stated, says Hoard's Dairyman. When directions are given to feed one pound of grain for each three pounds of milk produced it means that a cow giving six pounds of milk daily would get but two pounds of grain. This would be light feeding if the cow were thin in flesh and the roughage consisted of timothy hay and corn stover. On the other hand, if the roughage were made up of alfalfa hay and corn silage it would be a sufficient allowance of grain for a cow giving this amount of milk, unless it was desirable to put flesh on the cow before freshening.

A cow giving but six pounds of milk a day may well be considered dry and handled as such. It is not uncommon to feed dry cows from five to eight pounds of grain each in order to get them in the proper shape for calving. The amount of grain fed to an animal depends upon the kind of roughage on hand, the amount of milk the cow is giving, her physical condition and the quality of milk. The feeding of one pound of grain, for instance, for each

Admirers of the Jersey cow maintain that she is the most tenacious in milk of all the breeds. Although she is the smallest of the dairy breeds she will usually assimilate a larger quantity of feed and make returns profitable for it than most other dairy cows. The bull shown is a pure bred Jersey.

three pounds of milk produced, applies very largely to cows giving from twenty to thirty pounds of milk daily when the hay and other roughage is rich in carbohydrates.

As stated, where there is alfalfa and silage then less grain is fed. To cows giving milk testing 3 to 3½ per cent less grain is fed than to those producing milk testing from 4½ to 5 per cent. When cows are giving sixty to seventy pounds of milk daily, feeding one pound of grain to each three pounds of milk produced would be excessive, for when a cow is fed more than fifteen pounds of grain daily close watch must be made of her appetite and physical condition or there is danger of throwing her off feed. Cows giving less than fifteen to twenty pounds of milk may often be fed more profitably if nothing but roughage is given them. This is especially true if the roughage is rich in protein.

From what we have said it is evident that no exact conditions can be given in feeding an individual animal. It must be left to the judgment of the feeder to vary the amount of grain according to the demands of the cow. The best that we can do is to advocate a general system of feeding.

Blood Meal For Calves.

Blood meal is a very good feed to add to the skimmilk for young calves, especially for calves that are not thrifty or that have a tendency to scour. Begin by feeding a teaspoonful at each feeding of skimmilk and gradually increase to a tablespoonful. Stir the blood meal thoroughly into the milk and if necessary keep it agitated while feeding so that none of the blood meal settles to the bottom of the pail where the calf cannot get it. For skimmilk calves that are in good condition and do not scour easily a grain ration composed of equal parts of bran and oats or of fifty parts oats, thirty parts bran, ten parts cornmeal and ten parts linseed meal will give very satisfactory results.

Change the Cow's Feed.

Cows should not be kept too long on one particular ration, good though it may be, and the feed should consist of a variety of materials rather than any single one. A sufficient ration must be given for the maintenance of body and the production of milk. It is false economy to allow a cow to produce milk at the expense of her own body.

The Scrap Book

Ruined His Climax.

It used to be the annual custom of Mr. Ledger, proprietor of the London Era and a clever journalist, to entertain the theatrical celebrities of the day at dinner and to commemorate the occasion by some Lucullan freak.

He once had eighty strawberry plants carefully nurtured in pots so that at dessert he might say to his guests, each opposite a blooming strawberry plant, "Now, my dear friends, gather your own fruit."

The dinner had progressed finely to the dessert when the service seemed slow. Ledger cried to his man:

"Come, come! The dessert!"

"In a minute, sir," was the reply. "They've nearly finished picking the strawberries!"—London Globe.

The Right Road.

The right road is a long road,
And at times it may be rough;
But don't leave it for the wrong road
That is paved with sham and bluff.
And don't mistake the smiling
Of the men who travel there;
Or the gold that they are piling
As a sign that all is fair.

For beneath the jewels shining
And the pleasures they possess,
And behind their hours of wining,
There is fearful loneliness.
Though the road that they are taking
Seems a splendid thoroughfare,
Hearts for honest joys are aching,
And the lives they live are bare.

There are rough spots in the right road,
There are dangers grim to face;
And it's often not a bright road,
But it's free from all disgrace.
And it's lined with friends to love you,
And its joys are of the best;
And when stars come out above you,
With a conscience clear you rest.

He Quit His Kidding.

"I've quit kidding," said a business man. "That kind of chickens come home to roost and can't be driven away again, I've found to my sorrow.

"The way of it was this: A few days ago I took my wife to a well known restaurant for luncheon. We got a table next to that occupied by a pair of fellows whom I have 'kidded' unmercifully in times past. In a moment of temporary mental aberration I introduced these fellows, both good friends of mine, who can take a joke and never wince under it, however severe it may be on them, to my wife

"The quicker witted of the two, seeing an opportunity to get square with me for the last joke I played on him, said without a smile: 'I am delighted to make your acquaintance, Mrs. B—. The last woman Mr. B— introduced as his wife had red hair.'

"When I tell you that my wife has black hair you can readily understand the position this placed me in. As a matter of fact I am not out of it yet, as she more than half believed that I had met these fellows with a red headed woman whom I passed off as my wife. I don't know whether I will ever be able to convince her that they were 'kidding,' so I've stopped it."—Philadelphia Press.

Family Pride.

The following story is told of the mayor of a western city:

A small boy who afterward proved to be a nephew of one of the mayor's stenographers was wandering about in the city hall when one of the officials there happened upon him.

"Well, sonny," inquired the man genially, "for whom are you looking?"

"For my Aunt Kate."

"Can't you find her?"

"I can't seem to."

"And don't you know where she is?"

"Not exactly. She's in here somewhere, though, and I know that the mayor works in her office."—Harper's Magazine.

No Sale.

Notwithstanding the fact that the ventures of native students into the labyrinths of English are sometimes adventures indeed, nevertheless it is the mistakes of the Americans who attempt to express themselves prematurely in other languages which most appeal to our risibles. The Spanish word for sons is "hijos," for figs "higos." One can therefore easily understand how the following conversation might easily have taken place. A lady went to a grocery store to buy figs. The conversation actually was as follows:

"Have you any sons?"

"Yes," replied the storekeeper pleasantly.

"White ones?"

To this the man replied in the affirmative.

"Very well, I will take one pound, if you please," said the lady.

The storekeeper is said to have replied that they were not for sale, and certainly not by the pound.—World Outlook.

Where the Splinter Came From.

Certain members of the house party were describing the accidents that had happened to them during their various careers. Adventures by flood, fire and field had all been well received, and De Sappleby, eager for fame, thought it was his turn.

"D'you know," he said, "I had a very painful experience once. I ran a confounded splinter quite half an inch long right under my finger nail, don't you know."

"Really, Mr. de Sappleby," said a maiden of the party. "How did you do it?"

"Well," he said, "it happened like this." As he spoke he unconsciously raised his hand and scratched his forehead.

"Oh, I see," she interrupted sweetly. "How very careless of you!"

GARRICK DISOWNED.

To Tell the Truth, Though, His Appearance Was Against Him.

Garrick's brother Peter lived at Lichfield. On the occasion of some townsman going to London Peter Garrick addressed a letter to his brother David in Southampton street, where he lived then, requesting him to show the lions of London to their townsman, with whatever civilities he could confer.

The man of Lichfield arrived in the great city, proceeded to Southampton street and, on knocking at the door, was told that Mr. Garrick was not at home, being engaged to attend the rehearsal at Drury Lane theater that morning, as he must play Abdel Drugger in "The Alchemist" that evening, when he would be sure to see him if he did not find him before.

John of Lichfield, acting agreeably to this information, went to the theater and then went back to Lichfield, where he attended his own business and took no notice of Peter Garrick.

The latter, surprised at this neglect, questioned him why he did not bring an answer to his letter.

"Because your brother did not give any," was the conclusive reply.

"Indeed," said Peter, "that is very extraordinary. What did he say to you?"

John of Lichfield exclaimed: "Well, Master Garrick, as you will have an answer, you shall have it. Take it as you please. I went to Southampton street. David was not at home. They said I might go to him at the playhouse. Well, they made me pay 3 shillings to go in, which I thought a strange proceeding. Howsoever, that was nothing. When he did show himseelf on the stage he was the nastiest, dirtiest, shuffling little blackguard that I ever set my eyes upon. I would not speak to him nor see him or own him as a townsman, though he is your brother. So I came away and left him to play his dirty tricks by himself."—Pearson's.

Greeting the King.

King Alfonso of Spain is given to the habit of mingling with his people unexpectedly and unannounced.

Some little time ago he visited a small town near Madrid and walked about the streets. But the rumor of his presence somehow got abroad, and he suddenly found himself among an excited throng, all of whom were "looking for Alfonso."

One excited old lady began to exclaim shrilly when he was near her:

"Get out of the way!" she cried. "How can I see what the king is like if you will crowd me so!"

Turning, with a smile, to the excited old lady, King Alfonso whispered:

"Have a look at me—I am the king."

"King!" she exclaimed scornfully "You the king! Don't tell me that, you blackguard. Why, you're more like some one who has come to blow the poor boy up!"

Anecdote of R. Harding Davis.

The late Richard Harding Davis once dined with a Philadelphian whose hobby was autograph first editions. The man had first editions of Kipling, Stevenson, Howells and all the literary bigwigs, and in each book was a complimentary dedication to him signed by the author.

But some of these autograph dedications were looked on with suspicion, and Mr. Davis expressed this suspicion jocularly at the dinner in question when the host passed round the table a fine old folio Shakespeare.

Mr. Davis, manipulating a pencil unperceived, sent the Shakespeare back to his host with these words inscribed on the flyleaf:

"To John Blank, from his affectionate old friend and well wisher. Bill Shakespeare."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Just His Luck.

At breakfast the other morning a Chicago woman regarded her better half sternly and demanded:

"Tom, what did you do with that letter to Aunt Clara I gave you to mail last Tuesday?"

Tom clapped his hand on the breast pocket of his coat.

"Was it to Aunt Clara?" he asked, hastily extracting from his pocket a bundle of letters and miscellaneous documents and looking them over.

"Of course it was. I wrote to ask her to come and spend a month with us."

"Marie," gasped Tom, "I—I mailed it!"—Chicago News.

Suggestions For Home Decoration

The thing of greatest importance in the estimation of all authorities in home decoration is the value of color combinations.

The floor covering is just as important as the other decorations, and the color scheme of the room in which the rug is to be used should be kept in mind when purchasing. A red rug and blue wall paper would clash, and there are many other colors which do not combine any better.

On the whole, the plain carpet is the more satisfactory, for in time the eye becomes tired of the figures in a carpet, as well as those in the wall paper. The plain rug with the border a tone or two darker will fit into almost any color scheme.

The English ingrain rugs are being used much and wear well. Woven rugs made of the odds and ends of old carpets are much in vogue at present and wear excellently. The shades of the old carpet are blended beautifully into the new with no definite figure. There are many other kinds of carpets and rugs suiting all purses. But quality in a carpet or rug pays, as it does in other things.

While the choosing of a good rug has much to do with making an attractive room, it is only one of the things that contribute toward it. The window curtains, hanging in soft, straight lines and made of some white or cream material, will do far more toward making the room genuinely attractive than will the most expensive and elaborate valances.

"PRESIDENCY" BOOK

NOW READY

Contains Facts, Figures, Dates and Data About All Past And Present Elections

SETTLES ELECTION ARGUMENTS INSTANTLY

If you want to know how the political "machine" works; if you want to know the "strength" of each state; if you want to know how your state and other states have voted during the past twenty-five or thirty years—in other words, if you want to know a hundred and one different things about politics that the "other fellow" doesn't know, you have only to secure a copy of "The Presidency of the United States" and all of this desirable information will be yours.

This little book has been compiled by experts at great expense, and the information it contains is absolutely reliable and strictly non-partisan. It is not only intensely interesting but has a distinct educational value that makes it desirable for school children as well as for grown-ups.

"The Presidency of the United States" will be used by thousands of people this year as a quick and ready reference for information on all past and present elections, and as "final authority" for settling all election arguments and disputes.

The ability to answer correctly the questions this book contains indicates a more intimate knowledge of past history and current events than is possessed by the average citizen. Many a surprise is in store for anyone who thinks to do so without "brushing up."

We were fortunate in securing a supply of these books for immediate delivery. If you want one you can secure a copy at this office for "only ten cents."

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," was the favorite saying of old David Crockett. Those who believe in this motto will find in "The Presidency of the United States" an abundant supply of historical facts and non-partisan information upon which to base their statements and arguments during the 1916 presidential campaign.

Secure your copy at this office right away before the supply is exhausted. tf

Some of Burns' Phrases.

Here are a few specimens of Burns' happy phrases: "The best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft agley;" "The fear of hell's the hangman's whip, to haud the wretch in order;" "But pleasures are like poppies spread —you seize the flower, its bloom is shed;" "Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us to see ourselves as ithers see us;" "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn;" "Nursing her wrath to keep it warm;" "The mirth and fun grew fast and furious;" "What's done we partly may compute, but know not what's resisted;" "Princes and lords are but the breath of kings;" "The rank is but the guinea stamp; a man's a man for a' that."

The Farsighted Woman.

You are, let us say, a capable stenographer or a teacher. If through any untoward circumstances you should be bereft of one of the faculties necessary to your vocation, what would you do? Such things do happen, you know, and wise is the woman who cultivates a hobby or a vocation that employs other faculties than the ones she uses daily. If you know nothing else but teaching and should suddenly lose your hearing you would be stranded on the island of the helpless. If your daily work is of the manual sort, cultivate a hobby for something that requires mental effort. If your mental faculties are in use daily, give them a rest by doing some sort of manual work. Not only will you feel fresher in doing your own work, but you will have taken the first step in preparing yourself for any contingency that the future may hold.

COOLER ICEBOXES.

How to Keep Your Refrigerator Cold Without Extra Ice.

Many people do not keep their refrigerators at the proper temperature. Their economical nature permits the ice to melt away until there is little if any left in the compartment. This is a big mistake, for there is no economy in an empty refrigerator. The more ice you have in it the greater the economy. It is the melting of the ice which makes the refrigerator cold. The colder the refrigerator the more slowly will the ice melt.

Another way to keep the refrigerator cool is to open it as little as possible. It is also advantageous to keep the refrigerator in a cool part of the house.

It is difficult to say whether it is more important to keep the refrigerator cool or keep it clean. They are both big essentials in maintaining the health of the family. Every morning the refrigerator should be wiped out to remove the dampness which collects on the sides and affords a splendid place for bacteria growth. Once a week scald the refrigerator thoroughly with soda water. Cleanse all the corners and the drainpipes well. Fish, cheese, bananas, cantaloupes or any other strong smelling food should be kept well covered if placed in the refrigerator.

Feeding Hens In Summer.

Little care need be exercised in feeding laying hens at this time of year other than feeding plenty of grain, according to N. L. Harris, superintendent of the poultry farm of the Kansas State Agricultural college. Nature furnishes an ample supply of bugs and worms, thus giving the protein portion of the ration. The hens are also getting all of the necessary succulence in the green feed they find.

Don't Stimulate Laying.

Healthy fowls do not need medicine any more than does a member of the human family who is in good health, and since it is the nature of all hens to lay there is no reason why stimulants should be given. There are many things which will no doubt increase the egg supply for a short time, but disaster is sure to follow.

Feed For Molting Fowls.

Linseed meal given frequently in the proportion of one part meal to twenty parts grain or mash is good to keep the bowels of hens strong and vigorous and especially so during the molting season. Grit is of course necessary and should be sharp and clean and hard. Crushed charcoal is excellent for digestion.

Autumn suits are clinging to fullness indeed. This one takes such a skirt and emphasizes it in the coat skirt as well. A Desirable Shirt Waist.

Dotted organdy made into a cool and refreshing mid-summer waist. Hem-stitched lawn is used for the collar and cuffs

Very cool and crisp looking to wear on mid-summer mornings is this blouse of dotted organdy. It gains additional charm through its trimming of hem-stitched lawn used for the collar and cuffs. If desired, the collar may be fastened up to the neck and finished with a string tie of satin or velvet ribbon. In medium size the waist requires 2⅝ yards 36-inch material, with ¼ yard lawn for the trimming.

Before starting to sew the waist together, find the double "TT" perforations on the shoulder edge of the front and gather between these perforations. Then close the underarm and shoulder seams. Gather back on crossline of double "oo" perforations and ½ inch below. Adjust stay of material to position. This should be about ½ inch wide. Draw gathers in back to the desired size and stitch to position on stay, then close stay in front.

Next close the back seam of the collar and sew to neck edge, notches, center-backs and front edges even. Tack a piece of narrow tape to position underneath collar, at small "o" perforations to pass a ribbon tie through. Close back seam of facing (indicated by single large "O" perforation) adjust to position on collar, and underneath front, center-backs and corresponding edges even; stitch the inside edge of facing to position from back seam to small "o" perforation. Now, sew the lap of the sleeve to the slashed edges as notched, making a seam ⅜ inch wide at lower edge of slash and graduate seam into nothing at upper edge; fold lap through center, fell remaining edge over seam. Turn lap underneath the front slashed edge, and stitch lower edge to position. Gather lower edge of sleeve between double "TT" perforations. Close sleeve seam as notched. Line cuff, sew to sleeve as notched, large "O" perforation at seam of sleeve. Turn back on small "o" perforations.

A belt of any favored design may be worn with the waist.

Vogue Of The Cobweb Blouse

With the fastening left to the discretion of the wearer, this blouse of flesh colored crepe strikes a new note in daintiness. Collar and self-revers are hemstitched.

A dainty flesh colored crepe blouse, the fastening of which is left to the wearer's discretion, is shown here, trimmed with a hemstitched collar of self-material. The revers are cut in one with the front of the blouse and trimmed with coin dots embroidered in coarse silk. In medium size the waist requires 2½ yards 36-inch material.

If desired, the revers may be omitted by cutting off the front part of the front of the pattern along double "oo" perforations. To develope as pictured, however, first underface the front from front edge to 1 inch inside of line of single small "o" perforations. Now, gather the shoulder edge of front between double "TT" perforations. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Stitch a bias casing about 1 inch wide when finished underneath lower edge of blouse; insert elastic.

Sew collar perforated by letter "D" to neck edge, notches and center-backs even. Next close the sleeve seam as notched, then close seam of elbow cuff and sew to sleeve, bringing small "o" perforation in cuff to seam of sleeve. Bring seam of cuff to single large "O" perforation in sleeve, easing in any fulness. Sew sleeve in armhole, notches and small perforations even.

The charm of the simple, sheer blouse endures unconditionally from season to season and it is impossible to have too many in the wardrobe.

An Ancient Black Race.

Generally the Sudanese are a race of many origins, Berber and Arab mixing with their negro blood. But the sultan of Darfur reigns over an almost purely negroid people. They are derived from a negro tribe—the Nobatai—who were invited by Diocletian to settle above the first cataract and restrain the neighboring tribes from marauding and mischief. They accepted the invitation, founded a kingdom with old Dongola for its capital, gave the region its name Nubia and remained settled there until their utter rout and defeat by the invading Arabs in the fourteenth century. Some of them, however, escaped to the Darfur district.—London Chronicle.

Perils of the Woods.

"Johnny, why is it dangerous to go in the woods in summer?"

"That's easy. 'Cause the bullrush is out, the cowslips around, the grasses have blades, the flowers have pistils and the little twigs are shooting."

Origin of the French Tricolor.

The origin of the French tricolor is usually explained as it is by Carlyle: "Women, too, are sewing cockades—not now of green, which being d'Artois color the Hotel de Ville has had to interfere in it, but of red and blue, our old Paris colors. These, once based on a ground of constitutional white, are the famed tricolor—which (if prophecy err not) will go round the world." Another explanation, however, is that the tricolor combines the blue hood of St. Martin, which was borne on the standard of the ancient kings, the oriflamme (originally the banner of the abbey of St. Denis) and the white flag of the Bourbons. Others make it the shield of the Orleans family.

Diamond Veteran Says He Is Greatest All Round Player In Game's History.

"George Sisler, the St. Louis Browns' first sacker, is the greatest all around player the game ever produced," said a veteran St. Louis ball tosser recently. "We have had a number of men who could fill three or four positions on a team and fill them well, too, but they

He can pitch, catch and play any infield or outfield position in masterly style. Sisler is a speed marvel and a good batter. If he had the dash of Cobb he would easily be the greatest of all ball players," concluded the old timer.

Diamonds In This Country.

Diamonds are to be found in the United States, but only occasionally in alluvial materials and drift. More than fifty specimens have been identified, of which the largest, says the International Encyclopaedia, weighing nearly twenty-four karats, was found at Manchester, Va., in 1855. Their occurrence is generally confined to the regions of the southern Appalachians, the great lakes and to the coast and Sierra Nevada ranges of California and Oregon.

Pretty Newfoundland Miss Traveled to Vancouver to Marry.

Vancouver, Wash.—Coming all the way from St. Johns, Newfoundland, to meet her sweetheart of school days, Miss Isabel M. Ewing, a pretty twenty-two-year-old miss, was married to Herbert G. Bradley, a restaurant man of Portland, Ore., in the office of the county auditor here recently.

It was only a few hours after her arrival in Portland, whence she had come at Bradley's call, that they came to Vancouver together and were married. Though it was several hours after the time for the marriage license bureau to close, Mrs. May R. Hacok, the county auditor, obligingly went to the courthouse and issued a license.

Justice of the Peace W. S. T. Dart was called, and the ceremony was performed in the auditor's office. Only two friends from Portland and the local officials witnessed the ceremony.

Bradley left his home in Newfoundland several years ago and came west in search of fortune. In a dairy lunch business in Portland he built up an income sufficient to send for his sweetheart.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The Scrap Book

Too Much Ornithology.

Some years ago Carl Crow, the author, was a cub reporter on a newspaper, one of his duties being to cover the police station. One day just before press time he made his usual trip to see the desk sergeant.

"Have a great story for you," said the sergeant. "We arrested a parrot out on Front street awhile ago on a charge of using abusive language. The neighbors complained so much we had to go out and lock the old bird up."

After getting a few more details Crow rushed back to the office and wrote a funny story about the arrest of the bird. He was congratulating himself on landing a story on the first page an hour or so after the paper got on the streets when the telephone bell rang and he had to listen to a torrent of abuse from an irate lady at the other end of the line. It developed that she was Mrs. Parrot and she had been arrested for using abusive language, but she bitterly resented being written up as a bird. After she had exhausted her vocabulary and was preparing for a new start she asked:

"What is your name?"

"Crow," said the reporter.

"What did you say?"

"I said my name was Crow."

"You think you are blamed smart, don't you?" said the freshly insulted Mrs. Parrot as she hung up the receiver.—Exchange.

Sweet Content.

Sweet are the thoughts that savor of content.
The quiet mind is richer than a crown.
Sweet are the nights in careless slumbers spent.
The poor estate scorns Fortune's angry frown.
Such sweet content, such minds, such sleep, such bliss,
Beggars enjoy when princes oft do miss.

The homely house that harbors quiet rest,
The cottage that affords nor price nor care,
The mean that 'grees with country music best,
The sweet consort of mirth and modest fare—
Obscured life sets down a type of bliss.
A mind content both crown and kingdom is.
—Robert Greene.

Charlotte Rooster.

Samuel O'Keefe, a retired Wall street man, is almost a daily visitor at a hospital for joint diseases, where a friend is receiving treatment. There are many invalid children at the hospital and Mr. O'Keefe often takes them candy, and on one memorable occasion imported a consignment of charlotte russe.

A day or two following the charlotte russe festival he visited the children's ward again and was greeted by loud shouts of approval. His arrival was first noted by a little boy, said by the nurses to be "as smart as a whip," who shouted gleefully:

"Oh, look! here comes the charlotte rooster!"

Under the circumstances Mr. O'Keefe felt that any further refreshment ought to be "on him."—New York Sun.

A Real Puzzle.

Ezra Haskins, constable of a New England village, had an exalted opinion of his ability as a detective. He also read everything he could find on the career of Sherlock Holmes, until he imagined that he had thereby acquired wonderful deductive abilities. "Now, gentlemen," said he, on one occasion to his assistants in a particular case, "we have traced these clews—the footprints of the horse and the footprints of the man, right up here to this stump, from the stump on there's only the footprints of the horse. Now, gentlemen, the question arises: What has become of the man?"

GILMORE GIVES SOME INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT BASEBALL.

(By International News)

New York, August 21—"Sunny Jim" Gilmore is out of baseball "for all time, thank you,"—but he still loves the game.

The man who was baseball's most conspicuous figures during the stirring days of 1914 and 1915, now leads a placid life as a partner in the firm of Coyle and Gilmore, wholesalers in fine writing paper.

"A routine life never made a big appeal to me, but I must confess that I like this business a bit better than trying to make the folks believe they needed a third major league," commented the once-time prexy of the Feds. "I like battling and I like action, but, whew! that dose of it I got during my two years in baseball certainly cured me slightly of my desire for both.

"I never thought it was possible for a man to hop around as much as I did during 1914."

"How far was it?" we asked.

"55,000 miles—not including distance covered afoot and on street cars or in autos from January 1 to December 31, 1914," was the rather startling answer.

"Feds. Loss $500,000"—Gilmore.

"How much actually was lost in the Federal League venture?" was our next question.

"The net loss did not go much beyond 500,000," came Gilmore's surprising reply. "Those who have been making wild estimates of our losses forget two or three very important things in our favor. In the first place, we didn't pay a dollar for any of our players. When the league broke up those players were sold at sums ranging from $2,000 up to $35,000, which income helped to wipe out part of the first deficit.

"Furthermore, the National Commission made settlements in one way or another in favor of our club owners. That helped further to lessen the net loss. For instance: Pittsburgh suffered a gross loss of about $150,000 or so. But it was awarded a settlement of about $50,000 and got something like $35,000 from the sale of its players, equipment, etc.

"The Brooklyn Club, of course, was the heaviest gross loser. That was due to the fact that the Wards tied up about $350,000 or a bit more in their plant. But the National Commission awarded them a $400,000 settlement. So, you see, even in Brooklyn the loss wasn't anything very tremendous.

Weeghman Ultimate Winner.

"The Chicago club lost money, yet in the end, I think the stockholders profited. Charlie Weeghhan and his crowd probably tied up $500,000 in the Federal League, this including park, stands, etc. When peace came they purchased the Cubs for $450,000. That made their total baseball investment $950,000. Before the Feds began operating the Cub owners wanted about $1,250,000 for their property. Our war made them content to take $450,000. Therefore, the present Cub owners, for an investment of $950,000 have secured a club once valued at $1,250,000 and in addition, they have a new plant which wasn't figured in the original price asked for the Cubs in the days before the Feds came.

"Phil Ball lost some money operating in St. Louis. But by becoming a Fed magnate Bill ultimately realized his ambition to own the Browns. What he lost as a Fed he probably will be able to make up in two or three years as a Brownie owner. The Baltimore club actually made $9,000 during the 1914 season. It lost $50,000 during 1915. That made a net loss of $41,000. Baltimore had probably $75,000 tied up in stands, etc., but it got back part of that. So Baltimore's dead loss probably wasn't much more than $75,000, according to my reckoning.

"Buffalo and Kansas City lost during both years, yet neither had much involved in the way of stands, equipment, etc. Their overhead expense wasn't great. When peace came they didn't lose much by the scrapping of their ball parks. Harry Sinclair made money as a Rederal Leaguer, through the sale of players after peace came.

Why Feds Quit.

"Why did the Feds submit to peace and go out of business?"

"Because the chance to quit came at a time when some of our magnates were in a mood for it and also because the terms offered us by organized baseball were very fine, indeed." Gilmore replied. "The death of Robert B. Ward was a terrific blow to us. He was a fighter and a Federal League enthusiast; he would have gone the limit of his bankroll to win out in our fight.

"Ward died just at a time when some of our magnates were a bit discouraged by the review of the 1915 season. Immediately following his death came overtures, unofficial at first, from Organized Baseball. Later they were put into concrete shape.

"We found that the terms of settlement offered us by Organized Baseball were far better than we had expected. The matter was put up to our magnates. Weeghman and Ball favored their acceptance because the terms permitted them to buy Federal League franchises. The Ward family was tired of baseball and voted for peace. Sinclair wanted to go ahead with the fight, but he trailed with the majority faction. The Buffalo and Kansas City clubs were defunct. Baltimore early in the negotiations declared that the terms were acceptable to it.

"So peace resulted."

"And," we cut in, "you're through with baseball, eh?"

Gilmore Says "Never Again."

"Yep, as far as running a league is concerned—through for all time. Since I quit baseballing in an active way I have found that much money can be made with less effort. Joe Coyle and I started this business a year ago. We have applied to it the same sort of hustling, principles that I used in baseball. And within that year the business has grown to such a point that I believe we rank among the biggest concerns of our kind in the country.

"So why should I tackle baseball again when I can make much more money with less effort in the mercantile game? But,, I still love baseball and I slip away every afternoon that I can to see the Yanks or Giants repelling the invasion of foreign foes on the Polo Grounds.

"Baseball is a grand and glorious game—when you are a fan. But when you are presidenting a league that no one seemed to care about—well, that's something else again.

GRANT AND MARK TWAIN.

When the Humorist Took the Stump For the General.

The year 1880 was a presidential one. Mark Twain was for General Garfield and made a number of remarkable speeches in his favor. General Grant came to Hartford during the campaign, and Mark Twain was chosen to make the address of welcome. Perhaps no such address of welcome was ever made before. He began:

"I am among those deputed to welcome you to the sincere and cordial hospitalities of Hartford, the city of the historic and revered Charter Oak, of which most of the town is built."

He seemed to be at a loss what to say next, and, leaning over, pretended to whisper to Grant. Then, as if he had been prompted by the great soldier, he straightened up and poured out a fervid eulogy on Grant's victories, adding in an aside as he finished, 'I nearly forgot that part of my speech,' to the roaring delight of his hearers, while Grant himself grimly smiled.

He then spoke of the general being now out of public employment, of how grateful to him his country was, and how it stood ready to reward him "in every conceivable—inexpensive way."

Grant had smiled more than once during the speech, and when this sentence came out at the end his composure broke up altogether, while the throng shouted approval. Clemens made another speech that night at the opera house—a speech long remembered in Hartford as one of the great efforts of his life.

A very warm friendship had grown up between Mark Twain and General Grant. A year earlier, on the famous soldier's return from his trip around the world, a great birthday banquet had been given him in Chicago at which Mark Twain's speech had been the event of the evening. The colonel who long before had chased the young pilot soldier through the Missouri bottoms had become his conquering hero, and Grant's admiration for America's foremost humorist was most hearty.—Albert Bigelow Paine in St. Nicholas.

The Disappearing Lady.

The terms "madam" and "sir" are now employed much less than formerly, according to a book called "The A B C of Correct Speech," though, it says, children "should be taught to use these terms in speaking to ladies and gentlemen of the old school." "Lady" has also passed out of use in circles in which it was formerly current, except, curiously, the author observes, when a hostess talks to "her caterer or her maids." To them she describes her guests as "ladies," while to her friends they are "women" or "girls."—Outlook.

1366 PRISONERS TAKEN BY THE RUSSIANS

(By United Press)

Petrograd, August 21—The Russians further advanced their line in the severe fighting northeast of Kovel yesterday. It was officially announced today. They made considerable progress in the region of this same district in Saturday's fighting. 1,366 prisoners, 18 machine guns, and other material were captured.

FAMOUS WRESTLER PRISONER OF WAR

George Hackenschmidt, the famous "Russian Lion," is a prisoner of war in a German camp near Berlin, and he will never be able to wrestle again.

'This was the statement made recently by Jack Curley, Hack's former manager.

"I received a letter from George the other day," said Curley. "He is in a prison camp near Berlin, where he expects to stay until the war is over. He will never wrestle again. He has two good hands, but not two good legs. He has water on one knee and has had several operations for relief for the condition, but it will be impossible for him to do any mat work.

'He doesn't care much. All George wanted was the title. When he discovered that he couldn't beat Frank Gotch he quit the game. Hack is a rich man in his country, and he does not have to wrestle for the money that is in the game."

Much Cheaper Toothless.

With a view to advertising his business a dentist in an English town announced that he would supply artificial teeth to the first twelve aged ladies in poor circumstances who applied for them.

The earliest application on the appointed day was an elderly woman in shabby but respectable clothes.

Scarcely was she seated when a red faced old man came to the place and announced that he had come "about them teeth."

"You are making a mistake," the dentist replied. "I only made my offer to ladies. In fact, there's one lady waiting now."

"An' it's about 'er I've come," retorted the old man gruffly. "Tell 'er 'er 'usband's waitin' for 'er and if she don't 'op out quick there'll be trouble. She's got a happetite like an 'oss already, and if you set 'er up wi' a strong lot o' teeth she'll eat both me an' 'er into the work'us in a week. Send 'er out at once!"

How It Is Done.

"Dear Sir—Will you kindly publish directions for tying a bow tie? Roger Coot."

Well, Roger, you hold the tie in your left hand and your collar in the other. Slip your neck in the collar and cross the left hand end of the tie over the right with the left hand, steadying the right end with the other hand. Then drop both hands, catching the left with the right and the other with the other. Reverse hands and pick up the loose end with the nearest hand. Pull this end through the loop with your unengaged hand and squeeze. You will find the knot all tied, and all you have to do is to untangle your hands.—Dartmouth Jack-o'-Lantern.

Great Railroad Strike Is Still Pending

(By United Press)

Washington, August 22—The worst industrial struggle in the history of this country hangs in balance today. The question of accepting or rejecting the proposals made by President Wilson in an effort to avert the strike that would tie up the railroads of the country has now been passed to men whose money is invested in the great arteries of the nation's trade. As the situation stands this afternoon the employees have put their demand for an eight hour day and time and a half over time in the hands of the President. He has put it up to the heads of the great system and they in turn passed it on to the directors. After an all night session the select committee appointed by two score executors failed to reach a decision early today. They, then wired their directors and upon reply from the moneyed powers behind the country's transportation system, largely rests the final result.

It was this section that the President objected to.

FULTON HAS HALF THE NAMES ON THE COUNTY ROLL OF HONOR

Fulton has just cause now to feel proud of her local schools or at least should feel proud of the results that may be obtained therefrom. Out of twelve graduates in Oswego County Fulton has six on the honor roll of the county, who are in line for the scolarships awarded. There are only five scholarships awarded which is due to the fact that there is only one Assembly District in the county and the scholarships will for that reason be awarded the first five on the list.

SURPLUS PAID PERSONAL DEBTS

EXPLANATION GIVEN BY JOHN HUNTER IN $120,000 INQUIRY.

"The Hunter Arms Company had a surplus of more than $500,000. My brothers and I felt that we had the right to use the surplus by paying personal obligations instead of drawing dividends, as we owned all the capital stock of the company."

This, in substance, is the explanation given by John Hunter in justification of the use of Hunter Arms funds in paying notes and interest, aggregating $120,000 and constituting individual indebtedness of five of the six Hunter brothers.

The explanation was made yesterday at a hearing held by Andrew J. McNaught of Stanford, as special master in the bankruptcy case of the company, in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce in this city.

Object of Hearing.

Judge George W. Ray of the United States District Court recently appointed Mr. McNaught to obtain evidence which will guide the court in determining whether the trustees of the bankrupt Arms Company should sue banks and individuals to recover the $120,000, on the ground that these creditors should not have accepted company checks to liquidate the personal debts of the Hunters.

The payments were made to thirty-five banks and individuals in Syracuse and other cities during a period of six or eight years preceding the failure of the Hunter Arms Company in 1913. John, Thomas, Samuel C., James C., and Robert B. Hunter, were the makers of the notes. It did not appear yesterday that any personal banking business of William Hunter would figure in the proceedings.

Several on Stand.

Judge James P. Hill, and Nelson P. Bonney of Norwich, attorneys for the trustees in bankruptcy—Frank B. Hodges and Hurlbut W. Smith, of Syracuse and Frederick W. Gage of Fulton—conducted the examination before the special master. Besides John Hunter, who was secretary of the Arms Company, Thomas Hunter, the former president, and several other witnesses were sworn:

Many notes and checks were received in evidence. There was no dispute that the personal notes had, for the most part, been discounted for the purpose of promoting the various business ventures of the makers. The checks which paid interest and principal were identified as those of the company.

William P. Gannon, of Gannon, Spencer & Michell, attorneys for the Hunters, asked a few questions of John Hunter, and a plain statement of the policy which had been followed by the brothers was written into the court record.

Large Surplus Claimed.

"The Hunter brothers owned all the capital stock of the company," the witness said. "We felt that we could give the company checks in carrying on of large individual business enterprises in accordance with a perfect understanding among ourselves. The surplus was twice as much as we owed the company. We felt that, as the company belonged to us and was solvent, we could give the money away if we wanted to."

There were running debit and credit accounts for the brothers on the company books, and John Hunter explained that these accounts, in effect, constituted a clearing house for individual transactions.

Following this testimony there was a discussion between Judge Hill and Mr. Hunter over the question of the company's solvency at the time Hunter Brothers' accounts were overdrawn. When the company went into bankruptcy the brothers, with the exception of William and James, owed it approximately $400,000, the

MILLIONS OF DEAD MEN

Three million five hundred thousand dead men; ten million wounded and prisoners of war! That is the toil of the struggle in Europe to date, according to the best estimates. Thirteen million five hundred thousand soldiers removed from the ranks, many of them never again to appear in any ranks. That is what Europe has paid so far for her folly, and the slaughter continues.

According to this estimate, taken from the Literary Digest, was made—and a hundred and forty thousand more are reported wounded or missing; Austria-Hungary has had 500,000 killed and 1,500,000 wounded or missing; France, 800,000 killed and 1,200,000 wounded or missing; Great Britain, 150,000 killed, 470,000 wounded or missing. But Russia rises over and above them all—1,000,000 killed, 4,000,000 wounded or missing—five million men who have enterede the ranks of the czar put out of business one way or another, a million of them dead and buried or rotting on the the fields of carnage.

Little Belgium is a hundred and fifty thousand men poorer than she was—thirty thousand other soldiers dead. Italy has thirty-five thousand in killed—there are other thousands dead since the report was made—and a hundred and fort ythousand more are reported wounded or missing. The Turks are credited with a loss of three hundred thousand, and the Bulgarians with a loss of a hundred and fifty thousand.

Each of these men ought to have produced a thousand dollars worth of wealth in a year. Every one of them was in the prime of life, and the best of health, and able to devote all of his time to producing—so a thousand dollars a year of wealth would be a reasonable amount to credit each with being able to produce. On that basis, we have thirteen billion five hundred million d ollars less of wealth than we should have had if it had not been for the war. Add this vast sum to the cost of the war as figured out in dollars and cents, and the figures become staggering in their vastness. But even then, the full cost of the war is not seen, for there have been hundreds of we have thirteen billion five hundred million dollars less of wealth that might have been produced by non-combatants, but which was not produced because of the war. But it is useless to try to compute the cost; it is too great for human mind to grasp.

MONEY IN POLITICS

Reference was made the other day to the demands for money made on political candidates. The man with the tradition "bar'l" is esteemed a prize in all parties. He constitutes an abuse, but he is exceedingly useful.

It is not merely that the wealthy candidate's money is so very helpful. He has leisure that can be given to party work. If he earned his money himself, he has business ability and brains. These qualities are none too common in politics.

The best asset for party success is a ticket of candidates of sound, practical judgment, broad intelligence, the knowledge of human nature. Where the leadership is placed in the hands of such, money comes in easily. The campaign is conducted on a high plane, it appeals to intelligent and liberal minded citizens. The chances of success are multiplied. Candidates that can place their campaigns on this basis are the most profitable political assets, even if they can't contribute a dollar to the war chest.

Political committees, however, are apt to judge a candidate by his ability to "loosen up." Even if he is a poor man, they assume he should be willing to contribute his first year's salary. If he loses, they feel the honors of the position should compensate.

This tendency to "fry the fat" and put on the pecuniary screws, frightens out of the political game, men who are needed there. They have a taste for politics, ability for public speech, tact in handling men, and a sensitive feeling of the public pulse. But they do not propose to be bled by the leeches and camp followers of the party headquarters. Too often leadership goes to money without brains. This is a combination that does not appeal to the voters.

HIS ASPIRATION

In youth life blooms before us like a rose-hedged road running straight to the sun-kissed hilltop of high success. With years must come to most of us more or less disillusion. The beautiful castles we seemed to see far ahead prove in many instances but dead heaps of stone that we must laboriously surmount.

But we must not cease to dream. Dreams are the stars of our destiny, and the soul without them gropes in the dark and gets nowhere.

This is the difference between the great and the little souls of earth; The little soul, disappointed, ceases to dream; the great soul dreams on, and makes his dream come true.

Every great soul of man has had its vision and pondered it until the passion to realize it has dominated his life.

It is he who aspires highly who highly achieves. The world over, a man's achievement depends upon his aspiration far more than upon his environment.

If his longing be zealous and soul-deep, it will express itself in action and find the way upward as naturally as a bird takes wing.

It will cause to grow within him the qualities that bring success, as it causes the plant to shoot upward toward the light, and as it enabled the eagle to develop his wings that lift him to the sky he first yearned for.

Nothing else will so surely carry one to success as will a complete surrender to a passion for excellence—to a lofty ideal. This is the steam in the human engine.

TO ELEVATE THE RACE

A Cornell professor is reported in favor of "exterminating the congenitally weak, criminal and diseased members of society, as so many rattlesnakes might be killed."

While there is nothing exactly new in this proposition, it has never been seriously considered outside of a circle of so-called reformers who would breed human beings as dumb animals are bred, with a view solely to the elevation of the physical standard.

If the fact could be established that the elevation of the physical standard would insure the moral and intellectual elevation of the race, something might be said in support of the proposition to deal with a portion of human beings as one would deal with rattlesnakes.

But the fact has never yet been established that physical superiority tends in a noticeable degree to develop intellectual or moral qualities.

The prize winners in athletic games are not regarded as the probable source of our great men. Jack Johnson has been pronounced the most nearly perfect specimen of physical manhood a century has produced, but Johnson's moral and intellectual qualities are not considered to be of a high order.

It is safe to assume that the Almighty knows His business and will remove all human creatures in His own good time.

NO WAR FOR US

"Be American first" ought to be good advice for those who are permitting their sympathies with some European nation or other to overrule their American patriotism.

The Ohio State Journal says: "There is not an issue between this nation and the warring powers that could not be setetled without a quarrel, much less a war. Every day more complicated questions are settled in regular business. Sometimes it might require a little more concession than in a fight."

Suppose we make a little concession; then the other side will, too, and there we break off even. But if a concession save 50,000 lives, hurrah for the concession. There is never a true life, national or individual, that does not concede something. The Bible is full of concessions; which means that in human affairs, right is seldom absolute. The concession spirit never has its rightful opportunity if vanity steps in and prepares itself for war. This country is going to have no war with anybody; it isn't ready for one and it isn't going to get ready.

PROSPERITY BASED ON WAR

Congressman Anderson Refutes Democratic Claims Regarding Present Business Conditions.

WAR EXPORTS ENORMOUS.

And Show an Increase of Over 350 Per Cent, While other Exports Fall Off—Some Significant Statistics.

In a speech in the house of representatives on Aug. 11 Congressman Anderson of Minnesota punctured the Democratic claim that the present prosperity of the country is not the result of the European war.

After stating that it is a universal rule, tested by the experience of this and other countries, that the increasing or decreasing of the tide of exports is the best and soundest index of the business of the country, he made a comparision of the exports of the country for the fiscal years 1913, 1914, 1915 and 1916 and showed the enormous increase in the exports of war materials and the decrease in exports of materials not affected by the war. He said:

"In 1913, a Republican year, the exports of group 1, non-war materials, amounted to $745,973,561, and group 11, war materials, to $422,294,233.

"In 1914, a Democratic year, the exports included in group 1, non-war materials, had fallen to $647,789,184, and group 11, war materials, to $346,045,051—a falling off in the exports of group 1 amounting to $98,184,377, or 13.1 per cent, and in group 11, war materials, $76,248,182, or 18 per cent.

"In 1915 the exports of group 1, non-war materials, continued to fall off until it had been reduced for that year to $473,593,164. In other words, the business depression resultant upon the passage of the Underwood tariff law continued to show its effects in the exports of non-war materials included in group 1. Now, let us see what happened in group 11, war materials. In 1915 the exports of this group had increased until it represented the enormous sum of $1,120,093,109. In other words, while the exports of non-war materials fell off $272,383,397, or 36.5 per cent, as compared with the normal Republican year 1913, the exports of war materials included in group 11 increased $683,799,476, or 154 per cent, as compared with 1913.

"Again in 1916 as compared with 1913 the exports of the first group, non-war materials had fallen off to $652,699,848 while exports of group 11, war materials, increased to $1,910,238,672.

"To express it yet more clearly, exports of non-war materials as compared with 1913, a normal year, fell off in 1916 $93,303,713, or 12.5 per cent, while group 11, war materials, increased as compared with 1913 $1,487,944,439, or 352 per cent."

EVERY ONE CAN HELP.

Republican State Committee Appeals to All Patriotic Citizens to Assist In Electing Hughes and Fairbanks.

The Republican state committee appeals to patriotic citizens throughout the state for financial aid in carrying on its campaign to win the state this year for Hughes and Fairbanks and the Republican state ticket. Over the whole state is found a pronounced trend toward the Republican party as the means of protection to American lives, American business and American honor. The committee proposes to conduct a campaign of the utmost vigor against the return of Tammany Hall and the continuation of the Wilson administration. This cannot be done unless the necessary funds can be raised to carry on the work. The committee finds that it must depend upon the patriotic citizens of the state for means to carry on its campaign. This campaign is to be one of all of the people, and any who feel that they wish to have a substantial part in it now have the opportunity.

Any amount, no matter how small or large, will be gratefully accepted, and the committee assures all contributors that every dollar will be expended carefully, lawfully and judiciously.

Remittances should be sent at once to Otis H. Cutler, treasurer, 1 Madison avenue, New York. The need of funds for present work is very urgent and will serve a more useful purpose than if sent late in the campaign.

Just one speech of Mr. Hughes was sufficient to involve the Wilson administration in a maze of mendacity regarding the civil service. HOW TO MEASURE

Do Proportions Bother You Greatly on Cooking Days?

LIQUIDS AND THICKENINGS.

This List Will Be of Real Help to the Home Baker—Interesting and Valuable Items About the Art of Simple Everyday Cookery.

Proportion often bothers the best of cooks to a tremendous extent. She may be glad, therefore, to have the following very useful table:

Batters, one cupful of liquid to one cupful of flour.

Muffin or cake dough, one cupful of liquid to two cupfuls of flour.

Dough to knead, one cupful of liquid to three cupfuls of flour.

Dough to roll out, one cupful of liquid to four cupfuls of flour.

Six teaspoonfuls of baking powder to one quart of flour, if no eggs are used or one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder to one cupful of flour.

One-half teaspoonful of soda or one teaspoonful of cream of tartar is about equivalent to two teaspoonfuls of baking powder.

One-half cupful of liquid yeast equals one-half dry yeast cake or one-fourth compressed yeast cake.

One cupful of liquid yeast, one dry yeast cake, or one-half compressed yeast cake to one pint of liquid if bread is raised during the day.

One-half cupful of liquid yeast, one half dry yeast cake or one-fourth compressed yeast cake to one pint of liquid if bread is raised overnight.

One and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda to one pint of thick sour milk.

One and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda to one pint of molasses.

One teaspoonful of soda to one and one-half cupfuls of thick sour cream.

One-half cupful of cornstarch to one quart of milk for blancmange.

One teaspoonful of salt to one quart of soup stock, gruels, etc.

One-eighth teaspoonful of pepper to each teaspoonful of salt.

Two to four egg yolks to one pint of milk for soft custards.

Two to three whole eggs to one pint of milk for cup custards.

One teaspoonful of salt to one quart of water for boiling vegetables, meats, etc.

Two tablespoonfuls of flour to one cupful of liquid for white sauces and gravies.

ter of wax flowers and black velvet ribbon streamers add much to its picturesqueness. It is worn with a white net frock.

Homemade Pillowcases.

Any one who has any spare time can devote it pleasantly and usefully by making pillowcases. They can be made much cheaper than bought and with little or no trouble. You can buy pillow tubing at 25 cents a yard. Two yards will make a pair. Draw very evenly two rows of shallow scallops around the opening. Be careful that you measure them evenly so that you will not have uneven scallops at the end. That done, crochet a double edging without hemming the case. For 55 cents you can make a handsome pair of pillow cases. If desired one or more initials could be embroidered in the center above the crocheted edge.

Barberry Sauce.

One peck of barberries, six quarts of sweet Baldwin apples, sugar and the best molasses. Pick stems off, wash and peel the apples, core and cut in quarters. If you have three bowls of berries after they are picked take two bowls of granulated sugar and one bowl of molasses. Mix, then add the apples and cook till tender. Remove, add the berries, boil hard till you can see the seeds in them, then add the apples and simmer till it is done. You can tell if it is done by cooking a little in a flat dish. If boiled too long it will candy when cold.

STRONG SUPPORT FOR W. M. CALDER

New York City Republicans Solidified by Eleventh Hour Opposition to Him

HOME NEWSPAPERS PRAISE CONGRESSMAN

Brooklyn Standard Union, Owned by Regent William Berri, Regards Bacon as Candidate of Wall Street—Urges No False Pretenses in Contest—Declares Calder's Opponent Is Back Number on Preparedness Issue—Brooklyn Times Also Strongly Supports Calder.

New York City neighbors of former Congressman William M. Calder have rallied to his support in magnificent fashion since the announcement that he will have opposition in the Republican primaries for the United States Senatorial nomination. The effect of opposition has been to solidify the lower end of the state for him.

In Kings County, the home section of Mr. Calder, the move of opposition has developed some interesting editorial comment in his favor. In The Brooklyn Standard Union, one of the strongest Republican newspapers of the state, of which Regent William Berri is the owner, the injection of eleventh hour opposition is credited to Wall Street. In a recent leading editorial, the situation is summed up in this fashion:

But Do Not Enter the Fight Under False Pretenses.

Of course every Republican has a right to offer himself as a candidate for any office the nomination to which is secured at the primaries. That is what direct primaries are for—to give all an equal chance. There should, moreover, be no false pretense, no attempt to deceive the voters by misrepresentations, direct or indirect.

A little latitude of statement is allowed in framing an indictment against the opposing party, but when the contest is for a nomination between members of the same party the situation is somewhat different.

The loser must support the winner at the polls.

It is well, therefore, to be careful in planning a primary campaign lest complications should arise that might be embarrassing later on.

One of our morning contemporaries carries this paragraph touching the proposal of Mr. Robert Bacon to contest the primary nomination for United States Senator, as the candidate of Mr. William Barnes, of Albany, against ex-Congressman William M. Calder:

"Mr. Bacon will make his campaign entirely along the lines of military preparedness, universal military service, etc. He hesitated some time before entering the fight against Mr. Calder, as he thought such action might hurt the national ticket, but the anti-Whitman-Calder forces convinced him that this was not likely, and that he would stand an excellent chance of winning. Members of the Republican Old Guard are still debating whether to enter a candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination against Governor Whitman. William Barnes, former State Chairman, who is against Whitman, is anxious to bring forth a candidate, but up to the present a suitable one has not been discovered."

One plain implication of that inspired outgiving is that Mr. Bacon entered the campaign for Senator at the eleventh hour because the military preparedness issue had been neglected or not adequately presented by William M. Calder, a Republican whose ten active years in Congress has made him perhaps the best-equipped man in this State to deal with such an issue. Moreover, he has dealt with it in the canvass he has already made, and in every corner of the State he has roused the people to enthusiasm.

Putting preparedness forward as a special Bacon issue is false pretense.

And it is a false pretense that will be at once apparent to the voters in every part of the State who have heard Mr. Calder's speeches since the Republicans of Kings County—the county casting the largest Republican vote in this State and perhaps in this country—put him forward as their candidate for United States Senator.

Politically, the Barnes move is a very cunning one.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Barnes are known to be at daggers' points for reasons familiar to every voter in the State. Now, Mr. Bacon was a member of Mr. Roosevelt's kitchen or tennis Cabinet when the Colonel was in the White House. Therefore, no suspicion that Mr. Bacon was a Barnes candidate could stand.

A deft move, indeed!

But so was the nomination of Horace Greeley for President by the Democrats in 1872. Greeley, a Republican of the Republicans, had gone bail for Jefferson Davis when the President of the Confederacy was arrested for treason. The old-time Republicans would stick by the abolitionist leader of earlier days while the Southern Democrats would come heartily to the support of the man who went bail for Jefferson Davis.

That was the "dope" as it would be called to-day.

And the result?

Why, that Horace Greeley, a really great American and a splendid patriot, fell into a false position and was the worst beaten man who had every run for the Presidency up to that time.

When Mr. Hearst was charged with being Boss Murphy's candidate for Governor he could not deny the Boss' convention had given him the nomination, but he said that while Mr. Murphy might be for him he was not for Mr. Murphy. It was a clever defense, but despite it Charles E. Hughes, now the Republican candidate for President, beat Mr. Hearst by many thousands of votes, although the remainder of the Democratic State ticket was elected by heavy majorities.

Mr. Bacon may not be for Mr. Barnes.

His motives for entering the race may be altogether different from those which cause Mr. Barnes to come so actively to his support, yet he is a Barnes candidate; yes, the Barnes candidate, and will be known as such to every Republican voter in the State of New York.

Mr. Bacon is also regarded as the Wall Street candidate.

In addition to having been at one time a member of Col Roosevelt's tennis Cabinet, Mr. Bacon was at another time a very important member of the firm of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. when—it was before the passage of the Federal Reserve Board banking legislation—that gigantic financial concern was commonly regarded as the head of the Money Trust in this country. Peculiar significance is therefore lent to this eleventh hour candidacy of a former member of the firm of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. at this time by reason of the enormous American loan of $250,000,000 to England. which the Morgan company is just now engaged in financing.

Mr. Bacon could not, in his official capacity, if he were elected, do anything about the loan one way or another, nor is there anything new in his attitude toward the Morgan firm, which is the representative of England in this country but it may be set down as certain Mr. Barnes' candidate for the United States Senate will not lack financial support of a very substantial kind in his eleventh hour fight to take away the Senatorial nomination from the only Republican in this city of more than 5,000,000 of people who was elected to Congress in 1912. Compared with Congressman Calder Mr. Bacon is a back number on the preparedness issue.

Here is the view of the Brooklyn Times, another Republican newspaper, concerning the opposition to Congressman Calder:

Bacon the Brahmin Candidate.

Mr. Robert Bacon has accepted the designation of the reactionary cabal that is alarmed by the popular strength and popular purpose behind the Senatorial candidacy of William M. Calder, and, according to his own announcement, will make a contest in the primaries. Mr. Bacon has enjoyed distinguished appointive office through the generosity of the Republican party. It would seem but poor requital at this time, when the party has healed one breach of long standing in its ranks, to attempt to open another.

Undoubtedly the reactionaries are in desperate state of mind when they adopt this desperate expedient. They have endeavored to conceal themselves and their purposes, but a member here and there has stuck out of an ill-fitting cloak of invisibility and betrayed the combination as that reactionary bi-partisan brotherhood which only recently endeavored by every possible method to sidetrack the Presidential candidacy of Mr. Hughes, and which has been particularly uneasy since the fact became clear that Mr. Calder was the choice of the Republican rank and file. An effort to drag Col. Roosevelt into the battle on behalf of the Brahmin caste was made. It failed completely. Mr. Roosevelt said emphatically:

> I shall take no part in any primary fight in this or any other State. I hope this will end all such talk.

Likewise, there seems to be failure in the attempt to draw Senator Harvey D. Hinman into the struggle. Senator Hinman, who entered the primaries on behalf of Col. Roosevelt two years ago against Mr. Whitman, has not been cordial in his response to the advances of interests with which he has never been in political sympathy.

Consequently we have a very clear-cut situation notwithstanding a certain furtivity on the part of Mr. Calder's opponents. The battle is between the bi-partisan Brahmin caste and the rank and file of the Republican party. It is between the instinct and the representative of popular government and the instinct and representative of government by a privileged class. Who can doubt the issue?

Carlyle smoked often and complained much of dyspepsia. A friend once ventured to suggest that his smoking might perhaps injure and depress him. "Yes," Carlyle said, "and the doctors told me the same thing. Names Being Secured.

The local Chamber of Commerce office is fast taking the names of people, who are desirous of obtaining work in the new shirt factary that is contemplating locating in this city.

President W. P. Morin stated this morning that the concern was financed sufficiently and that no bonus whatever would be needed.

As the condition of the concern exists at present, much labor trouble is met with at their factory now in New Jersey and the main reason for changing location was to meet better labor facilities therefor a guarantee of at least fifty people, mostly girls and women, must be had. Progress of the factory will grow according to the labor support of Fulton. The process of stitching will be the only undertaking at the factory providing they locate here.

DR. WALKER DOES NOT AGREE WITH OTHER M. D'S

DOCTORS HAVE DIFFERENT OPINIONS REGARDING INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 22—Infantile paralysis is not contagious. Take Dr. Mary Walker's word for it. She has written a letter to the State Fair Commission roundly scoring doctors who advance the theory that it is caused by a germ and declares it is due to soda placed in milk and tobacco poisoning.

"If there is anything I deplore more than anything else," writes the doctor, "it is a person sitting high up on the pinnacle of science and sending down to the people falsehoods. I here and now draw up an indictment against those who have thrown broadcast the story that there is a germ in infantile paralysis and that it is contagious. The germ theory in most cases ought to be buried so deep that it will reach China.

"Many physicians think it is their bounden duty to sanction any theory that falls down from a higher source and many others unreasonably accept what they have no time to investigate and have not the moral courage to question.

"I make no comment on the originators of the deliberate falsehoods and I expect abuse for telling the truth and preventing people from becoming intolerably wretched because of a belief that the general public is made to harbor because of the source obtained. This I denominate as 'scientific barbarism' that is a par with China throwing girl babies into the streets to die or under the command of officers killing Belgian children.

"Call this strong language but the portrayal of truth is always strong. The fact is that infantile paralysis is caused by soda in milk and tobacco poisoning.

"Milkmen put soda in milk to prevent it from souring. It causes a running of the bowels that carries away the nourishment and in this weakened condition the poison of tobacco that is in almost every home, paralyzes the nerves that are too weak to resist the nicotine which has a deadening effect on the nerves. That is all there is to the question.

"All milk dealers should be put under bond not to put soda in their milk."

Dr. Walker asked the fair commission if there was any chance of any of the attractions being curtailed because of the paralysis epidemic.

ONION CROP NOT UP TO STANDARD

WILL BE ABOUT 1,000,000 BUSHELS SHORT OF LAST YEAR IN THIS STATE.

Oswego county's onion crop will not be so large this year as last according to the prognostications of the Bureau of crop estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture. In a bulletin issued by L. A. Estabrook, chief of the bureau, is given acreage of the commercial acreage harvested and total production of onions in 1915 throughout the state and predictions of production based on the condition of the crop as reported on August 1.

The total acreage of onions harvested in this state in 1915 was 12,551, or 3,602,137 bushels. This year only 9,389 acres were planted and the bureau figures that 2,722,810 bushels will be produced. Ohio will have a larger onion crop it being estimated that 1,800,0000 bushels will be produced in that state as against 272,000 bushels last year. The acreage there, however, has been more than doubled, this year it being 5,302 as against 2,600 last year.

The counties or districts in New York state included in the above estimate besides Oswego are Cattaraugus, Cayuga, Chautauqua, Genessee, Livingston, Madison, Monroe, Niagara, Oneida, Onondaga, Ontario, Orange, Orleans, Seneca, Wayne and Yates.

STRING OF INTERROGATIONS TO FEASE WILSONIDOLATERS

Questionaire No. 1—Will All the Wilson Notes Be at His Notification?—How Did Fool Free Trade Hit Your Line of Business Just Before the Battles Began?—When the War Babies Die Will You Weep at the Funeral?

The question habit grows. You may ask a question of any one. Why should the dear old public escape? Here are a few from The New York Sun for the man in the street:

Do you approve of the Rivers and Harbors loot?

Do you want four years more of watchful waiting with the National Guardsmen undergoing military training in a tropical climate in midsummer?

Do you hold that the duty of the United States is to serve humanity and let its own citizens be killed and outraged.

Do you feel proud of notes with nothing behind them?

What do you think of the Vera Cruz adventure?

Would you like to have been an American soldier at Carrizal?

Do you love Carranza?

Do you believe in a financial regime conducted largely in the interest of one section of the country?

Do you desire to cut the Philippines loose in order that Japan may gobble them?

Do you want four more years of Daniels?

Do you approve of wrecking the diplomatic service to provide jobs fo. deserving Democrats.

Are you in favor of inflation?

Do you believe in preparedness for a flood of cheap European wares as soon as peace comes?

Have you noticed the significant increase of imports in the past year, despite the war?

How did fool free trade hit your line of business before August, 1914?

And your friends?

Were you all cheered up by the Underwood tariff bill?

Do you think the doubling of the income tax is fair while millions' worth of competitive imports come in free?

Where are you going to be when the war babies die and business slips back to the cold, hard, normal basis?

Can you conceive of any possible good to you or to the country from another Presidential term like the present one?

Will you perpetuate sectionalism, greed, ignorance, stupidity—general ineptitude in Congress?

ATTRACTS BUSINESS MEN.

Mr. Hughes has not tried to scare anybody, but has merely portrayed the errors of the present Administration and set forth certain principles on which the affairs of the country should be managed in the future.

There is a political logic in this portrayal, the culmination of which in the mind of the voter is expressed by the frequent remark:

"He is the kind of man we want to steer us through."

This has been said by many a business man. The qualities seen in Mr. Hughes are poise, a strong, sane mind, sincerity and a willingness to sacrifice life, physical or political, to the good of the country. Nor is there any question as to the quality of nerve to meet the emergencies of the four years beginning March 4, 1917.

HOME OF AVERAGE MAN.

"But America is not simply a land for the man of special talent or of distinguished aptitude. This is the home of the average man, the ordinary man who is doing his best, whatever, by talent or aptitude and in our large industrial occupations where thousands are gathered together in one service, we want a recognition of human brotherhood in providing for the welfare of those who make the wealth of this great country.

"We want workingmen to be safeguarded from every injury that can be prevented. We want the health of the workingmen looked after; every means provided which conduces to the proper standpoint of living; every means provided for proper recreation; appropriate means for education, for vocational training. In short the workingman who is on the job and expects to continue in that job ought to feel that he is doing something worth while for a community that appreciates it and gives him a fair chance to lead a happy and decent life.—From Mr. Hughes speech at Detroit.

indebtedness of John Hunter amounting to $150,000.

Later Proved Valueless.

"In considering the company solvent you figured in investments which later proved valueless, did you not?" Judge Hill asked.

"No, sir," Mr. Hunter replied.

Judge Hill then mentioned the following items which he recalled had been carried as assets and after the bankruptcy had turned out to be worthless, or nearly so: Porcupine Gold Mining Company, $100,000; Sleeper ranch, $78,000; Mattle Island Paper Company, $150,000; John Hunter account, $150,000; accounts of three other brothers, about $250,000.

Mr. Hunter insisted that the Hunter Arms Company was solvent, even with these so-called assets eliminated, but "could not have shown it in five minutes." Later Mr. Bonney stated that creditors of the Hunter Arms Company have been paid about 25 cents on the dollar and that there is no more money in sight.

S. D. Paddock's Checks.

Included in the mass of documentary evidence introduced yesterday were checks totallying $1,440, which had been given by the Arms Company to the late Simon D. Paddack of Syracuse or his estate in payment of interest on notes, as follows: John Hunter, $10,000; James Hunter, $9,000; Thomas Hunter, $5,000; F. W. Lasher, executor of the estate, testified as to these payments. Irving D. Vann appeared as counsel for Mr. Lasher.

The hearing was indefinitely postponed today on account of excessive heat.

ERICSSON, INVENTOR OF THE MONITOR, TO HAVE $100,000 MEMORIAL IN WASHINGTON, SOON.

(By United Press)

Washington, August 22—Fifty-four years after his epochal "cheese-box on a raft" rescued the Union navy from utter destruction. John Ericsson, inventor of the historic Monitor of Civil war days, is to have a memorial erected to him here, it seems certain today.

A bill for a $100,000 memorial has passed the House and with strong backing is awaiting action in the Senate. Swedish-American societies are urging the bill and expect its passage at this session. It developed in the House Library committee's hearings that the United States owes Ericsson, or his heirs, an acknowledged debt, the interest on which, if compounded at four per cent. would exceed the sum about to be appropriated for his memorial. Efforts to collect this money have been discontinued as useless, however.

Her Words Came True.

The squad had been particularly stupid, and the drill sergeant was exasperated. After vainly attempting to induce them to execute some movements he gave the order, "Stand at ease." Addressing them seriously, he said: "I remember when I was a small boy I had a set of toy soldiers made of lead and tin. One day I lost them, and I wept bitterly. My mother told me not to fret; that some day I would find them again, and, by gum, I have!"—Vancouver World.

RAILROAD WAGES

Shall they be determined by Industrial Warfare or Federal Inquiry?

To the American Public:

Do you believe in arbitration or industrial warfare?

The train employes on all the railroads have voted whether they will give their leaders authority to tie up the commerce of the country to enforce their demands for a 100 million dollar wage increase.

The railroads are in the public service—your service. This army of employes is in the public service—your service.

You pay for rail transportation 3 billion dollars a year, and 44 cents out of every dollar from you goes to the employes.

On all the Eastern Railroads in 1915, seventy-five per cent of the train employes earned these wages (lowest, highest, and average of all) as shown by the payrolls—

	Passenger Range	Passenger Average	Freight Range	Freight Average	Yard Range	Yard Average
Engineers	$1641 3224	$1931	$1585 2992	$1783	$1303 2178	$1543
Conductors	1553 3004	1831	1552 2901	1642	1145 1991	1315
Firemen	951 1704	1128	933 1762	1109	752 1633	935
Brakemen	957 1707	1141	862 1521	973	834 1635	1085

The average yearly wage payments to all Eastern train employes (including those who worked only part of the year) as shown by the 1915 payrolls were—

	Passenger	Freight	Yard
Engineers	$1796	$1546	$1384
Conductors	1724	1404	1238
Firemen	1033	903	844
Brakemen	1018	858	990

A 100 million dollar wage increase for men in freight and yard service (less than one-fifth of all employes) is equal to a 5 per cent advance in all freight rates.

The managers of the railroads, as trustees for the public, have no right to place this burden on the cost of transportation to you without a clear mandate from a public tribunal speaking for you.

The railroads have proposed the settlement of this controversy either under the existing national arbitration law, or by reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission. This offer has been refused by the employes' representatives.

Shall a nation-wide strike or an investigation under the Government determine this issue?

HUGHES WILL SPEAK AT STATE FAIR

(By United Press)

New York, August 22—William R. Willcox, chairman of the Republican National Committee announced today that ex-Governor Hughes would speak at the New York State Fair at Syracuse on Grange Day, Tuesday, September 12.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS MET

INTERESTING MEETING HELD LAST EVENING

A meeting of the Board of Public Works was held last night to discuss the paving of streets in the city. The paving board had as their representative, F. A. Gage. The Empire United Railway was represented by H. C. Beatty and Chief Engineer H. J. Clark. Messrs. Joseph H. Conners and W. J. Hartnett were present as delegates from the Pathfinder Construction Company.

The main question to be presented was the changing of the construction of the road bed of the trolley track. The trolley company asked that the city install steel rails along the track line, the same to be imbedded. O. C. Breed, former city engineer agreed that if the rails be properly laid the idea would prove satisfactory. The trolley company representatives stated that this kind of construction was approved by the state department of highways. A visit to Cortland was planned for the purpose of examining similar construction used in that city.

The Board will meet again tomorrow night.

A plea was made by N. A. Locke and Ernest Mead to the Board in regard to improving North Sevent street, owing to the fact that funds are low nothing definite could be given these gentlemen.

Irving Galusha appeared with a petition before the Board to pave Cayuga street, between Fourth and Fifth streets. Nothing definite was done.

A petition bearing the names of many property owners in the city and town of Granby was rendered. The petition stated that these people were very desirous of removing the obstructions in the Old Tannery Creek. It will be given recognition by an investigating committee later.

CANDIDATE HUGHES WILL SPEAK AT STATE FAIR NEXT MONTH.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 22—Arrangements have been completed whereby Charles E. Hughes, the Republican candidate for president will speak at the state fair grounds, September 12, the second day of the fair.

The state fair commission invited both Hughes and Mr. Wilson. Mr. Hughes was quick to accept, but it is doubtful whether the president will be able to leave Washington because of the rush of work.

FLEETING PROSPERITY IS FOOL'S PARADISE

Don't Let Smoke From Munition Factories Cloud Your Brain With Belief It's Abiding.

PROTECTION, OUR BULWARK.

Forget Not the Dire Conditions Which Depressed This Country Under the Democratic Free Trade Tariff Prior to the War—They Will Return to Plague and Hunger You Unless the Republicans Are Restored to Power.

"When we contemplate industrial and commercial conditions," says Mr. Hughes, "we see that we are living in a fool's paradise." This is the condition to which the administration and its supporters have deliberately closed their eyes. When the war cloud broke over Europe, this country was experiencing the most serious depression it had known since 1893, when the Democratic party and its policies were in full control of the United States.

Suddenly there came from over the sea a demand for munitions of war, clothing, food, supplies, everything needed by vast armies and by countries whose sons were taken from the field and the workshop, never to return.

As a result our exports and the balance of trade in our favor have reached figures far surpassing any ever before known. Temporarily, especially in the East, there is no lack of work at high wages, for Europe must pay whatever price America asks. No thoughtful person would imagine that this condition is anything like real prosperity. How false it is, we in Oregon, who have the clearer vision, because not clouded by the smoke from munitions factories, have fully felt and fully appreciated.

What the Republican candidate for president says about it the Democrats know to be true:

"Our opponents promised to reduce the cost of living. This they have failed to do, but did reduce the opportunities of making a living. Let us not forget the conditions that existed in this country under the new tariff prior to the war. Production had decreased; business was languishing; new enterprises were not undertaken; instead of expansion there was curtailment and our streets were filled with the unemployed."

The suspension of these conditions is not nation-wide, only sectional, and depends upon the duration of the war. Those who think otherwise are, indeed, living in a fool's paradise—Portland (Ore.) Telegram.

LIVE STOCK HUSBANDRY

THE FLOCK IN SUMMER.

Plentiful Supply of Fresh Water and Ample Shade Required by Sheep.

After shearing when pasture is abundant a very common practice is to turn the sheep out and let them shift for themselves, writes A. M. Patterson in the Farm and Fireside. Where feed and water are plentiful the sheep will generally take care of his own wants, but a little attention on the part of the shepherd will add greatly to the comfort of the animal, and the profits from the flock will be materially increased. Where the pasture is large it should be divided in order that the sheep will have a change in pasture and at the same time get a maximum amount of feed from the land. When sheep graze on large areas they will graze the grasses they like best and leave the unpalatable kinds, which are wasted.

The Cotswold sheep is a long wooled breed, and it is the oldest sheep of which there is any satisfactory record. It is one of the largest sheep and is very hardy. The rams have great prepotency and produce fine lambs when crossed on the Down breeds. The sheep shown is a Cotswold.

The ewes which are very poor in condition should be separated from the rest of the flock and given a little more feed and attention in order that their condition may be brought up to the average of the flock.

The sowing of rape in the feed lots provides an excellent place to graze the thin ewes, and by utilising the feed lots in this manner the farm flock can be pastured from land which lies idle during the summer.

Lots of fresh water and shade are essential to the flock. Where natural shade cannot be obtained a few old poles and boards put together will protect the animals from the hot sun.

Care should be used when changing from one kind of pasture to another, especially if the new pasture is more succulent than the old, as the change may cause the animals to bloat and result in a few deaths.

The health of the sheep should be guarded in summer as well as other seasons. Avoid cold, damp weather after shearing. Sheep should not be exposed to cold, driving rains after the wool has been removed, as this is liable to result in pneumonia and cause a loss to the flock.

Sheep should be dipped when the weather has become warm, or directly after shearing. Dipping kills the external parasites, puts the skin in healthy condition and helps make a luxuriant growth of wool.

HOGS ON BLUE GRASS.

Swine Need More Grain Than When Pastured on Alfalfa or Rape.

Blue grass has long been profitably used by the Missouri farmer for feeding cattle. It has not been generally recognized that it may also be utilized for pork production, writes a Missouri correspondent of the Orange Judd Farmer. At the Missouri station the average amount of pork produced from an acre of blue grass amounted to $26 when the live weight value of hogs was calculated at 8 cents per pound.

In securing these returns from blue grass pasture it is necessary to recognise two qualities which clearly distinguish blue grass from alfalfa, clover and rape pasture. In the first place a much larger amount of grain must be fed to hogs on grass than to hogs on rape, clover or alfalfa. Another difference lies in the fact that during the middle of the summer from about July 15 to Aug. 30 blue grass is of little or no value for hog pasture. During this time clover, alfalfa or rape pasture should be provided.

The grain fed to hogs on blue grass pasture should be well balanced, a grain mixture of six parts of corn and one of linseed meal, or ten parts of corn and one part of tankage. A good rule to follow in determining the amount of grain is to feed just as much grain as will cause the animal to gain an average of three-fourths of a pound a day per 100 pounds live weight.

Grains For Hogs on Pasture.

Mature, dry brood sows are sometimes maintained in apparently satisfactory condition on good pasture alone. Young, growing pigs, on the other hand, running on forage crops without grain scarcely maintain their weight. There is no time that grain can be so profitably fed to a hog as when he is young and running on pasture. Under such conditions it is possible to secure fifteen pounds of gain for each bushel of grain fed. During the spring and summer and early fall months from one-half to three-fourths of a full feed of grain will be sufficient for hogs running on pasture. More forage will be eaten by the pigs than if a full ration of grain is fed.—United States Department of Agriculture.

NOT NECESSARY TO LABEL PURE VINEGAR.

Local grocers and others dealing in pure cider or apple vinegar are no longer required by the State Agricultural law to brand the container with a label or other device testifying as to the contents. All other kinds of vinegar, however, must be labeled to show the kind and the substance from which it was made.

The elimination of the label provision was made an amendment to the bill that passed at the last session of the legislature.

As the agricultural law with respect to placing labels on articles of food for human consumption is intended to acquaint purchasers with a knowledge of the contents of the container if they are not pure goods, it was deemed that the labeling of pure vinegar was not necessary and so the amendment was enacted.

AT THE QUIRK TODAY.

Some Social Shams Slammed in Stirring Screen Scenes.

Society comes in for its share of "muck raking" in the William Fox photodrama, "Hypocrisy," starring Virginia Pearson, that noted stage-screen Southern beauty. Her part is that of a young society woman, through whose fondness for gambling falls into the pitfalls of so-called high society.

She has two lovers, parts taken by Alfred Swenson and John Webb Dillon, one of whom she marries, only to continue to receive attentions from the other. The rejected lover naturally develops into a villain, and the society woman's love of bridge lets her fall into his hands through a gambling debt.

But she is saved in good time by her husband and the realization in her own conscience of the shams, bluffs and hypocrisies of society. The picture play has its many situations, only found in Fox films, and altogether is a drama of sound moral and artistic merit.

BETTER SERVICE AT LOWER COST

Important Constructive Work Done by the State Insurance Department.

PAYROLL CUT OVER $40,000

By the Elimination of Unnecessary Positions — Standard of Efficiency Raised Under the Present State Administration.

Albany.—The record of the state insurance department under the present state administration commends itself to every citizen who is interested in honest, economical government.

Beginning with the remedial legislation of 1906, which followed as the natural sequence of the legislative investigation made by the Armstrong committee in 1905, Hon. Charles E. Hughes acting as counsel to the committee, the functions and activities of the state insurance department have been so increased and revolutionized as to have created an entirely new era of insurance supervision.

The prestige resulting from this investigation and from the remedial laws, particularly those affecting life insurance; the greater publicity given to the affairs of the corporations under its supervision, together with its rapid growth, have all aided in lifting the New York state insurance department into a prominent position as the supervising insurance department of the country, giving it an international reputation. Able men administer its affairs.

The marvelous growth of the companies under its supervision, especially those organized under the laws of this state, has been unprecedented.

The functions of the department with all of the regulatory supervision required by the laws of 1906 have necessitated a thorough organization, with trained and efficient employees. Such an organization should be protected and safeguarded, but at the same time all unnecessary places eliminated and all posible economies effected.

Increased Efficiency — Reduced Expenses.

With the beginning of Governor Whitman's administration on Jan. 1, 1915, he gave careful consideration to the affairs of the department, his object being not to reduce efficiency, but rather to build it up, at the same time making proper savings if same could be made. The result speaks for itself. ON JAN. 1, 1915, WHEN GOVERNOR WHITMAN TOOK OFFICE, THE NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES IN THE DEPARTMENT WAS 184, WITH AN ANNUAL PAYROLL OF $373.176.72. BY PROPER RETRENCHMENTS, ABOLISHMENT OF UNNECESSARY PLACES, THE NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES IN THE DEPARTMENT ON JULY 1, 1916, WAS REDUCED TO 159—A REDUCTION OF TWENTY-FIVE PLACES, AND THIS WITHOUT ANY IMPAIRMENT OF SERVICE. THE ANNUAL PAYROLL AT THIS TIME IS $332,402.04, MAKING AN ANNUAL SAVING TO THE STATE OF $40.774.68. In the first year of Superintendent Phillips' administration there was a saving in the expenses incident of the appraisal of real estate and mortgage holdings of insurance companies and traveling expenses of department examiners of nearly 38 per cent as compared with the previous year. An additional saving of 25 per cent has been made in the rental for the New York branch offices of the department.

The department's efficiency has not been impaired to the slightest degree. In fact, it is recognized in the insurance world that the prestige of the department is at as high a point as it has ever reached.

While the department was not organized as a revenue earner, it has been a revenue creator. For years it has been self supporting, its receipts exceeding its expenditures. The present superintendent on July 1, 1916, began the second year of his term of office. The department receipts for his first year—July 1, 1915, to June 30, 1916—were $1,132,664.57. The receipts for the corresponding previous twelve months, namely, from July 1, 1914, to June 30, 1915, were $925,897.37, thus showing an increase in the corresponding period of $206,767.26. THIS WAS ACCOMPLISHED WITH THE REDUCED FORCE AND MARKED SAVING IN PAYROLL.

Important Constructive Legislation.

An instance of constructive legislation for the improvement of insurance conditions and in the public interest is the amendment of last year authorizing direct settlements between employers and their injured employees under the workmen's compensation law. With this change in the law, it is no longer necessary for compensation to the injured workman to be postponed until an official investigation of his injury can be had. At the same time the state is relieved of the expense of maintaining a costly organization for the purpose of making the necessary claim payments.

Another step in advance is the legislation of 1916 enacted for the purpose of rendering the state fund self sustaining. This contemplates that the income of the state fund will be such that no resort need ever be made to the treasury of the state for its support.

This year two new laws have been placed upon the statute books of the state permitting the organization of automobile insurance companies on the mutual plan to insure against the risk of fire and casualty. These measures urged by a large number of the citizens of this state, were approved by the governor, accompanied by a message wherein he stated that in his opinion the interests of the insuring public were thereby fully safeguarded.

Scientific Rates For Workmen's Compensation.

The administration, through the insurance department, is now engaged in an effort to promote scientific rates for workmen's compensation insurance and thereby to reduce the burden of this compulsory form of insurance to the lowest point consistent with absolute security. In life insurance likewise the department is co-operating with the companies in an effort to determine more accurately the necessary cost through an investigation of mortality experience which, it is believed, will result in a widespread and material reduction in rates of premium charged for life insurance.

In the field of public liability insurance, likewise, the administration has begun the collection of statistics which will develop the causes of loss responsible for the present high rates of premium. The data now being accumulated by the insurance department is such that it is believed the corrections which will follow therefrom will be for the betterment of this field of business.

Such progressive activities as these are in addition to the ordinary routine of state supervision and have been undertaken with the main thought in mind of reducing the burden of insurance cost to the public. It is therefore worthy of comment, particularly in view of the great increase in revenue derived from insurance premium taxes —a true index of the growth of department business—that the department has been able nevertheless to carry out a program of economy.

Another wise measure which has been enacted in the public interest is the law providing for a greater factor of financial safety to the life insurance policy holders of the state and nation. The panic of 1907 and the present European war have indicated how narrow a margin was afforded by the former statutory limitation upon the surplus of life insurance companies. To relieve this condition the governor this year approved an amendment suggested by the superintendent of insurance.

STANDS FOR PROTECTION.

This is a great business country, and the business enterprises of the country demand building up on the part of the government. I am glad to stand as the spokesman of a party which recognizes protection to American industry as an appropriate line of production.

I do not believe that this nation can afford to rest its assurances of prosperity upon the continuance of the European war. It must be able to stand without the aid of European war under policies that serve in peace. I stand pre-eminently for a business-like administration. That is not a council of perfection. That is not an unattainable ideal. It is an ideal which has been too little thought of in this country. —Charles E. Hughes.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

A very great majority of the third party which rolled up such a remarkable vote for Roosevelt in 1912—probably nine-tenths of them or more—are now in the Republican ranks. Mr. Hughes is nearer their ideal of a president than Mr. Wilson. The traditional policies of the Republican party meet their approbation, and they feel that the country would be safer with a Republican congress.—Rochester Post-Express.

Rich as this country is, it is too poor to fatten politicians on "pork" indefinitely. Mr. Hughes doesn't play politics with the public's money. He never paid political debts by appointing inefficient politicians to offices of trust. His record stands in striking contrast to that of Democracy's.—New York Tribune.

The most telling point which Mr. Hughes makes against the Wilson administration is its breaking down of the civil service reform, which had been steadily progressing, and throwing open the public service to the spoils system. This has been not only party treachery to the cause of promoting efficiency in the public service, but it has been personal, for Mr. Wilson, previous to his election, had been a strong advocate of civil service reform. It shows his weakness in bowing to the demands of the spoilsmen of his party.—Watertown Times.

CONSIDER HONEST BUSINESS.

We must save this country every day. It won't be saved by letting it drift. It won't be saved by taking everything for granted. Its industries won't be conserved by indulging in good wishes around the club table. We have got to take account of the lessons learned on the other side and apply them. We have got to consider honest business with the success and pride that it deserves, and we have got to fearlessly condemn abuses.—Charles E. Hughes.

THE STOCKMAN.

Keep salt, sulphur and charcoal in a box under cover in the hog pasture.

The mule is an important factor in our national economy. He is a humble servitor that is not to be despised.

If the pasture is good the ewes will need very little grain.

It is claimed that hog diseases are for the most part preventable by the simple expedient of cleanliness.

It is better for the young colt to be where he can see things going on around him.

Is is well to have two sheep pastures adjoining each other, if you have to put up a fence.

IMPURE WATER CAUSE OF SICKNESS IN HOGS

When I first began the raising of swine, before I learned how to care for them, I had several cases of cholera and consequently lost almost my entire herd, writes R. B. Rushing in the Farm and Fireside. It was very discouraging to a young breeder. Then I studied how to prevent sickness in my herd.

Nature has provided an abundance of foods of different kinds which will, when properly combined, form a most healthful ration. Nature also provides an abundance of sunshine to destroy most all germs if properly exposed. From my years of experience I would say that if food, water, sunshine and exercise are strictly attended to there is little danger of sickness. Of course this will not absolutely prevent any of the different forms of sickness. All animal life is subject to sickness, but with the proper care it can be reduced to the minimum.

The feeding of swine is a great question and can be mastered only by experience. Hogs to be healthy must have a variety of food grains, roots and forage. The condition of the hogs should cover the kind and quantity.

The Chester White breed of hogs came originally from England and were improved in this country, mainly in Chester county, Pa. It is claimed for the Chester White that it is a very prolific breed and will fatten at any age. No breed has shown a better record for the dressed carcass test. The sow shown is a prize Chester White.

Different conditions would suggest different methods, and therefore it is not safe to lay down any iron bound rules.

The question of water is also a very great one and one that, from my observation, is often slighted. Some seem to think that any kind of a hole will do for hogs, and consequently they are left to drink from the hole that they wallow in. This, I think, is one of the main causes of sickness in hogs. The water becomes stagnant and foul and is full of disease germs, and the hog taking this foul water into the stomach is bound sooner or later to become diseased.

Other very important considerations are sunshine and exercise, and without both of these I have never been able to have success. I have too often seen hogs cramped into a little, dark, filthy pen for fattening.

I have found it most profitable to give my hogs range at all times, whether feeding to fatten or not.

If It Is Lot.

LITTLE JOHNNY SMILES

Why is little Johnny pleased?

Because he doesn't have to fill the coal-hod any more.

Is that all?

No. He doesn't have to fill the wood-box any more either, nor empty the ashes. You see, Johnny's mother has bought a New Perfection Oil Cook Stove. Instead of coal or wood, she burns Socony Kerosene Oil, and it costs her only six cents a day to cook for a family of six.

How nice for Johnny!

Look for the long blue chimney burner—that's what makes the New Perfection efficient and trouble-proof. The 1916 models have the new patented reversible glass reservoir and many other improvements. Sold in 1, 2, 3 and 4-burner sizes (by hardware, furniture and general stores) everywhere.

PATRIOTISM.

Never let patriotism die. There is no greater sign of a general decay of virtue in a nation than a want of zeal in its inhabitants for the good of their country.—Addison.

When a Swan Is a Cygnet.

"It amuses me to hear people speaking of the young swans at the Avondale zoo as 'swanettes,'" said Miss Lucy Williams. "The diminutive for swan is cygnet, just as a young goose is called a gosling. You might as well speak of a gosling as a ganderette or a goosette as to call a cygnet a 'swanette.'"—Birmingham News.

GIFT OF THE GAB.

Why Stephenson Thought There Was No Power to Equal It.

When George Stephenson, the perfector of the locomotive, was visiting the seat of Sir Robert Peel at Drayton on one occasion, says the writer of "Famous British Engineers," there happened to be present Dr. Buckland, the scientist, and Sir William Follett, the famous advocate.

Stephenson discussed with Dr. Buckland one of his favorite theories as to the formation of coal and, though undoubtedly in the right, was ultimately vanquished by the arguments and oratory of the doctor, who was a better master of tongue fence than himself. Next morning while pondering over his defeat in the solitude of the garden he was accosted by Sir William Follett and confided to that gentleman the story of his failure.

Sir William, acquainted with the details of the matter in dispute, agreed to take up the case and soon afterward attacked Dr. Buckland on the subject. A long discussion ensued, in which the man of law completely silenced the man of science, who was at last compelled to own himself vanquished. Sir Robert Peel, highly amused at this example of "tit for tat," then turned to the inventor and inquired, with a laugh:

"And what do you say on this matter, Mr. Stephenson?"

"Why," he replied, "I will only say this—that of all the powers above and under the earth there seems to me no power equal to the gift of the gab."

Physical Education of Scholars Not Necessarily Military Training

By JAMES E. WEST, Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America

IF those who are leaders in physical education would come forward with a definite program of instruction which would greatly improve the physical condition of the product of our public schools and colleges I feel confident that the most radical advocates of technical military training would be satisfied with it as a preliminary program and would be content to have their strictly military program commence at a more mature age and at the point where the physical training left off.

It is because so little has been done that those who are concerned about our country's lack of preparedness are advocating THE INTRODUCTION OF WHAT IS UNFAIRLY CALLED "MILITARY TRAINING" IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

As a matter of fact, in the program of many of our most progressive schools, as well as in the program of the Boy Scouts of America, a great deal of what is practically understood as military training is given very effectively. Indeed, I am told by many of our people who have been to Plattsburg that a great proportion of the program of the Plattsburg and other strictly military training camps is included in the program of the Boy Scouts of America.

BECAUSE THIS IS SO IT DOES NOT MAKE THE TRAINING GIVEN IN OUR PROGRESSIVE SCHOOLS AND BY THE BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA MILITARY TRAINING.

Junior Model In Cloth And Silk

A modish little dress for girls and juniors. It is fashioned of broadcloth and plaid taffeta, trimmed with buttons of either material.

Combinations of materials are featured in smart frocks for girls from school age to debutantage. This model is carried out in plaid taffeta and broadcloth. Although it makes an exceedingly pretty effect the dress is not expensive, because so little material is required for its development. The frock is made with a sleeveless underbody which may have either a high or V-shaped neck. The skirt is a one-piece model, side-plaited and attached to the underbody. It closes to the left of the center-front under the plaid. The blouse has an open front showing the front of the underbody faced to form a vest effect, and is trimmed with buttons made of either the cloth or silk.

Medium size requires 2 yards 36-inch material for the blouse, 1⅓ yards 44-inch material for the skirt, with 1⅓ yard 27-inch lining for the underbody.

The purpose of the cutting guide is to show how the pattern should be placed on the material to avoid mistakes and if this is followed religiously the maximum of effect will be achieved with a minimum of trouble. The fabric is laid in open width on the sewing table to cut the skirt piecing and the facing can be cut from the same piece of goods.

Now, fold the material from which the skirt proper is to be cut and along the lengthwise fold place the skirt, with the collar section to the right. The waist may now be taken up. Fold the material and place the back along the lengthwise fold, with the pocket above it, the straight line resting on the selvage of the goods. The front and sleeve are laid on a lengthwise thread, the belt along the selvage and the collar along the lengthwise fold.

There are only two sections to the underbody, the front and back, the former being laid on a lengthwise thread and the latter on a lengthwise fold.

A pretty addition to the dress would be collar and cuffs of daintily embroidered linen.

A Run on Raspberries.

RASPBERRY BAVARIAN CREAM.—Put a quarter of a package of gelatin into half a cupful of raspberry juice and let it lie until it has softened. Then dissolve and add the juice of half a lemon, half a cupful of granulated sugar and a cupful of raspberry juice. Put this mixture in a bowl and put the bowl in ice water. While in this condition stir until they begin to set, then fold in a cupful and a half of rich cream that has been beaten until very stiff. Place in a mold and chill. Serve with whipped cream.

Raspberry Blanc Mange.—Soak one-half a box of gelatin in one quart of milk for an hour. Place it on the fire and stir often. Beat the yolk of an egg light with a cupful of sugar, stir into the scalding milk and heat until it begins to thicken, but do not allow it to boil, for this will make it curdle. Remove it from the fire, and when it is nearly cold stir in some stewed red raspberries without the juice; then pour into molds wet in cold water and set away to cool. Serve with cream and sugar and lady fingers.

Raspberry Mousse.—Add one-half cupful of powdered sugar and one and one-half cupful of crushed raspberries to three cupfuls of cream whipped stiff. Mix carefully and pour into a mold. Cover and bind the seam with a strip of muslin or cheesecloth which has been dipped into melted fat or paraffin. Pack in a tub of crushed ice and salt, allowing about a cupful of salt to every three cupfuls of ice and let stand for about three hours. When properly frozen this should be solid on the outside, but creamy in the center.

Raspberry Jelly.—Press a banana through a sieve, add the juice of a lemon, one-half cupful of sugar and the white of one egg well beaten. Mix all together until very light and set in a cool place. Dissolve one package of raspberry gelatin in boiling water and mold in a flat pan. Cut into cubes and serve in individual glasses with the banana mixture as a substitute for whipped cream. This will serve six persons.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

Nest of the Marsh Wren.

When the marsh wren builds his nest he selects a spot near the water's edge or in a swamp filled with reeds and grasses, and he employs the art of a bridge builder with the daring of a steeplejack. The nest is shaped like a globe, with small openings in the sides. The bird hangs it among the reeds high enough so the spring from it cannot disturb it.

He lines it with feathers, providing a soft cradle for him to rock with the summer breezes. Often a colony of marsh wrens will build their nests in the same swamp, and they keep up a scolding chattering accompaniment to the croak of the frogs.

HIGH COST OF LIVING.

$110 A MONTH FOR A FOUR ROOM FLAT IN BUENOS AIRES—OTHER PRICES HIGH ALSO.

By Charles P. Stewart
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Buenos Aires, Argentina, August 1 (By mail)—A cake of toilet soap retailing at 25 cents in the United States costs $1.71 here. This is typical of Argentine prices generally. They are perfectly terrific, stupefying, incredible.

Drugs cost three to four times what they cost in North America, ordinary tooth brushes eighty cents each, everyday gloves $7 a pair.

A four room, steam heated flat in a good, but not aristocratic part of this city, cannot be had for less than $110 a month. A similar flat, minus the heat, may be had at $52.80. There are four or five months here during which heat must be had; and Cardiff coal, practically the only kind on the market, costs from $28.16 to $32.80; sometimes a bit more.

In the remote suburbs tiny little boxes of houses may be rented for $32.50 a month, sans heat, sans light, sans everything else except four walls. These quarters are too far away from the business center to be considered by a man whose business hours are at all exacting. Expensive heating and lighting must also be considered. Transportation is cheap. If he can spare the time, he can travel twice daily for $4.40 a month.

Meat is not high, as Argentina is a meat country. The very fanciest cuts of beefsteak may be had at 25 cents a pound. Ribs and rump steaks cost 17 1-2 cents a pound, mutton 13, veal 30 1-2 cents and pork 22 cents.

Other items of household expense will be about like this: Butter 44, bread 5 1-2, coffee 44, tea 39 1-2, granulated sugar 11 cents, chickens 35 cents a pound.

Milk costs 8 cents a quart.

Eggs are 48 cents a dozen. Potatoes cost 35 cents for 22 pounds. Oranges are 66 cents a dozen, bananas 22 cents a dozen and apples 6 cents each.

A suit which would cost $25 in New York or Chicago or San Francisco, costs $45 in Buenos Aires. A pair of $5 or $6 American shoes costs $15. A $3 American hat costs between $6 and $7. An ordinary suit of winter underclothing costs $10, United States money.

The man who buys his wife a not over-fashionable walking suit must pay $50 for it. If she is not too particular, he can get her a bonnet for $20.

If he wants to keep up with the news, each paper costs him four cents. The price of a 15 cent American magazine is 26 cents.

The beer is good but it costs 13 cents per glass. A waiter must bring each glass to a small table and every time he expects a tip of 4 cents. Whiskey, including the tip, is 22 cents a glass.

There is practically no such thing as a cigar for less than 8 cents and these are practically unsmokeable. Havana cigars cost from 44 cents up.

The man who falls ill will have to pay an ordinary family doctor $5 a visit. If his teeth hurt him, it will cost him $5 an hour to have repairs made, unless he goes to an expensive dentist, in which case there is practically no maximum limit.

People who like to keep clean must pay to their washerwoman approximately the same prices as are charged by the highest-priced New York laundries.

Roughly speaking, it costs about twice as much to live in Buenos Aires as it costs to live, not perhaps in New York but in Chicago.

A citizen of the United States who goes to the Argentine metropils to live on the same salary he received at home, may consider that his income has been cut in two, and will be financially wise if he readjusts his expenditures accordingly.

Living expenses are higher in Argentina than in any other country in South America.

In Brazil the average is only a little higher than in the United States. Chile and the countries in the South American north are rather cheap. This does not refer to all commodities. Some articles are very expensive. It applies, however, to the average cost of living.

As an offset against their lower prices, incomes are generally lower in the countries where living is cheap.

Why prices are so high in Argentina is not entirely clear. For one thing the country's population is small and it has plenty of money, so that, if the cash were evenly distributed, the per capita wealth would be high. Furthermore, it is not a manufacturing country. It lacks workingmen in sufficient numbers, it has little water power and it has almost no fuel. There is considerable prospecting for oil. If it should be found in adequate quantities, it will be a Godsend and ought to make billionaires of the discoverers. In the meantime, manufactured articles have to be brought from a long way off, which costs money.

Finally, internal transportation facilities are primitive and shipping, plying to foreign ports, is in a few hands.

To a considerable extent, however, it looks as if it is expensive to live in Argentine simply because the people who furnish the necessaries of life are able to extort the money.

The average Argentine is not paid for his work in proportion to what he has to pay for his living.

A comparatively small number of men, mostly cattle and wheat kings, make huge sums. There is a fair proportion of rich middlemen. A great deal of the big money the country produces belongs to foreign investors and goes abroad.

A salaried man is considered in possession of a good, round income if he receives $150 to $200 monthly. Of course this does not go nearly so far as it would in the United States.

A first class printer or locomotive engineer may make as high as $175 monthly.

Bricklayers are paid from $2.50 to $3.50 daily, but do not have work all the time. A carpenter, who also has periods of unemployment, earns from $1.50 to $2.50 daily.

There is a wide variation, according to season, in what an unskilled laborer receives. At times he gets as low as 30 pesos and others as high as 80 pesos monthly, or, in United States money, from $13.20 to $35.20.

On a farm, it is possible to imagine how a man might live on the latter of these two sums, even in Argentina. How he succeeds in doing it in Buenos Aires, and how, in particular, he succeeds in doing it part of the time on $13.20 per month is a puzzle.

It seems to be the consensus of opinion that he can get enough of a poor quality of food, but that his shelter is such as would revolt a self-respecting hog in the United States. He wears whatever clothes he can pick up.

BILLY SUNDAY WAS IN SYRACUSE YESTERDAY

Syracuse, N. Y., August 22—Billy Sunday came back to Syracuse for a brief spell yesterday, was honor guest at a luncheon at the Onondaga, received an invitation to condust a second campaign in this city and then was whisked away to the Adirondack camp of C. M. Edwards where he will spend several days before going to Ocean Grove, N. J., for a brief campaign. After that he goes to Detroit.

Billy came for a rest and refused to talk shop in any way shape or manner. At the luncheon he merely spoke a few words to the effect that he was glad to get back here, but refused to say positively that he would conduct a second campaign in this city.

He left an hour or so after his arrival.

DID YOU KNOW THAT MARYLAND WAS SETTLED BY A PUGILIST?

Montrose, Colo., August 22—Miss Emma Full, county superintendent of schools, today culled the following from the answers in an examination for teachers here:

A republican form of government is one that is governed by a Republican.

Maryland was settled by a pugilist.

The tendon is what divides the abdomenal and the thoradic cavity.

A dynamo is an animal that carries its young in a pouch.

Mammal is a plant that gets its food from another plant, like moss.

Pleura is the rapping of the lungs.

Rain is evaporated air that rises and then falls.

The True View.

The late James J. Hill was a man of buoyant optimism.

"Failures," he once said in an address to railway men, "are always pessimists. Successes, on the other hand, are optimists. Which is right?"

He paused, then added:

"It's easier to slip down hill than to climb up, but the view, remember, is at the top."

Then He Knew, of Course.

Husband—Does that new novel turn out happily? Wife—It doesn't say. It only says they were married.

GUARDSMEN STAY IS INDEFINITE

GOVERNOR MAY DRAFT MEN FOR NATIONAL GUARD

There is a remote chance that Governor Whitman within the next few weeks may be called upon to exercise his right of draft to secure recruits to enlist the National Guard up to its full war strength. Fifty national guard officers have been sworn into service to conduct a recruiting campaign throughout the state and if this fails it is said that the governor may be called upon to draft the necessary number of men to fill up the ranks. This action would affect all male citizens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, inclusive, who are mentally and physically sound.

For the purpose of conducting the campaign for recruits the state has been subdivided into districts, usually comprising one or more counties, to each of which one or more of the officers mustered into the service will assigned. As a general proposition the officers are of the regiments left at home when Major General O'Ryan went to the Mexican border with a division of infantry comprising three brigades and nine regiments accompanied by the First Cavalry, two regiments of Field Artillery and other units.

There is no immediate prospect for the return home of the National Guardsmen from the border. President Wilson has just called for addition state forces and that was followed by the issuance of orders for the forwarding of overcoats, left behind when the New York division entrained for the border at Camp Whitman. In fact it is stated that the plan and purpose of the general staff of the United States army is to retain the militiamen in service on the border for an indefinite period and mould them into an army so seasoned and hardened that they might reasonably be mistaken for regulars. That is the height of the ambition of the average National Guardsman to be mistaken for a regular.

The plan it is said involves the removal of the general staff from Washington to San Antonio. While at El Paso and elsewhere on the border ostensibly investigating the rumors of disssatisfaction among national guardsmen, Major General Bliss is understood to be making a study of the proposition of veteranizing the guardsmen. The plan being evolved is said to involve the organization of three army corps of state troops corps, numbering between 170,000 and 180,000 men with at least three divisions in each corps, and each division comprising three brigades. This would make each division about 17,000 men strong.

Complete with hospital and ambulance corps, signal service, aeroplanes, engineers, commissary, quartermaster and wagon trains, each division in addition to the three brigades of infantry would have attached a regiment of cavalry, a brigade of artillery, a battallion of engineers and detachments of other branches of service. Eagle Pass has been selected as headquarters for one corps it is understood. El Paso is headquarters for another, and that for the third corps would probably be at Douglas, Ariz. With the organization perfected a military situation would arise that would make possible a war game of somewhat gigantic proportions.

STATEMENT FROM THOS. F. CONWAY

Albany, August 22 (Special)--Nominating petitions favorable to the selection of Hon. Thomas F. Conway, of Clinton County, as the Democratic candidate for United States Senator in the primaries on September 19th were filed here today in the Secretary of State's office. Coincident with the filing of the petitions Mr. Conway, from his home in Plattsburg, issued a statement having to do with his candidacy, in which he was inclined to criticize the methods at the recent Democratic conference at Saratoga in reaching what the public assumed was a party expression regarding the nomination for United States Senator.

In his statement, Mr. Conway makes it clear that he will abide by the result of the primaries, and should his opponent, Mr. McCombs, be successful in it, the latter will have the Clinton County man's loyal support. Mr. Conway says that no Democrat should have any fear of a primary contest; as such contests were anticipated by the party when the direct primary law was enacted by it and he incidentally adds that only by resort to it can the Democrats of the up-state counties have a voice in the affairs of their party, "which has been virtually taken from them by the dominance of New York city and a few allied up-State organizations.

"My candidacy for the nomination for United States Senator at the coming primaries is not the result of personal ambition to fill the office," says Mr. Conway; "neither is it the result of a desire to serve my own or any other financial or selfish interest.

"Prior to and at the Saratoga conference, however, leading Democrats from all sections of the State strongly urged that up-state was entitled to the Senatorship, in view of the selection of the candidate for Governor from New York city. They believed and asserted that the best interests both of the State as a whole, and of the party required this. With equal emphasis they asserted that the selection of the senatorial candidate should be made at the primaries by the enrolled Democratic voters of the entire state, and not at a conference at which such voters were not represented, except by delegates designated by members of the State Committee, more especially when the call for the conference in no way intimated that action would be taken in regard to candidates for the important office of United States Senator.

"The wisdom of their views was well illustrated by what took place at the conference. At its morning session a resolution was adopted which only invited discussion of each delegate's choice, for Governor. When, therefore, at the evening session, that resolution was unexpectedly broadened so as to include a discussion of the senatorship and other state offices, the representatives from most of the counties were taken completely by surprise. The result, as might have been expected, was not common counsel or deliberate discussion of the merits of candidates, but, on the contrary confusion so great that even no tally as to the choice of the different counties was or could be kept."

CHEAP LABOR CAUSES DELAY OF NEWSPAPER DELIVERY

Inefficient handling of newspaper mail which has been prevalent in all the northeastern states has been causing trouble for the northeastern states. It is said, however, that conditions in this vicinity are improving and that affairs have not been as bad here as in other states.

Cheap labor hired by the railroads to handle the mails is blamed for part of the trouble. Until about a year and a half ago the mail was transferred at the stations by the railway mail service. At that time it was decided that the mail would have to be handled by the railroads themselves under the terms of their contracts with the post office department. Instead of engaging men who were of the same calibre as the employes of the government in the railway mail service, the railroads, it is said, picked up the cheapest labor they could find, in many cases, so it is claimed, hiring foreigners.

Frequent complaints have been heard of the non-arrival and delay of New York newspapers, daily and Sunday in reaching this section.

After investigating the complaints the chief mail clerk at Albany made the following report:

"You undoubtedly understand that the railroad company employs the cheapest help the labor market affords to handle mail and it is very difficult to make them understand anything."

PAPER KEEPS HIGH

Local stationery dealers have received circulars in which is replies to questions put to them as to when the present high price of paper will decline. Manufacturers say that there can be no decrease for six months or a year after the European war is over. They also declare that it is altogether possible that the paper mills will never be able to go back to the twelve hour basis for labor. They now require three sets of labor instead of two which has added to the cost of production.

There are several other causes for the high cost of paper. Fifty per cent. of the bleached and unbleached sulphite and ground wood pulp used in the manufacture of paper came from Europe the Central countries and the Russian empire have ceased to furnish this product while the supply from Norway and Sweden has materially decreased. The small amount now coming in is costing its former price owing to the high cost of coal, labor, freight rates and insurance.

Europe has furnished fifty per cent. of our supply of rags while the present quantity received is very small. All articles that go into the manufacture of paper, such as dyes, chemicals, felts, paper machinery, and every other article have increased anywhere from 50 to 500 per cent. as compared to the prices paid a year ago.

Paper also has increased in demand thirty per cent. One half of this increase is actual consumption due to present prosperity while the other half is caused by speculative buying.

Largest Agricultural Warehouse.

New Orleans has the largest agricultural warehouse in the world. It has a capacity of 2,000,000 bales of cotton and is adapted to the storage of all other packed commodities, such as sugar and coffee. It was built at a cost of $3,500,000 by the state of Louisiana and is said to reduce the cost of handling any agricultural commodity 40 per cent. There are twenty-three acres of ground under roof, while the entire plant occupies 150 acres.—National Geographic Magazine.

Strike May Yet Be Declared

(By United Press)

Washington, August 23—The three cornered effort underway here to avert the nation wide railroad strike appeared this afternoon to have run into a jam. Leaders among the railroad presidents could not see how any conclusion could be reached in less than forty-eight hours, at the same time in another part of the city leaders of the railroad Brotherhood representatives were planning ways of holding in check an uprising on the part of the brotherhood representatives. A unanimous strike might come they said.

German Troops Make Attacks in Somme Region

(By United Press)

Paris, August 23—The German troops made powerful attacks last night in the trenches, south of the Somme, south of Estrees, which were captured by the French in Tuesday's fighting, and succeeded in penetrating the French line at several points. It was officially admitted today. The attack was preceded by an intense bombardment that lasted several hours in which the whole French front south of the Somme was under steady fire. North of the Somme the Germans maintained fierce bombardments of the French first line and communicating trenches, both north and south of Mauretas. There were no infantry attacks.

President Wilson Urges Senate to Act

(By United Press)

Washington, August 23—Following a one hour discussion between President Wilson and Chairmen Newlands and Adamson of the Senate and House Interstate Commerce Commission respectively, became known the fact that the President urged immediate action by the Senate on the bill passed by the house providing for an increase in the membership of the interstate commerce commission. It is believed that the President's action is based on the desire to afford the most rapid hearings possible on request for increased rates in case the railroads conceive the present plan for an eight hour day.

CATHOLIC CONVENTION AT NEW YORK TODAY

(By United Press)

New York, August 23—Kansas City was chosen as the convention city for 1917 by the national federation of Catholic Societies this afternoon. Joseph P. Brennan, who made an attack upon Colonel Callihan this morning for patting non-Catholics on the back for tolerance was the only official who failed for re-election. The rest of the board of officers headed by John Whalen, of New York, as president were re-elected. The convention voted to change the name of the organization to "The Catholic Federation of the United States" and to organize under the Boston Plan, with the diocese as the unit of organization rather than the state or county. This plan will first be submitted to the bishops of the United States for approval.

(By United Press)

Washington, August 23—The strike thought broke out again among the railroad brotherhood men here today. His effort, however, was crushed.

This creek forms the dividing line for the City of Fulton and town of Volney.

HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNI FACE DISAPPOINTMENT

Owing to the fact that the festivities were so great in number last evening, the High School Alumni Association were forced to call off their meeting. Very few responded to the urgent call of the officials, who were endeavoring by means of this meeting to complete plans for the outing which will take place, August 29th. Therefor, Isabella Drain and chairman of the ticket selling committee and her forces have decided to make a thorough house to house canvass in an attempt to sell the tickets. The sale of tickets will close, however, tomorrow night and those desiring admission o the affair at the island must have tickets prior to Friday, August 25th.

A banquet will be staged at the island after an afternoon of athletics and acquatic sports. In the evening dancing will be held to the tune of Richardson's orchestra.

The executive committee of the society wish to impress the public with the fact that any one attending Fulton High School at least two years are elegible for membership and the committee are very desirous of having the attendance of every person.

SUPERVISORS TO HAVE OUTING

ANNUAL AFFAIR TO BE HELD AT MEXICO POINT.

Tickets are out for the annual outing and clambake of the Supervisors' Association of Oswego County to be held at Mexico Point (West Side), August 31, 1916, and a cordial welcome is extended to all who wish to be present. Tickets may be purchased of the Supervisors of the different towns and wards or of any member of the General Committee at the usual price $1.75. These outings are growing in popularity and attendance to such an extent each year, that the committee has been unable in the past to make preparations to suitably take care of those attending. To obviate this difficulty the committee is asking that all those intending to attend this year will purchase their tickets before, Saturday, August 26th, in order that the committee may know beforehand for how many to prepare.

Arrangements have been made to take care of a crowd in case of rain, so that no one need hesitate on account of the weather, to buy their tickets in advance.

The various committees are working to make this the best outing ever held. There will be several short interesting speeches and the chairman of the committee on sports promises a first class ball game and plenty of other contests.

Chef Schulz says that no matter how many comes, if he only knows beforehand he will guarantee to fill them to capacity.

Come and enjoy a day's recreation with the Supervisors and their friends at one of nature's beauty spots on Lake Ontario.

The committee in charge is composed of M. J. Terry, Richard Schulz, T. W. Hamer.

SPECIAL SESSION OF PAVING BOARD

A special session of the paving board was called yesterday afternoon to consider the improvement of plans for East First street. Messrs. F. A. Gage, A. L. Bristol, P. J. O'Brien, H. J. Clark and Mayor Victor C. Lewis were present and constituted the committee who made the run to Cortland for the inspection of the streets of that city, that we may benefit from the conditions of the streets there.

All members were present at the meeting and the opinions of Mr. A. L. Bristol and F. A. Gage were asked. Both men were forced to say that the conditions here were no less than terrible in comparison to the streets of Cortland. All men spoke very favorable concerning theimprovements.

The resolution regarding the changing of specifications of the street from brick to concrete was passed. The Trolley Company assumes, however, all responsibility of changes to the contractor. The city and state are released in this way.

Permission was granted the Trolley Company, to lay a crossover at the junction of Broadway and First street, to be used by the suburban car in dodging the interurban car while on the single track.

Michael Sullivan was appointed inspector for the construction of East First street.

G. Clayton Hill, city engineer, was also instructed through the passing of a resolution to make an estimate pertaining to the cost of paving Cayuga street between Fourth and Fifth streets.

$500 was voted for emergencies in the improvements of North Seventh street, from Oneida street to the city line on the Whitaker line.

WOMEN AND GIRLS WANTED FOR GOOD PAYING WORK

A false idea was conveyed in an article that appeared in the Times yesterday in referring to the labor conditions of an eastern firm, who are contemplating locating a shirt factory in Fulton. They have never had any labor trouble in their plant and are coming to Fulton for the purpose of getting more help to whom they will give steady employment at good wages.

AN ADVERTISING CLINCHER

In talking recently with a man who has made a big success as an advertising salesman, the question was asked him, "What has been the most effective argument you have used to induce merchants to advertise?"

"I ask them," the salesman replied, "What proportion of the population in the territory they serve has come into their store within the past three months."

"Very few of them, in reply to this question claim that any large proportion of the population has come into the store. A few may say they have had ten per cent. of the people. Many would admit that not over one per cent. of the people had been in their store during that period. In many cases the proportion would be away below one per cent."

"Then I say, how are all the rest of the people going to have any idea about the merits of the stock you carry? They may go by your place of business twice a day. But they know nothing about what you are doing. You will never get their trade unless you seek after their business and tell them what you have got."

"To do that," the salesman continued, "I tell them there are just three things that can be done. They can send a salesman around from door to door to tell them about the goods. They can distribute handbills or circular letters. Or they can advertise in the newspapers.

Newspaper advertising would not cost a twentieth of the cost of personal solicitation. It is more effective, because it gets attention where a solicitor would be turned away. And a newspaper advertisement is read where a handbill goes to the waste basket. If you don't care to adopt one of these methods, I tell them, the great mass of the people will continue to pass you by without knowing about your goods or ever giving you any business."

YOU CANNOT PURCHASE HAPPINESS

One cannot buy love for paltry gold; neither can happiness be purchased, as if it were a pleasant beverage. You cannot put it on and lay it off, as if it were a garment of brocade, decked with glittering gew gaw and costly jewels. You cannot take it on your plate at the banquet table and eat it, "Happiness does not dwell with me." Neither is it found in excitement, exhilaration and in worldly frivolity. Everything has its price. Wealth comes only by toil, but people are miserably unhappy, because gold dollars will not roll into their coffers without their earning the gold. The vile and unworthy pant for the respect of the virtuous when they do not deserve it. The indolent invalid wants health without strict temperance in all things. What a happy world this might be if every one were willing to pay a quid pro quo—a fair equivalent—for every good thing received. People do have all they pay for. For this reason nothing but bitter complaints and murmerings bubble up from unhappy hearts. People pay the price of unhappiness. And they receive a full equivalent.

Persons Who Lack Power of Strong Emotion Rarely Achieve Success

By Dr. G. STANLEY HALL, President of Clark University

A PERSON who cannot become mad can never accomplish anything worth while in the world. Anger is an aggressive force in human nature. FEAR, ON THE OTHER HAND, IS THE MOTHER OF WISDOM—KNOW NOTHING, FEAR NOTHING.

If we are to conserve sex purity and to protect the next generation the schools should be made more interesting. Generate interest in anything, you have diverted the attention of the child from sex. The sedentary life of the school, dull tasks, uninteresting teaching, impure air and a routine existence all work together to produce the debauchee. Class and personal instruction in sex matters is a dangerous thing. A better way is to keep the child, especially the boy, interested in some activity, either mental or athletic.

The life of the child should be emotional. The best education is the one that evokes humanistic emotions.

THE OLD CULTURAL IDEA THAT A PERSON SHOULD STUDY WHAT IS UINTERESTING TO DEVELOP WILL POWER IS A FALLACY. VERY LITTLE OF THAT IS ALL THAT WILL BE NECESSARY.

CHIEF MEYERS AGAIN AN IDOL

Indian Backstop Stages Big Comeback With Brooklyn Team.

Chief Meyers has come into his own. Discarded by John McGraw as being "through," looked upon by Polo grounds fans as a once great catcher who had slipped back immeasurably, the "chief" has accomplished a wonderful comeback and is an idol in Brooklyn today.

It is an admitted fact that a player, grown stale, will often undergo a startling change in form when he dons the uniform of another team, and this is exactly what has happened in the case of John Tortes Meyers, the college bred aborigine.

The "chief" has had a rather picturesque career. A graduate of Dartmouth, he took a three year postgraduate course in baseball in the minor leagues and came to the Giants from St. Paul in 1908, costing the club $6,000. At Marlin in the spring of 1909 he jumped into the limelight as a long distance hitter and was received by the New York fans with open arms.

It was last year that Meyers gave the first indication that he was slipping, and there were few regrets on the part of the fans when the Indian was sent to Brooklyn and Bill Rariden was signed to take his place. In 110 games last year he hit the ball for an average of exactly .232, and it appeared that he was about ripe for the minors.

Then came the transformation, not only in his batting, but in his catching. Meyers loomed up in great form behind the bat when the Robins opened the present season, and he has maintained a steady pace ever since. The result is that he ranks second only to Uncle Robbie in the affection of the fans in Brooklyn. He looks like a different man today, and his timely hits have broken up more than one game for the league leaders.

GOLF GAME REQUIRES SKILL

This Is Why So Few Muscled Athletes Take to the Pastime.

Why is it that more athletes successful in various other sports do not do well in golf? A head full of brains and courage is fairly handy in all branches of sport. Brawn is generally not to be sneered at. Speed and stamina, not mentioning alertness, are all good assets. But the fellow that has all this stuff perhaps does not make the best golfer, for this gentle game seems to be somewhat different from other outdoor sports. Still, the fall golf tourneys do not suffer a whole lot in the class of entries as a consequence.

A slap in the neck, a jolt in the chin, 200 odd pounds in the ribs and a cleated hoof in the nose—all at the same time—then crawl out of the sod and come back for more. That's football.

A tear filled eye, a hazy ball, a slippery club, a critical gallery, a distant pin, thought of the present, past and future—no chance to get sore or hit anybody, no chance for brute strength or vim—that's all to worry the golfer when he's backed to make a perfect shot. No wonder so few raving, tearing athletes shine at golf. There is no running and yipping. A cool, squinty eye triumphs over the muscled brute every time.

STALLINGS STILL CONFIDENT.

Thinks His Braves Will Win National League Flag.

George T. Stallings was greeted by a friend the other day, with "Hello, George, how have you been all the time?"

"Oh, fighting umpires, mostly."

"An old pastime of yours in the International league, wasn't it?"

"Perhaps. But they can hand it to you harder in the big league. But we have gotten along pretty well—considering."

Stallings was confident that his Braves would win out in the National league. "We are in a comfortable position now," he said, "and we are the best road team in the league. I have got the most wonderful pitching staff that was ever assembled, but the natural hitters on my team are not hitting. They always have and they will again, but just now they are not. When they break loose watch the Braves jump to the front."

Not the Little Things.

"It is the little things in this world that cause us the most trouble."

"Not in my business," replied the shoe clerk. "It's the big things the owners of which want to put into little shoes."—Houston Post.

HOW

To Feed the Family Well and Inexpensively

IN response to several inquiries as to the minimum cost of food for a family we publish herewith a list of articles of food sufficient for a family of five for one week, says a bulletin of the New York city department of health. It may be of interest to our readers to know that this diet supplies about 9,500 calories and 430 grams of protein per day. On the assumption that the family consists of two adults and three children this allowance is ample:

1 lb. butter	$0.4[illegible]
1 bag sugar (3½ pounds)	.2[illegible]
1 lb. rice	.0[illegible]
1 lb. dried peas	.0[illegible]
1 lb. beans	.0[illegible]
1 lb. farina	.0[illegible]
1 lb. oatmeal	.0[illegible]
1 box cocoa (¼ pound)	.1[illegible]
1 lb. prunes	.1[illegible]
1 lb. onions	.0[illegible]
6 lbs. potatoes	.2[illegible]
1 head of cabbage (medium size)	.0[illegible]
1 lb. cheese	.2[illegible]
2 doz. eggs	.6[illegible]
2 lbs. meat daily at 20 cents	2.8[illegible]
3 loaves of bread daily at 5 cents	1.1[illegible]
2 qts. of milk daily at 7 cents	.9[illegible]
Total	$7.2[illegible]

The list of foods here shown has been tested practically for about two years. The nutritional results have been excellent, a fact which indicates better than any theoretical study would do that the diet combines all the food elements needed by the body.

If we could devise a plan for insuring such a diet or its equivalent to all the poor people in this city we would materially reduce our death rate. In many instances of malnutrition encountered at the department's clinics the fault is due to ignorance of what constitutes a proper diet. The department of health has been trying to spread such knowledge for some time. Certainly this list should prove invaluable to the housewife who is trying to provide a wholesome diet at a very limited cost.

TIP FOR MOTORISTS.

How to Remove Greasy Dirt From Your Lily White Hands.

The owner of a car who cares for his vehicle to a large extent generally makes up his mind to having dirty hands when some periodic and greasy job falls due. There is no real need for this, as a little care beforehand will obviate the retention of the greasy dirt afterward. Before starting work on a greasy piece of machinery take cylinder oil and rub it well into the skin. After the work is done do not take the grime off by rubbing the hands on waste or a cloth. Instead put on some more cylinder oil or any light oil liberally, using it as you would soap and water. When the oil has worked under the grease and cut it loose from the skin wipe the hands thoroughly on a piece of waste. When you have wiped off the oil you will find that it has taken the grime with it, leaving the hands ready for a good wash with soap and water. If the motorist will try a tar soap for this final stage he will be surprised at the results obtained. Kerosene, gasoline or washing powders should not be used, as they harden the skin and give it a tendency to crack. When on the road the hands can be made fairly presentable by using the oil wash alone, leaving the soap and water until reaching the destination. This method of keeping the hands in shape is used by many of the mechanics in big repair shops and in motorcar factories. It is a particularly useful tip just at this time, when all the cars in America are being run out of the garages for their season's work, most of them by owners, who have no decided preference for dirty hands.

COOK SPEAKS.

How to Cook Vegetables and Conserve Their Food Value.

It is important that vegetables should be prepared and cooked in such a way as to conserve all the available food material and their mineral salts. The portion of the vegetable next to the skin contains the greater quantity of mineral matter, protein. Carrots and vegetable oysters should be scraped. Other vegetables should be pared as thinly as possible.

When the liquid in which the vegetables are cooked is drained off it carries with it much that is valuable, says Good Health. As far as possible this should be saved and used as the foundation for soups and sauces.

Vegetables should be cooked only until tender. Many vegetables develop a strong and unpleasant flavor and are rendered less easily digested by overcooking. This is especially true of cabbage, cauliflower, etc. When overcooked they also take on a reddish hue.

Strong flavored vegetables, such as onions, cabbage and turnips, should be cooked uncovered.

How to Pull Your Auto Out of a Hole.

If the rear wheels are stuck in the mud dig holes in front of the front wheels for them to fall into to give the initial start, and if the car does not continue then block the rear wheels instantly and repeat the operation. Place brush in front of the rear wheels and turn them as slowly as possible to keep from churning. If one rear wheel is on good road, try putting on the hand brake fairly tightly to destroy the action of the differential, or fasten the mired wheel so that it cannot turn and the other wheel will do the work and slide the mired wheel along the ground.

The instant you realize you are getting stuck in sand or mud stop right there and look over the situation instead of fighting the car and burying it deeper and deeper.

GRAFT IN THE ORIENT.

An Incident That Illustrates the Way of the Far East.

I had had experience with corruptible Turkish officers, and one day when barrack conditions became unendurable I went to the officer commanding our division, an old Arab from Latakieh who had been called from retirement at the time of the mobilization. He lived in a little tent near the mosque, where I found him squatted on the floor nodding drowsily over his comfortable paunch. As he was an officer of the old regime, I entered boldly, squatted beside him and told him my troubles. The answer came with an enormous shrug of the shoulders.

"You are serving the sultan. Hardship should be sweet."

"I should be more fit to serve him if I got more sleep and rest."

He waved a fat hand about the tent.

"Look at me! Here I am, an officer of rank and"—shooting a knowing look at me—"I have not even a nice blanket."

"A crime! A crime!" I interrupted. "To think of it, when I, a humble soldier, have dozens of them at home! I should be honored if you would allow me"— My voice trailed off suggestively.

"How could you get one?" he asked.

"Oh, I have friends here in Saffet, but I must be able to sleep in a nice place."

"Of course. Certainly. What would you suggest?"

"That hotel kept by the Jewish widow might do," I replied.

More amenities were exchanged, the upshot of which was that my four friends and I were given permission to sleep at the inn—a humble place, but infinitely better than the mosque. It was all perfectly simple.—Alexander Aaronsohn in Atlantic Monthly.

MILLION ACRE FARMS.

These Are the Kind, as a General Rule, They Have In Mexico.

In the United States the farmer is a humble person. In Mexico he is a king of millionaires. You look out across a level plain and you see a magnificent house of stone, cement and great timbers, covering sometimes as much as half an acre. Surrounding it are other houses, hundreds of them, but all small, constructed of adobe, brush or even of cane stalks. You are not looking at a town, but at a ranch settlement. In the great house, which costs many times more than all the little houses put together, live the haciendado and his family. In the little houses live the peons.

The typical farm in Mexico is not of 100 acres, but of 1,000,000. In the state of Morelos twenty-eight haciendados own all the agricultural lands; twelve own nine-tenths of them. The territory of Quintana Roo, double the size of Massachusetts, is divided among eight companies. The greater portion of the state of Yucatan is held by thirty men, kings of sisal hemp. A major fraction of the agricultural and grazing lands of Chihuahua is owned by one family. Lower California, equal in size to Alabama, is nearly all held by five great corporations.

The 1,000,000 acre farms lie mostly fallow. Naturally a rich agricultural country, Mexico does not produce enough corn and beans to feed her own peon population. Modern machinery is needed, but modern machinery will never be used extensively so long as the peon is so cheap that primitive methods are cheaper than machine methods.—World Outlook.

Drum Fire and Curtain Fire.

"Drum fire" and "curtain fire" are modern war terms. "Drum fire" is the firing of artillery at stated intervals, the resultant noise being described as like the steady hammering of a great drum. When the desired effect of reducing the point of the attack has been accomplished the guns are elevated to a higher point and are fired continuously, making a "curtain of fire" to prevent re-enforcements reaching the point of attack from the rear and at the same time allowing the infantry to attack under protection of the guns.

Practical Religion.

The story is told of a little housemaid, far over the sea, who, when asked whether she realized that she was in any way different after uniting with the church from what she had been before, thought for an instant and then, smiling brightly, said, "Well, I sweep the corners." She could hardly have given a better demonstration of the reality of her religious life.—Christian Herald.

Not So Far Wrong.

"Have you written all the invitations to my party, mamma?" queried little Eva.

"Yes, dear," answered her mother. "They are all written and mailed."

"And how soon will the acceptions and deceptions begin to come in?"—Chicago News.

Work of a Beacon.

There is a flashing beacon on Richardson rock, a wave swept spot west of the Santa Barbara islands, California, which, without attention, will flash its warnings every three seconds for seven months, or over 6,000,000 flashes, before it requires recharging with gas.—Argonaut.

N. Y. CLERGYMAN SECURES DIVORCE

DIVORCE OF VICAR ACKLEY FROM SOUTHERN BELLE BECOMES EFFECTIVE TODAY.

(By United Press)

New York, August 23—The divorce of the Rev. Charles B. Ackley, vicar of St. Bartholomew's chapel and assistant to the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, rector of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church here, from Henrietta L. Ackley, a belle of Atlanta and Washington when he married her in 1907, became effective in the New York State Supreme court here today.

No one knew there was any trouble between the prominent couple until the case came up and in the interlocutory decree was granted in Supreme court, May 25th.

According to the testimony of witnesses for Dr. Ackley, none of which was contested or even replied to by Mrs. Ackley, she had been guilty of the impropriety of traveling through Italy and other parts of Europe for her health with one "Sam Charles."

Any time after today the Rev. Mr. Ackley may remarry, but his former wife is forbidden to remarry in less than five years.

Nobody seems to know exactly who Sam Charles is.

Mrs. Ackley is a niece of the widow of General John B. Gordon, once United States Senator and Governor of Georgia. She was an intimate friend of Miss Theodora Shonts and her sister, the Duchess de Chaulnes.

DANCE MASTERS' CONVENTION

CHICAGO WILL EAT, DRINK, SLEEP, WORK TO 4-4 AND 6-8 TIME FOR SEVERAL DAYS NOW.

(By United Press)

Chicago, August 23—Life here is just one fox trot after another. It got that way at an early hour and will continue so until September 2. The reason being that 450 members of the American National Association of Masters of Dancing—including Louis Fretlow, 75 years young—are one-stepping around the Blackstone hotel getting ready for their thirty-third annual convention.

Don't forget Fretlow. When it comes to the conception and execution of steps that stagger, he's very heavy in the head and light as a feather in the feet. He has done wonders, they say, taking the heaviness out of aspiring feet and putting it in the very light heads that accompanied them.

The masters used to meet about the time the first robin was poking his nose over the Mason-Dixon line, but their pupils objected; said they must have the very latest steps well in foot before the very earliest weeks of the winter dancing season.

About the only step these 450 debonair gentlemen didn't invent is the lockstep. But nobody cares because that's going out.

Give your horses good care and you will be doubly repaid for the better work they will do. For sores, galls and other external troubles apply Hanford's Balsam. Ranchmen, lumbermen and liverymen recommend it. —Adv.

Southhampton, England, August 23—An officer arriving from the front today related that just before the Big Push began four dogs came out of the German trenches and despite the whistling and shouting of their masters, proceeded across No Man's Land, deserting to the English. The Tomies nailed it as a good omen and charged singing.

ENGLAND BUYS UP ALL THE COTTON

HOW ENGLAND SAVED THE AMERICAN COTTON PLANTER FROM DISASTER.

(By United Press)

London, August 3 (by mail)—That the British government decided not to let American cotton go below 8 1-2 cents a pound to planters; that it prepared to spend 250 million to prevent a possible cotton panic in America and that it sent agents to the United States to buy cotton in unlimited quantities to keep the price normal; and also that these agents are still in the United States, are facts given to the United Press today.

The British government, when it decided in 1915 to make cotton contraband, realized that it might cause a panic in the United States. Felix Rose, who directed the British plan to prevent this, told today how he did it.

"We had to declare cotton contraband," said he, "but we wanted to protect the cotton planters. We knew the speculators would make capital of the order in council and drive cotton prices to ruinous depths.

"So the British government decided to go into the market as a buyer. I looked over the market and decided we should be ready to buy five million bales; and we to have have 250 milion dollars at our disposal constantly.

"We thought the planter should not get less than 8 1-2 cents, so we sent agents to the United States with unlimited authority to buy. That was in July of 1915. We told the American government of our plan. On August 18th the king signed the order in council declaring cotton contraband.

"No panic followed. What we had done was not generally known and the strength of cotton in the open market must have been a mystery to speculators. In the first week cotton went up a cent. Within a month it was up 3 1-2 cents. So the planters received $60,000,000 more for the crop that year than they would have received in normal times."

"Is the British government ready to follow with the same action for the 1916 crop?" was asked.

"It looks as if the 1916 crop would be able to sell itself without British aid," said Rose. Rose, an English subject, has been in the cotton business all his life. He added in conclusion that every bale of cotton that has been seized by the British has been paid for and no shipper has lost money except possibly on cotton for which he would have received an exorbitant profit if he had gotten it to Germany instead of its being seized by the British. Every bale seized, he said, has been sold to spinners in England and not a single bale remains in storage.

POLITICAL DINNER AT ONONDAGA HOTEL THURSDAY NIGHT

Syracuse, N. Y., August 23—In a final effort to win undivided support of Onondaga county and other upstate leaders. William M. Calder, of Brooklyn, has arranged for a "get-together" dinner of Republican leaders in this section for Thursday night at the Onondaga hotel. All the local leaders have received their invitations and will attend.

Congressman Luther W. Mott, of Oswego, is sending out the invitations to the affair. "Several congressmen and up-state leaders" will attend is the way Mr. Mott puts it in the invitation and outside of this it is as formal as an ordinary dinner.

Lieutenant Governor Schoeneck, Willard A. Rill, chairman of the Republican county committee and former Senator Francis Hendricks have been invited. It is doubtful if the latter will attend as he is touring in the Berkshires. However, Mr. Hendricks is supporting Mr. Calder, and if he is in the city there is little doubt but that he would be present.

It is said that the dinner's object is to change the present luke-warm backing of some of the Central New York men for Calder into a hearty indorsement and to put some "pep" into his campaign in this part of the state. Support of Mr. Calder hereabouts has not been at all unanimous as Robert Bacon his opponent has many warm friends here and there has been talk of booming the former ambassador. This faction of the party in this city have been very active of late and it was expected that they would take some definite action within the next few days. An effort to head this off will probably be made at the dinner. Mr. Bacon's chief supporters in Syracuse are among the bankers and wealthy business men.

Worthy of Your Good Opinion.

On most subjects there is a vast difference of opinion, but Chamberlain's Tablets win the good opinion if not the praise of all who use them. Mrs. Oren Coon, of Pulaski, N. Y., writes: "Chamberlain's Tablets are the best medicine I have ever used for biliousness and constipation. For sale by all dealers.

POLITICAL JOTTINGS

At that, however, from beginning to end this has been more of a "you kick me and I'll kiss you" administration.

Vance McCormick says the Progressives are stampeding to Wilson, and it's a ten to one bet he wishes he could believe it.

The Democrats are finding out that pork comes home to root out their standing.

The men and women who prefer a man who does things to a man who writes notes about them will vote for Hughes. Government by correspondence takes too long to get anywhere, but government by deeds is always on the job.

Those who are concerned to know what Mr. Hughes would have done had he been in Mr. Wilson's place may rest assured he would not have done as Mr. Wilson has. And that is answer enough.

Mr. Hughes is not only going direct to the public, but the public is going direct to him. A genuine American fifty-fifty!

President Wilson's alarm clock is ringing at 5 o'clock these mornings. He can reach out of bed and turn it off the morning of March 5.

Postmaster General Burleson is too foxy a politician to adopt for his department the McAdoo rule forbidding Treasury department employes participating in politics. Mr. Burleson realizes that postmasters are entitled to some exercise for the money.

There are no strings or mental reservations to the public pledges of administrative reform given by Charles E. Hughes. His record as governor of New York guarantees the fulfillment of every promise.

Democrats are now convinced that Charles Evans Hughes is a warm proposition.

It is gratifying, indeed, to find that Mr. Wilson still stands on the suffrage question where he stood at the beginning of his administration. He has changed on about everything else.—Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

It strikes one that instead of wildly hustling for the State of Maine, Vance McCormick might do better work by taking his wrecking crew to the West to repair the Democratic bridges that are being dynamited by Justice Hughes.

According to the week's latest work of fiction, the Democratic Campaign Book, the wage-earners of the country received during the Wilson Administration $3,000,000,000 more than they received under Taft. And all it cost them to keep something in the dinner pail was $6,000,000,000 more.

At the annual meeting of postmasters in Washington recently, the first assistant postmaster-general landed the postal savings system. That must have been a bitter pill for Postmaster-General Burleson, who sat on the same platform with his assistant. When the postal savings bill was passed, Mr. Burleson, then a Congressman from Texas, voted against it. Every vote cast against it was cast by a Democrat. Not one Democratic Congressman voted for it. Yet President Wilson says the Republican party has not had a new idea in thirty years. Whose idea was it?

It was the instinct of a lawyer for Hughes to support his damning charges against Wilson, by calling Wilson's own secretary of state as a witness to prove them.

Mr. Hughes says there should be firm dealing in Mexican affairs. May be so; but we have had enough of the firm of Wilson, Carranza & Co.

The impression is growing at the White House that Mr. Hughes is deliberately unfriendly. Look out for notes.

If those Democratic notifiers put off their notifying much longer they may find Mr. Wilson in no mood to accept.

POINTS FROM HUGHES' SPEECHES

Reckless extravagance of the Democrats is an insult to the American people.

Deserving Democrats! Deserving in heaven's name of what?

We have a splendid system of government, on paper, but we want that system vitalized.

The pork barrel bill brings a blush of shame to the cheeks of every American.

I am here because I have a vision of what America needs.

An idle American will [illegible] feel uncomfortable.

America will not hold her [illegible] by high-sounding phrases.

Are we not a nation great enough to have sufficient foresight, to protect our borders in a sensible fashion by means of sensible preparedness?

If we state our rights in a firm and determined manner it should carry conviction. There should be no vacillation in connection with that assertion.

SCOTTISH CHARACTER AND HUMOR

Lecture Delivered by David McClure at the Borrowed Time Club Monday Afternoon

Dr. Samuel Johnson at one time making abusive remarks concerning Scotland, a gentleman in hearing remarked: "Well, God made Scotland," to which the great Englishman replied, "Certainly, my dear Sir, but we must always remember that he made it for Scotchmen."

On the other hand, the gifted plowman bard, Bobbie Burns, once said: "The story of Sir William Wallace, poured a Scottish prejudice into my veins, that will boil along there till the flood gates of life shut in eternal rest."

A race of mortals with the average share of virtues and frailties common to humanity is what is claimed for the Scotch. In short they are much like other people, alternately good and bad, but that they are in the main, a simple hearted and plain people with warm affections and much integrity of character is a truth widely acknowledged.

There intelligence as a people is more than common, and a proof of it is found in their familiarity with their country's history, and their very pronounced views of special doctrines and principles. Another proof is the fact that nearly every Scotchman under the most limited circumstances toward mental culture is acquainted with the men of letters of his country and can generally give an opinion as to their productions. Especially in the poetic lore of his beloved land is the Scotchman versed and today I doubt if a Scotchman can be found who is not familiar with the minstrelsy of Sir Walter Scott and genial Bobbie Burns' characteristic poems.

There is in the Scot a sincerity and integrity of character which marks him distinctly among men. His sense of duty and his personal honor are to him principles by which he has won the respect of all men. He has a conscience, he holds himself responsible to himself and is quick to resent anything that will compromise his integrity. Trust him and you will find that he will hold himself accountable to himself and require of himself a fulfilment of his obligations that will fully prove his faithfulness.

Is he called shrewd and canny? Yes, and justly so and these same characteristics are guards by which his honor and integrity are kept more safe. He makes few rash compacts. He is rarely a dupe or a tool even though he be a simple hearted man. He is not hasty to join hands in unconsidered schemes. "He'll see aboot it.' He'll no exactly say."

Do not think, however, that there is undue uncertainty or lack of positiveness in his character. Quite the reverse. His code of action is so simple and straight forward. He draws the line between right and wrong so distinctly that he is not apt to wander in a doubtful course and when necessary he is quite ready to take a course that is at once, prompt, straightforward and fearless.

The integrity of the Scotch is proverbial, yet there are stories humorously told to show Sandy's shrewdness which would indicate that with all his honesty he is at times capable of some business transactions of rather doubtful fairness.

A good story is told in this connection which may serve as an illustration:

A certain old Scotch saddler doing a prosperous business found in looking over his books that a saddle had gone out of his establishment without being paid for. The matter was serious, the loss considerable. See here John, he said to his clerk. Canna find oot wha got that lost saddle. No, I canna said the clerk.

Weel said the old man, it maim be paid for and this is how it will be done. You'll charge it in the bill o' every customer we hae on the books and in that way we find out who got it.

A week went by and the old man came into his shop and said.

Did you ever hear about that lost saddle?

Aye, said the clerk. I charged it in the bill o' 55 customers and 37 o' them paid for it.

Weel said the old man, its little enough considering the trouble we had in finding oot who got it."

The shrewdness of the Scot is a fact and the term "Canny Scot" has passed into a proverb. Well, if he is shrewd it is the natural and wise result of long and dreary experiences of war and privation. His country is not a remarkably fertile one and he must needs be thrifty and careful. His country has suffered through long years of national adversity, and thrift and care are inherited traits to be proud of.

John Wilkes, whose prejudices were strong against the Scotch, once told a story to his London friends about a pirate sea captain who plundered seven Scotch islands and who after counting his accumulated gains found that he had three shillings and sixpence.

This was a very good story at Scotland's expense, but another might be told in contrast; the story of a devoted people's loyalty to their prince: "Bonny Charlie" who roamed a wanderer and a fugitive throughout his country, living upon the humble hospitalities of his people, among whom, in all their poverty and destitution not one was found so base as to inform of his whereabouts and so gain a reward of twenty thousand pounds.

Wilkes pirate may have found but three and six in silver, but if he had searched he might have found hearts of gold, infinitely more precious than any silver coin.

I do not know of any people more patriotic than the Scotch. Their literature abounds in patriotic thought and expression and the people are all ardent lovers of their country. The poem familiar to you all beginning:

"There is a land of every land the pride Beloved of heaven, o'er all the world beside."

Was written by a Scotchman; James Montgomery, and that other well known passage of patriotism:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who hath not to himself oft said,
This is my own, my native land."

Was written by that very eminent Scotchman Sir Walter Scott.

To every Scotchman the name of Scotland is as music and as the Mohamedan turns to the city of the prophet in love and reverence, so the Scot turns toward his native land and if perchance he sojourns in far countries amid scenes of splendor and under fair skies, yet he fondly yearns for his home and sees in its rugged hills and barren moors, a beauty and a loveliness which no foreign splendors can outshine. Very dear to him is every association that links him to the land of his birth and deep in his heart ever lives the memory of some sweet "Auld Lang Syne."

To paint the every day life and character of the Scotchman—to follow him in all his conditions, to his own fireside—to look into his heart and know more of his purposes, his joys, his griefs—his individuality would indeed be a wide and interesting study. The mention of these can only be suggestive and can but assert the fact of his emphatic humanity.

I can dwell, but for a moment, upon the stability of his character and the warm impulses of his heart, the lasting friendship, the sympathy of his life, the loyalty to principles and though kindly humanity which makes him a desirable companion, a trusty friend and a useful member of any community.

It has been said: An Irishman is never at peace but when he is at war. An Englishman is never happy but when he is miserable and a Scotchman is never at home, but when he is abroad." Well, he is somewhat of a rover and perhaps the paradox is born of the fact that he carries a strong individuality with him wherever he goes and leaves the impress of his character at every place.

Independence of spirit is one of the Scotchman's characteristics and I would like to speak of that as a noble quality in him, but I shall restrict myself to rather an amusing example of it—and in a certain sense characteristic of human nature at large.

Two Highlanders were at sea in a small boat. The night was dark and they had lost their reckoning. In great fear of being lost, one of them suggested that if a prayer were offered, they might safely be delivered of their danger. So kneeling down in the bottom of the boat one of them began a prayer after this fashion: "O Lord I have na troubled you for fifteen years and I no bother you again for another fifteen years if you will only bring the boat safely into the harbor." Just at this moment there was a great sound of the keel of the boat going on the beach and the other sailor bawled out, "I say Donald, Do not pray any more. Do not be beholden to onybody for the boat's ashore already."

A very striking characteristic of the Scotch is bluntness—or plain speaking. I must however let one short story suffice to illustrate it:

A young minister occupying the pulpit of the absent parish minister,

More Men Needed to Fill Up Ranks

There are 347 more men needed to fill up the ranks of the Third New York infantry doing patrol duty on the Mexican border according to a statement furnished recruiting officers by Major Fairchild, of the 22nd Engineers, and who is conducting the statewide campaign to recruit for the National Guard. The number of men required to increase the strength of the several other New York regiments on the border to the required full war strength is as follows:

Second Infantry, 126; Seventh Infantry, 633; Twelfth Infantry, 695; Fourteenth Infantry, 818; Twenty Third Infantry, 806; Sixty Ninth Infantry, 890; Seventy First Infantry, 349; Seventy Fourth Infantry, 667; First Artillery, 90; Second Artillery, 44; Third Artillery, 192; Twenty-Second Engineers, 258; First Cavalry, 132 and the aero squadron, 51.

The apparent shortage of men in the New York division, is 5,740, of which 5,231 are infantrymen, 326 artillerymen, 132 cavalrymen and 51 aeroplanists. With the exception of the Third Artillery, formerly the Sixty-fifth Infantry and which is still at Camp Whitman, the regiments are all in Texas. Recruits secured for this regiment will be sent to Camp Whitman and those enrolled with other regiments will be forwarded to Fort Hamilton. Cavalry recruits and those secured for the First and Second artillery will go to Fort Totten.

Conditions on the Texas border are far better than they were among the American volunteers in 1898 according to Colonel Edgar S. Jennings, of the Third Infantry, a Spanish-American war veteran. Colonel Jenning's command includes Company D of Oswego, Company C of Oswego and other Central New York units.

Colonel Jennings says that the equipment is far better than it was eighteen years ago, that the officers are more efficient and that the food is of a good quality. No food he says, that has been issued to the soldiers has had to be condemned in contrast to conditions in 1898 when this was one of the duties of the army surgeons.

That the boys who marched away in June will come back as men is the opinion of the commander of the Third. He believes the rough work on the border is doing them good.

"I am very proud of the regiment and its record made so far," he writes. "The men are willing, loyal, patient under discomforts of soldier life, are learning to obey orders without questioning them, are finding out that the soldier game is not a kid glove affair and that a soldier cannot be made in a few days."

In regard to sanitary living conditions on the border he has the following to say.

"Our sanitary rules are very strict, but I must confess they are extremely hard to enforce as this regiment is made up of 1,700 men, two thirds of whom are practically recruits, unused to discipline, young men who have always been independent in their actions have no knowledge of military service, or the necessity for each individual to live up to certain sanitary rules.

"The meat is brought here in refrigerator cars and can be issued in any amount that we require within reason. Our surgeons advise, us, however, to restrict the issue of meat as much as possible and this is being done.

"Our water supply comes from the Rio Grande. We boil it and most of the companies with great ingenuity built their own filters and the water as drawn from the water barrels is clear and palatable. It has rather a peculiar taste, however."

The men of the Third Regiment are well fed, Colonel Jennings says. He believes that complaints being made are from those who would find fault anyway. The only fault he can find in the menu which is the same for the officers and men is that it lacks variety, but this hardship he says should be expected by a soldier. "It takes real men to play the game," he says, especially in this God-forsaken country that is called Texas."

K. OF C. RECEPTION LAST NIGHT

About 800 people were entertained at the opening of the Knights of Columbus home. The reception committee consisted of J. W. Branch, J. H. Carroll, D. M. Sullivan, J. J. Jordan, M. M. Conley and Dr. E. J. Donahue. Vistors were escorted throughout the building and on the rear porch Buell's orchestra played.

On the back lawn colored lights were strung and with tables for ice cream serving spread about made a very pretty scene.

The large K. of C. emblem was illuminated and hung from the string of colored incadescents.

Later it is planned to have another opening at which time dancing will be enjoyed.

THE RIGHTS OF AMERICAN CITIZENS DO NOT STOP AT THE COAST LINE.

"When I say that I 'am an American citizen, I ought to say the proudest thing that any man can say in this world. But you can't have that pride if American citizenry is a cheap thing, if it is not worthy of protection this wide world over. There is no man who could successfully present to an American community the platform that an American citizen's rights stop at the coast line and that beyond that American life is to be the prey of any marauder who chooses to take it."—From a speech of Mr. Hughes in the West.

TELL HOW WOMAN VOTERS WILL CONTROL POLICIES

Congressional Union Leaders Explain the Movement in Opposition to President Wilson.

Just how the decision of the woman's party to oppose President Wilson for re-election is expected to change the national political situation was explained in a statement by suffrage leaders at the headquarters of the Congressional Union for Woman's Suffrage at Washington.

It was pointed out that unless he wins the west the defeat of Mr. Wilson "seems inevitable."

Needed to Offset Loss of Ohio.

To counteract the loss of Ohio alone, which, judging from indications at the primaries, will go with its twenty-four electoral votes to the Republican count, the Democrats will have to win in the west, California, with its thirteen electoral votes; Nevada, with three; Colorado, with six, and Arizona, with three, woman's party representatives here asserted.

"In Idaho the Progressive party is dissolved," they continue, "so that the Democrats will have to work hard to get any electoral votes there. Illinois is practically conceded to the Republicans, in the view of woman's party members. three-fourths or more of the Progressives there having returned to the Republican ranks.

Conditions in Other States.

"In Kansas the Progressives and Republicans are practically one again. In Montana there is great dissatisfaction over the proposed Democratic tax on copper. Oregon and Washington are expected to go Republican. These two states were hit hard by the Panama Canal tolls act and the Democratic tariff is seriously felt by the lumber industry there. Utah is considered safe by the Republicans. In Wyoming the Progressives and Republicans have joined hands."

The White Road Home

The white road winds through endless twisted pines,
Low woods that stretch away on either side
Into the shifting sands, and clutch
At rocks with gnarled roots to anchor them.
Deep shade and peace it has, lulled by the low voiced surf
And gentle rustling of the wet sea breeze
That slowly bends the tree tops to and fro
Over my dear road home.

It leads through straggling fields with bowlders strewn
And here and there a little cypress tree,
Past low gray cottages and flowers
Jealously hedged against the wild north winds.
It links a countryside of kindly souls—
Women with steady eyes and work worn hands,
Men with an old time faith that still holds firm—
Where my white road winds home.

* * * * * * *

Long in the stifling room I lay awake,
Racked by the maddening noise above, around.
I rose to watch the night crowd drifting by
Under the flaming sky signs, and I heard
From some roof garden snatches of a song
That winged toward me on the torrid air,
So bitter sweet, through tears I watched the stars
That light my white road home.

REGNAULT'S "SALOME" GIVEN TO NEW YORK ART MUSEUM

George F. Baker Presents Masterpiece That Cost $125,000.

Regnault's famous painting, "Salome," has been presented to the Metropolitan Museum of Art by George F. Baker of New York. Mr. Baker is said to have paid more then $125,000 for the picture.

"Salome" was the sensation of the French salon of 1870. It was bought in Paris in 1912 by Roland Knoedler, the New York art dealer, for $105,000 at the sale of the collection of the Marquise Landolfo-Carcano. There was spirited bidding at the time in which representatives of the museum of the Louvre were in a rivalry with Mr. Knoedler. Mr. Knoedler later offered to sell it to the Louvre for what he paid for it. A public subscription was started in France, but a sufficient amount was not raised, and early in 1913 the painting was brought to America, much to the disgust of French art lovers, who resented what they called the capture by American dollars of another European masterpiece. It was especially loved by the French people because of the history of the artist, who lost his life in the siege of Paris in 1871.

The history of "Salome" has been peculiarly dramatic. The picture was started in 1868, when Alexandre Georges Henri Regnault was at the Villa Medici, in Rome, where he had gone two years before as the winner of the Prix de Rome. It was finished at Rome in 1870, a few months before the artist met death in a skirmish before Buzenval at the siege of Paris, Jan. 17, 1871. He was only twenty-seven years old.

In Regnault's "Correspondence" it is told that the artist's first idea was to make a mere study of the model, to be called the "Study of an African Woman." Then he decided to add accessories and to paint a picture of "The Favorite Slave." Afterward he conceived the idea of "Salome." He wrote of draperies and shawls and the like that he utilized before he achieved his memorable final effect. After its first exhibition Regnault was amused by some of the critics, who credited him with philosophical and profound intentions, and he wrote to a friend:

"I have wished, however, to express certain things, and I am glad you have understood them. Yes, a caressing ferociousness is the foundation of her nature, as she is, as you have perceived, a sort of tame black panther, but always savage and cruel."

The picture shows the dancer at the end of her performance before Herod, seated, holding on her lap the platter to receive the head of John the Baptist, which her mother had told her to ask as the price of her dance. Resting on the platter, her hand playing with the hilt, is a sheathed scimitar. It is said that the artist considered placing on the platter the head of John the Baptist, but he did not, and the picture was sent to the salon of 1870, where its success was instantaneous.

FOOTBALLS WIN A CHARGE.

Surreys Boot Them Along Until They Capture German Post.

Describing some of the many thrilling incidents of the great advance on the Somme, a correspondent refers to the exploits of the east Surreys.

"The captain of one of the companies," he says, "had provided four footballs, one for each platoon, urging them to keep up a dribbling competition all the way over the mile and a quarter of ground they had to traverse. As the company formed on emerging from the trench the platoon commanders kicked off and the match against death commenced.

"The gallant captain himself fell early in the charge, and men began to drop rapidly under the hail of machine gun bullets. But still the footballs were booted onward, with hoarse cries of encouragement or defiance, until they disappeared in the dense smother behind which the Germans were shooting.

"Then when the bombs and bayonets had done their work and the enemy had cleared out the Surrey men looked for their footballs and recovered two of them in the captured traverses. These will be sent to the regimental depot at Kingston as war trophies worth preserving."

A Sleepy Time Story About Two Woods People at a Fair.

JOEY SQUIRREL AND BUNNY.

Many Strange and Amusing Things They Beheld Until Lost In the Crowd. Nuts and Buns A-plenty—A Ride on a Camel—The Brave Boy at the Beach.

Uncle Ben was all ready after supper and said to little Ned and Polly Ann that he would tell them about

BUNNY AT THE FAIR.

"Are you going to the fair?" cried Bunny, scampering up to Joey Squirrel. "We are all off and are going to have such fun."

"Yes, I'm coming. I've never seen a fair before. Will you take me with you?" asked Joey.

"Yes; come along," replied Bunny.

In a few moments Joey joined his friend and the little family of bunnies, and they quickly ran down the woodland path to the field.

You should just have seen the crowd of animals.

There were so many and such stores of nuts and buns that Joey was quite bewildered.

There were some camels there to give the people rides, and Joey liked that much better; he and Bunny went right to the other side of the field on one. There they saw some mice doing tricks and stayed watching them for quite a long time.

"We had better go back now; mother will wonder where we are," said Bunny, but the crowd was so great that they could not find her again.

"What shall we do?" asked poor little Joey, beginning to cry.

"I know—we'll sit under the hedge till the rest have nearly all gone, then we shall see her," answered Bunny bravely.

Suddenly Joey said: "I know—I'll run up this tree, and then I can see all over the fair. Shall I?"

"Yes, do," said Bunny.

He was out of sight in a moment and found he could see all that was going on, and after a few moments he spied Mrs. Bunny on the other side of the field talking to Policeman Hippopotamus.

"I see her!" he cried and, scrambling down, took his little friend's hand and raced off. It was hard work to get through the crowd, but they reached Mrs. Bunny at last, just as she was beginning to cry.

"Oh, how glad I am to see you!" she said, kissing them both. "Where have you been?"

"We were lost, only Bunny said we'd stay under the hedge, so nobody hurt us," explained Joey.

"And Joey climbed a tree and found out where you were," added Bunny. And then his mother kissed them again and took them home.

She gave Joey a lovely supper before he went home, and then he and Bunny said good night to each other and went to bed, quite tired out with such an exciting day.

MR. BACON AND GENERAL PERSHING CONFERRING AT MEXICAN BORDER.

ROBERT BACON IN RACE FOR SENATOR

Former Ambassador and Secretary of State Candidate For Republican Nomination.

Intense interest has been aroused throughout the state by the announcement of the Hon. Robert Bacon that he is a candidate for the nomination in the Republican primaries for United States senator, which will be held Sept. 19. Mr. Bacon was formerly the American ambassador to France and has had a long and varied experience in dealing with the foreign affairs of the United States. In the Roosevelt administration he was assistant secretary of state under Mr. Root and succeeded Mr. Root as secretary of state when Mr. Root resigned from that office.

Few men in public life in this country have had such intimate dealings with Latin American affairs. While he was assistant secretary of state Mr. Bacon made a particular study of the relations of the United States with the countries of South and Central America, and three years ago he made a tour of the principal South and Central American countries in the interests of the American Institute of International Law.

As a result of this journey societies of international law composed of the leading South American publicists were formed in Brazil, the Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Chile, Peru and other countries of Latin America. These societies are now all active members of the American Institute of International Law, which has its headquarters in Washington and of which the Hon. Elihu Root is honorary president and Dr. James Brown Scott president.

Honored In South America.

While he was in South America Mr. Bacon was the recipient of high official honors in all the countries that he visited. He was received by the presidents of the various countries and was made a member of their learned societies. He delivered addresses in Spanish and French setting forth the purposes of the American Institute of International Law and of the Carnegie endowment of international peace, of which he is one of the trustees and under whose auspices he undertook the journey.

Mr. Bacon has long been prominent in the educational affairs of America. He is a graduate of Harvard university and is now one of the seven members of the Board of Fellows of that institution. Since he retired from the banking business in 1901 he has devoted his entire time to study and discussion of public questions and service. He is a member of many patriotic societies and is president of the National Security league, which has a membership of many thousands and which was organized for the purpose of presenting to the public the facts in regard to national preparedness.

The cause of preparedness has occupied much of Mr. Bacon's time since the outbreak of the European war. He has made several public statements in regard to the country's needs in this respect, giving his opinion as to the duty of Americans to be true to American ideals in the conduct of the relations of the United States with the European powers. Mr. Bacon is a firm advocate of the policy of universal military training and service for national preparedness. Upon numerous public occasions he has spoken upon this subject. Mr. Bacon has exemplified his practical interest in the cause of military training by serving as a private at Plattsburg, where he was promoted to be sergeant. He also served at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

Mr. Bacon's announcement that he would be a candidate for the senatorship has brought forth public letters from many men eminent in the country's affairs. Among those who have written calling attention to Mr. Bacon's special qualifications for the senatorship because of his long experience in and deep study of the problems now confronting the country are ex-United States Senator Elihu Root, the Hon. Joseph H. Choate and Dr. David Jayne Hill, formerly president of the University of Rochester.

The accompanying recent letters received by Mr. Bacon should have a bearing on the subject in question.

Former Senator Root wrote the following, in part, to Mr. Choate, who has consented to act as chairman of Mr. Bacon's primary campaign committee:

HON. JOSEPH H. CHOATE, CHAIRMAN, NEW YORK CITY:

Dear Mr. Choate—I think you are rendering still another public service in acting upon Mr. Robert Bacon's committee for his nomination as United States senator in the Republican primaries. Not only is Mr. Bacon a citizen of the highest type—high minded, generous and public spirited—but he has special qualifications. He was long assistant secretary of state, then for a short time secretary of state, then for a number of years ambassador to France. He filled all of those positions with distinction and success. He has both theoretical and practical familiarity with international history, the foreign policies of the United States and the business of diplomacy.

His service in the United States senate would be of immense value to Mr. Hughes in the conduct of the foreign affairs of the United States. Although the senate is the constitutional adviser of the president in regard to foreign affairs, there are comparatively few senators who have really studied the subject or acquired practical familiarity with it.

Increased strength in that direction is much needed. If the people of the state of New York can put into the senate a man of the highest character who understands the business of foreign affairs they will have rendered a very great service to the president who is about to be elected and to the people of the United States.

They can do that by electing Mr. Bacon.

From Professor Hill:

"Would Honor the State."

I have been greatly pleased to learn that you have accepted the invitation of your friends to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States senate in the coming primaries.

Your presence in that body would do honor to the state of New York and be of real service to the American people. Your knowledge of public affairs, acquired in the course of a large experience in responsible office, and especially the results of your intimate acquaintance with foreign relations should be of immense value to the country at a time when our position in the world is as uncertain as it is now and is confronted by so many delicate international problems which the nation will certainly have to solve. Permit me therefore to express to you my great interest in the success of your candidacy.

The active interest of Mr. Bacon in affairs directly relating to public needs is also indicated by the following:

He is a trustee of Hampton institute, of the controlling board of which William H. Taft is president; he is a member of the Civic federation and also a member of the chamber of commerce of the city of New York.

SERENE OLD AGE.

The Flight of Years Didn't Disturb This Ancient One.

During a Saturday stroll in the country a pedestrian came upon an ancient rustic engaged in breaking stones. Drawing him into conversation, the pedestrian eventually asked the old fellow how old he was.

"Oh, I dunno," was the reply, "but I know I be a fearful age."

"But you must have some general idea how old you are?"

"No, I dunno, but I know I be a fearful age," was the only estimate that could be drawn from him.

"All right. We'll try to get at it in another way," said the pedestrian, bringing out his pencil and notebook. "Now, how old were you when you left school?"

"I be nine, sur, when I finished schulin'."

"And what did you do then?"

"Well, I was boy fur Farmer Giles fur fifteen year."

"And after that?"

"After that I worked fur Squire Noakes fur seven and thirty year."

"And what next?"

"Well, I was wagoner fur Chuker, the carrier, fur four and forty year."

And so on, and so forth, until the final fact was elicited that he had been engaged on breaking stones for a quarter of a century. Then the inquirer observed, with withering sarcasm:

"So you do not know how old you are? Well, I'll tell you. You're 378 years old on your own showing!"

"I dessay," murmured the ancient yokel, with undisturbed serenity. "I know I be a fearful age."—London Tit-Bits.

Branded Themselves.

What a jury may do at times is a very uncertain problem. Case and Comment says that in one of our cities a jury recently met to inquire into a case of suicide. After sitting through the evidence the twelve men retired and after deliberating returned with the following verdict:

"The jury are all of one mind—temporarily insane!"

A Tree He Remembered.

"Trees!" scoffed the visitor in the village inn. "Why, you fellows have never seen a really big tree. Now, in the United States we have them of a fair size. Oh, yes! Why, I remember in Colorado they felled one across a ravine over which it would have cost too much to build a bridge. Well, they just hollowed out that tree and had a dandy bridge."

Exclamations of surprise and incredulity from his wide eyed audience.

"Sure, I know it was a fact, because I've often driven across it," he asserted. "And one day I was driving a load of hay over when I met a man coming from the other side also with a load of hay. Neither of us could go back or forward."

"What did you do?" asked a particularly trusting soul.

"Oh, I just backed my wagon in a hollow branch and let him pass."—London Answers.

Hood's Quick Wit.

Nobody has ever beaten Thomas Hood's record for quickness of retort. Hood and other cronies had spent the evening with Campbell, who wrote "Hohenlinden" and "Ye Mariners of England." The laureate of the navy lighted his departing guests on to the landing of his lodgings and stood leaning over the banisters till they should have arrived safely.

Suddenly Hood's foot slipped, and he went to the bottom and landed on the mat.

"Who's that?" cried Campbell, in alarm.

"I, sir, rolling rapidly," was the instant reply, and that remains and is likely to remain a record for quick quotation twisting to meet the occasion.

Knew Boston.

Owing to the war a wealthy Boston man, deprived of his summer trip to Europe last year, went to the Panama-Pacific in its stead. Stopping off at Salt Lake City, he strolled about the city and made the acquaintance of a little Mormon girl.

"I'm from Boston," he said to her. "I suppose you know where Boston is?"

"Oh, yes, I do," answered the little girl eagerly. "Our Sunday school has a missionary there."—Chicago News.

THOSE SKEETS!

Why We Must Take Care of Castoff Tin Cans.

In connection with one health department campaign for the elimination of the mosquito it has been suggested that every housewife should punch a hole in the bottom of a tin can after the contents have been removed and before throwing it into the rubbish heap. The family tack hammer or ice pick may be used satisfactorily to punch the hole. In the opinion of one expert this practice would prevent lots of mosquito breeding which is now going on in empty tin cans, which collect stagnant water.

It is stated on authority that a tin can half filled with stagnant water will easily breed over 200 mosquitoes. Old bottles and broken crockery are also a prolific source of mosquito breeding.

In many towns and cities the small boys have been put at the task of punching holes in all discarded tin cans in back yards and vacant lots and smashing all old bottles and broken crockery found on the rubbish heap.

BRITTLE FINGER NAILS.

How to Care For Your Finger Nails So They Will Not Break Off.

The best remedy for brittle nails is oil, and plenty of it. Soak the finger tips for five or ten minutes every night in warmed sweet almond oil.

When the surface of the nail shows ridges and there is a general appearance of coarseness apply grease about the edges whenever possible. Cleanse the nails with grease instead of using soap or nailbrush. It will produce a satinlike appearance and the tinge of pink that is so desirable.

Many women use cold cream about their nails, but vaseline is better. After soaking the finger tips in the almond oil take an orange stick and fill the cuticle with vaseline. The superfluous grease may be removed with a piece of chamois or absorbent cotton.

Farm Animals' Efficiency Decreased Through Carelessness.

The efficiency of the farm horse is lowered through improper care during the hot weather, according to David Gray, assistant in animal husbandry at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

The average farm horse is overworked, especially during hot weather. A ten hour day will save in the long run. This has been proved at the college. The efficiency of the horse during the hot weather depends on care and attention.

The farmer maintains that he must overwork his horses to save his grain, when as a matter of fact they are worth much more than the grain saved. The greatest loss is due to carelessness. Sore necks and backs develop because of lack of care in fitting the harness and the collar properly.

The hot weather feed of the horse is important. The horse should not be fed much if any corn. Corn has a tendency to heat the animal. Oats with perhaps a little bran makes a much better feed.

Overheating Horses.

Horsemen need to be on their guard against overheating. Most cases of overheating can be prevented by keeping a few simple things in mind. Give at least a pailful of water to each horse about 10 o'clock and again at 3 or 4 o'clock on a hot day.

Look out for a horse that after sweating freely suddenly stops sweating. Put such a horse in the shade as soon as possible and give him a moderate drink.

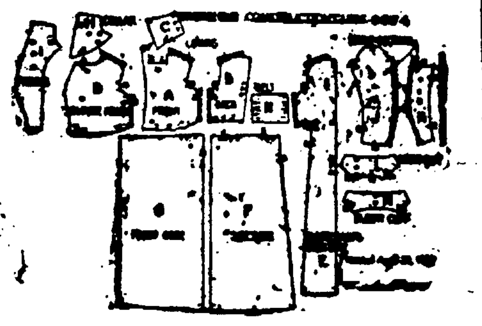
The New All-Over Costume

The new all-over costume which bids fair to be one of the furores of early Autumn. This model is fashioned from brown gabardine.

Here is what promises to be the dominant fashion of Fall—the all-over costume. It is carried out in dark brown gabardine trimmed with moire silk and deep fringe. Embroidered squares done in rope silk ornament the lower edge of the skirt, appearing above the fringe. In medium size the costume requires 4¼ yards 54-inch material, with 1⅛ yard lining 36-inches wide, 1 yard moire silk and 6 yards fringe.

The construction of the frock has been greatly simplified for the home dressmaker, who will find it no trouble to reproduce it if the construction guide and directions are followed carefully. First face the front of the lining, keeping in mind that the large "O" perforations indicate the center front. Then close the seam and sew the convertible collar to the neck.



To make the blouse, side and back gores, first gather the front between double "TT" perforations. Arrange on lining and close under arm seam. Stitch gathers to position, lower edges even. Single large "O" perforation at lower edge of front indicates center-front. Turn hem at front edge of side gore on small "o" perforations; gather between double "TT" perforations. Sew to back as notched; turn under back gore on slot perforations, lap to small "o" perforations in back, and side gore, notches even; stitch above side gore, press plait; close seam. Lap under-arm edge of back to small "o" perforations in front, matching large "O" perforations, stitch leaving seam free about 2½ inches from lower edge to slip belt under. Close shoulder seam as notched.

Next, close the back seams of the deep collar and sew to neck. Adjust facing on collar and under front, edges even; lap right back of collar and facing on left, matching small "o" perforations; fasten with a button and buttonhole.

Now, form plaits in the belt and adjust to position, center-fronts even. The sleeves are made last and the work is begun by closing the seams, easing fullness between notches at the elbow. Close seam of wrist cuff as notched to large "O" perforation and line. Sew to sleeve as notched, small "o" perforation at inside seam of sleeve; bring small "o" perforations near pointed ends together and tack. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam easing any fulness.

Add fringe and embroidery last.

BUTTON VARIATIONS.

Advance Tips About the Kind and Uses of Fall Fasteners.

Buttons are not at all left in the lurch because of the amount of hand work used. In fact, they serve to accentuate the special feature of the waist, coat or suit they adorn. Buttons increase the importance of pockets, belts and capes and give themselves a chance to assume extraordinary shapes and sizes.

Because of the vogue for dark suits with white hat, shoes or gaiters, white ivory buttons are allowed. Sometimes they are ringed with black or a fashionable color, sometimes they have a pearl center, but all of them are light in weight, and this accounts for at least part of their popularity. They are also made on dark taffeta dresses.

Those used on coats and suits are more conservative, mushroom and saucer shapes being the most popular. Balls, squares and cubes are also employed, as well as acorns.

Pearl buttons come in all sizes and shapes, from the large ball buttons appropriate for novelty suits and the flat style for separate skirts to the tiny ones for shirt waists. Heavy corded materials make use of ribbed buttons.

Checked suits may be thanked for the plaid and plaid checked buttons, as well as the black and white effects in combination with white rims.

White cotton crochet buttons, especially the tiny ones for blouses, are still suitable.

Among the new colors shown is a French gray button to match the shade now so popular in dresses. A ring of black is often used to enhance its beauty.

BUNNY AT THE FAIR.

"Are you going to the fair?" cried Bunny, scampering up to Joey Squirrel. "We are all off and are going to have such fun."

"Yes, I'm coming. I've never seen a fair before. Will you take me with you?" asked Joey.

"Yes; come along," replied Bunny.

In a few moments Joey joined his friend and the little family of bunnies, and they quickly ran down the woodland path to the field.

You should just have seen the crowd of animals.

There were so many and such stores of nuts and buns that Joey was quite bewildered.

There were some camels there to give the people rides, and Joey liked that much better; he and Bunny went right to the other side of the field on one. There they saw some mice doing tricks and stayed watching them for quite a long time.

"We had better go back now; mother will wonder where we are," said Bunny, but the crowd was so great that they could not find her again.

"What shall we do?" asked poor little Joey, beginning to cry.

"I know—we'll sit under the hedge till the rest have nearly all gone, then we shall see her," answered Bunny bravely.

Suddenly Joey said: "I know—I'll run up this tree, and then I can see all over the fair. Shall I?"

"Yes, do," said Bunny.

He was out of sight in a moment and found he could see all that was going on, and after a few moments he spied Mrs. Bunny on the other side of the field talking to Policeman Hippopotamus.

"I see her!" he cried and, scrambling down, took his little friend's hand and raced off. It was hard work to get through the crowd, but they reached Mrs. Bunny at last, just as she was beginning to cry.

"Oh, how glad I am to see you!" she said, kissing them both. "Where have you been?"

"We were lost, only Bunny said we'd stay under the hedge, so nobody hurt us," explained Joey.

"And Joey climbed a tree and found out where you were," added Bunny.

And then his mother kissed them again and took them home.

She gave Joey a lovely supper before he went home, and then he and Bunny said good night to each other and went to bed, quite tired out with such an exciting day.

MR. BACON AND GENERAL PERSHING CONFERRING AT MEXICAN BORDER.

ROBERT BACON IN RACE FOR SENATOR

Former Ambassador and Secretary of State Candidate For Republican Nomination.

Intense interest has been aroused throughout the state by the announcement of the Hon. Robert Bacon that he is a candidate for the nomination in the Republican primaries for United States senator, which will be held Sept. 19. Mr. Bacon was formerly the American ambassador to France and has had a long and varied experience in dealing with the foreign affairs of the United States. In the Roosevelt administration he was assistant secretary of state under Mr. Root and succeeded Mr. Root as secretary of state when Mr. Root resigned from that office.

Few men in public life in this country have had such intimate dealings with Latin American affairs. While he was assistant secretary of state Mr. Bacon made a particular study of the relations of the United States with the countries of South and Central America, and three years ago he made a tour of the principal South and Central American countries in the interests of the American Institute of International Law.

As a result of this journey societies of international law composed of the leading South American publicists were formed in Brazil, the Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Chile, Peru and other countries of Latin America. These societies are now all active members of the American Institute of International Law, which has its headquarters in Washington and of which the Hon. Elihu Root is honorary president and Dr. James Brown Scott president.

Honored in South America.

While he was in South America Mr. Bacon was the recipient of high official honors in all the countries that he visited. He was received by the presidents of the various countries and was made a member of their learned societies. He delivered addresses in Spanish and French setting forth the purposes of the American Institute of International Law and of the Carnegie endowment of international peace, of which he is one of the trustees and under whose auspices he undertook the journey.

Mr. Bacon has long been prominent in the educational affairs of America. He is a graduate of Harvard university and is now one of the seven members of the Board of Fellows of that institution. Since he retired from the banking business in 1901 he has devoted his entire time to study and discussion of public questions and service. He is a member of many patriotic societies and is president of the National Security league, which has a membership of many thousands and which was organized for the purpose of presenting to the public the facts in regard to national preparedness.

The cause of preparedness has occupied much of Mr. Bacon's time since the outbreak of the European war. He has made several public statements in regard to the country's needs in this respect, giving his opinion as to the duty of Americans to be true to American ideals in the conduct of the relations of the United States with the European powers. Mr. Bacon is a firm advocate of the policy of universal military training and service for national preparedness. Upon numerous public occasions he has spoken upon this subject. Mr. Bacon has exemplified his practical interest in the cause of military training by serving as a private at Plattsburg, where he was promoted to be sergeant. He also served at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

Mr. Bacon's announcement that he would be a candidate for the senatorship has brought forth public letters from many men eminent in the country's affairs. Among those who have written calling attention to Mr. Bacon's special qualifications for the senatorship because of his long experience in and deep study of the problems now confronting the country are ex-United States Senator Elihu Root, the Hon. Joseph H. Choate and Dr. David Jayne Hill, formerly president of the University of Rochester.

The accompanying recent letters received by Mr. Bacon should have a bearing on the subject in question.

Former Senator Root wrote the following, in part, to Mr. Choate, who has consented to act as chairman of Mr. Bacon's primary campaign committee:

HON. JOSEPH H. CHOATE, CHAIRMAN, NEW YORK CITY:

Dear Mr. Choate—I think you are rendering still another public service in acting upon Mr. Robert Bacon's committee for his nomination as United States senator in the Republican primaries. Not only is Mr. Bacon a citizen of the highest type—high minded, generous and public spirited—but he has special qualifications. He was long assistant secretary of state, then for a short time secretary of state, then for a number of years ambassador to France. He filled all of those positions with distinction and success. He has both theoretical and practical familiarity with international history, the foreign policies of the United States and the business of diplomacy.

His service in the United States senate would be of immense value to Mr. Hughes in the conduct of the foreign affairs of the United States. Although the senate is the constitutional adviser of the president in regard to foreign affairs, there are comparatively few senators who have really studied the subject or acquired practical familiarity with it.

Increased strength in that direction is much needed. If the people of the state of New York can put into the senate a man of the highest character who understands the business of foreign affairs they will have rendered a very great service to the president who is about to be elected and to the people of the United States.

They can do that by electing Mr. Bacon.

From Professor Hill:

"Would Honor the State."

I have been greatly pleased to learn that you have accepted the invitation of your friends to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States senate in the coming primaries.

Your presence in that body would do honor to the state of New York and be of real service to the American people. Your knowledge of public affairs, acquired in the course of a large experience in responsible office, and especially the results of your intimate acquaintance with foreign relations should be of immense value to the country at a time when our position in the world is as uncertain as it is now and is confronted by so many delicate international problems which the nation will certainly have to solve. Permit me therefore to express to you my great interest in the success of your candidacy.

The active interest of Mr. Bacon in affairs directly relating to public needs is also indicated by the following:

He is a trustee of Hampton institute, of the controlling board of which William H. Taft is president; he is a member of the Civic federation and also a member of the chamber of commerce of the city of New York.

SERENE OLD AGE.

The Flight of Years Didn't Disturb This Ancient One.

During a Saturday stroll in the country a pedestrian came upon an ancient rustic engaged in breaking stones. Drawing him into conversation, the pedestrian eventually asked the old fellow how old he was.

"Oh, I dunno," was the reply, "but I know I be a fearful age."

"But you must have some general idea how old you are?"

"No, I dunno, but I know I be a fearful age," was the only estimate that could be drawn from him.

"All right. We'll try to get at it in another way," said the pedestrian, bringing out his pencil and notebook. "Now, how old were you when you left school?"

"I be nine, sur, when I finished schulin'."

"And what did you do then?"

"Well, I was boy fur Farmer Giles fur fifteen year."

"And after that?"

"After that I worked fur Squire Noakes fur seven and thirty year."

"And what next?"

"Well, I was wagoner fur Chuker, the carrier, fur four and forty year."

And so on, and so forth, until the final fact was elicited that he had been engaged on breaking stones for a quarter of a century. Then the inquirer observed, with withering sarcasm:

"So you do not know how old you are? Well, I'll tell you. You're 378 years old on your own showing!"

"I dessay," murmured the ancient yokel, with undisturbed serenity. "I know I be a fearful age."—London Tit-Bits.

Exclamations of surprise and incredulity from his wide eyed audience.

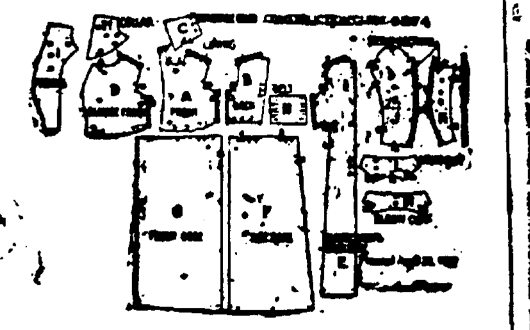
The New All-Over Costume

The new all-over costume which bids fair to be one of the furores of early Autumn. This model is fashioned from brown gabardine.

Here is what promises to be the dominant fashion of Fall—the all-over costume. It is carried out in dark brown gabardine trimmed with moire silk and deep fringe. Embroidered squares done in rope silk ornament the lower edge of the skirt, appearing above the fringe. In medium size the costume requires 4¼ yards 54-inch material, with 1⅛ yard lining 36-inches wide, 1 yard moire silk and 6 yards fringe.

The construction of the frock has been greatly simplified for the home dressmaker, who will find it no trouble to reproduce it if the construction guide and directions are followed carefully. First face the front of the lining, keeping in mind that the large "O" perforations indicate the center front. Then close the seam and sew the convertible collar to the neck.



To make the blouse, side and back gores, first gather the front between double "TT" perforations. Arrange on lining and close under arm seam. Stitch gathers to position, lower edges even. Single large "O" perforation at lower edge of front indicates center-front. Turn hem at front edge of side gore on small "o" perforations; gather between double "TT" perforations. Sew to back as notched; turn under back gore on slot perforations, lap to small "o" perforations in back, and side gore, notches even; stitch above side gore, press plait; close seam. Lap under-arm edge of back to small "o" perforations in front, matching large "O" perforations, stitch leaving seam free about 2½ inches from lower edge to slip belt under. Close shoulder seam as notched.

Next, close the back seams of the deep collar and sew to neck. Adjust facing on collar and under front, edges even; lap right back of collar and facing on left, matching small "o" perforations; fasten with a button and buttonhole.

Now, form plaits in the belt and adjust to position, center-fronts even. The sleeves are made last and the work is begun by closing the seams, easing fullness between notches at the elbow. Close seam of wrist cuff as notched to large "O" perforation and line. Sew to sleeve as notched, small "o" perforation at inside seam of sleeve; bring small "o" perforations near pointed ends together and tack. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam easing any fulness.

Add fringe and embroidery last.

BUTTON VARIATIONS.

Advance Tips About the Kind and Uses of Fall Fasteners.

Buttons are not at all left in the lurch because of the amount of hand work used. In fact, they serve to accentuate the special feature of the waist, coat or suit they adorn. Buttons increase the importance of pockets, belts and capes and give themselves a chance to assume extraordinary shapes and sizes.

Because of the vogue for dark suits with white hat, shoes or gaiters, white ivory buttons are allowed. Sometimes they are ringed with black or a fashionable color, sometimes they have a pearl center, but all of them are light in weight, and this accounts for at least part of their popularity. They are also made on dark taffeta dresses.

Those used on coats and suits are more conservative, mushroom and saucer shapes being the most popular. Balls, squares and cubes are also employed, as well as acorns.

Pearl buttons come in all sizes and shapes, from the large ball buttons appropriate for novelty suits and the flat style for separate skirts to the tiny ones for shirt waists. Heavy corded materials make use of ribbed buttons.

Checked suits may be thanked for the plaid and plaid checked buttons, as well as the black and white effects in combination with white rims.

White cotton crochet buttons, especially the tiny ones for blouses, are still suitable.

Among the new colors shown is a French gray button to match the shade now so popular in dresses. A ring of black is often used to enhance its beauty.

Fulton is reaching out for more factories. Nothing will carry more weight with the prospective investor than a live daily paper. Are you doing your part?

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Were it not for the narrow bands of cluny insertion and edging, this pongee frock would be classed with the tub models. As it is, however, it lends itself to acquaintance with the wash tub most democratically. Five yards pongee, twelve yards insertion and fifty yards edging makes the dress.

SCOTTISH HUMOR AND CHARACTER

was invited after the morning service to dine with a worthy farmer. During the meal the young man thought fit to apologize for his hearty appetite saying he was always hungry after preaching in the morning.

The old farmer having heard this apology two or three times and not having been favorably impressed with the youth's pulpit ministrations at last bluntly said: "Well, I'm no surprised at your hunger considering the trash that comes off yer stomach in the morning."

In reviewing the character of Scottish humor I am of the opinion that it's prime peculiarity lies in the elements of sarcasm and plain speaking, rather than in being ridiculous or in possessing any particular quaintness of conceit. It differs very much from the national humor of either the American, the Englishman or the Irishman. A Scotchman would stand aghast at such Americanisms as:

"The trees of Colorado are so tall that it takes a man and a body to see to the top of them."

"The gentleman from Kohosh stood up so straight that he leaned over backward.'

"A farmer out West was so lazy that the shade of his hat killed the plants.

"A man used the wart on the back of his neck for a collar button.'

or the story told by a Boston fire laddie that the stream from the hose was so strong that people from the roof of the burning building slid down on it and were saved.

These are examples of Yankee exaggeration in humor.

An Irishman might say: "May you live to eat the hen that scratches over your grave" or he might say "If this letter don't reach you, don't fail to answer me back by the following mail."

This from an Irishman, but from a Scotchman—never.

The Scotch seldom indulge in "bulls". They are too direct in their way of thought and too truthful in expression.

Harry Larrequer of the Irish Dragoons heard of his uncle's death in this way: "He was confined to his bed for six weeks from a cold caught ten days ago."

A Scotchman would hardly be guilty of a "bull" of that kind.

Let me draw contrasts between Scotch and Irish wit. Here is a good example of Irish wit:

A gentleman travelling through Sackville street, Dublin, paused at the Post Office to survey four large statues that embellished the walls.

"Whom do these represent?" He asked his guide. "Sure thems the twelve apostles was the answer." "But there are only four of them," said the gentleman. "Sure, the rest are inside sir, sorting out letters."

This is a fair example of Irish wit and the peculiar nature of it lies in Pat's ridiculous way of extricating himself from his first blunder by a nonsensical and laughable attempt to make out his case.

Let me give you now, in contrast a fair specimen of Scotch wit and you will doubtless note the essential difference between the two.

An old Scotch tippler, with a very red nose was standing before a tavern door. "How much did it cost to color that nose?" asked a wag.

"I dinna ken," answered the toper, It's no finished."

Here the force of the humor lies in its straightforward and candid truth.

Time will not allow of a detailed analysis of this subject which is an interesting one, however, in this connection it seems proper to speak of some of those things which make the Scotchman laugh for indeed he has a fine appreciation of humor and is quick to catch and enjoy a joke, for excellent proof of this I refer you to a very amusing and instructive book by Dean Ramsey entitled "Reminiscences of Scottish Life and Character."

William Black in his novel, "Madcap Violet," tells a story which has a characteristic Scotch flavor.

Peter, an old Highlander is the speaker and I will try to give his words as far as possible in the Scotch dialect and in something of Peter's manner:

"Very cleffer some of the young Englishmen are. And they wass coming to see a piece of shooting land Carn Sloe had to let—and John McFarland went with them—and Carn Sloe had told John to gif a good account of the land.

And one of the young Englishman was asking: "John, are there many partridges here about?"

And John he will say: "Partridges." why they are just in thousands."

And after a while, they were asking him: John are there many pheasants here about?"

And John, he will say "Pheasants! Why man, they are just in thousands" —for he would get Carn Sloe a good price.

Then one of the young Englishmen for the joke of it will say, "John, are there many monkeys and gorillas here about?"

And John will see him winking—and he will say: "No; there are not many monkeys and gorillas here about. They just come and goes in twos and threes—just like yoursels."

Inasmuch as the Scotch are a very religious people, the minister holds an important position in every community, and is a personage around whom numerous local associations cluster, and coming in constant contact with his people and being on the closest terms of intimacy, he ofttimes becomes as it were a receptacle for the humor of his parish and perhaps as often a target for the witty squibs of his parishioners. It would seem in consequence that half of the humorous stories of the Scotch have a clerical flavor, nor do they lose one whit of their pith on that account. For example:

A poor half witted fellow, having long had a desire to join himself with the church, betook himself to the minister to pass the customary ordeal of examination.

The minister knowing him to be a simple minded fellow determined to catechize him according to his capacity.

Now Sandy, said he, I will ask you a few simple questions and I have no doubt you will answer them properly. The first question is: "How many commandments are there?

This was a poser. Sandy scratched his head. How many commandments? Weel, We'll say a hundred.

No. No, Shocking said the minister. This will never do. You must go back home and study your catechism more carefully.

Away went Sandy with a downcast mein. On the way he met a friend.

"Where are you going?" he asked.

"I'm going to the minister to be catechized," said the man.

"Are ye," said Sandy. "I've been there. Now tell me. If he should ask you how many commandments there were what would ye say?"

"Why, I say ten of course."

"Ten say ye, Ten! Try ye him wi' ten, I tried him wi' a hundred and he was not satisfied."

The beadle or minister's man as he was sometimes called used to be an important auxiliary to the minister and through the association often assumed an air of dignity and importance among his fellows bordering upon the ludicrous.

A minister at one time paying a visit to a brother minister came across the minister's man, who was digging in the garden, and stopped to have a chat with him.

"Well John, You've been a long time with the minister. You have heard him preach many times. I suppose by this time you can preach a sermon as well as he.

Na, I can na exactly do that, but I can draw an inference from a text.

Oh, indeed, then I will give you a text and we'll see what inference you will draw from it. Here it is: "The wild ass snuffeth up the wind at his pleasure." Now what inference would you draw from that?"

Weel, said John. I'd draw this inference: That he'd snuff a long time, before he'd fatten on it.

Let me close with one more story which I came across lately and which has no especial application except that it is Scotch.

Washington Irving visiting Abbotsford spent a few days with Sir Walter Scott. At supper one night the conversation touched upon a certain landed gentleman or Laird, in the neighborhood called the Laird of McNab.

"Poor man," said Sir Walter, "his dead and gone."

"What are you saying Sir Walter, broke in Mrs. Scott, "He's not dead."

"Aye, but he is," said Sir Walter.

"No, you're much mistaken," said Mrs. Scott. "He's alive and as well as ever."

"Well," said Sir Walter dryly, "I attended his funeral some six weeks ago and saw him lowered into the grave and if he is not dead thenthey have done him a great injustice."

FARMERS SIZE UP HUGHES AS "PRETTY GOOD FELLOW"

Fargo, N. D.—Charles E. Hughes campaigned for the first time among the sturdy farmers of the eastern part of North Dakota and left behind him the reputation of being a "pretty good fellow."

He was forced to undergo a critical scrutiny before the verdict was given.

Mr. Hughes preached the doctrines of government efficiency, Americanism, tariff as protection to the farmers, and preparedness, and in each instance won applause, despite the fact that the farmers are not the strongest advocates of the last named issue.

They cheered for preparedness the loudest when Mr. Hughes told them that it meant not militarism, but ability to uphold national honor.

As they cheered for Mr. Hughes, one broad-shouldered old farmer said "It's because there's something about him that makes you believe he's telling the truth."

DENIES ASSAILING MR. HUGHES.

Percy Mackaye Writes He Never Saw "Authors' Letter" With His Name Appended.

Percy Mackaye, playwright, whose name appeared as one of the signers of the so-called "authors' letter," published in the newspapers last week, knew nothing about the matter until after publication, according to a statement given out yesterday at Republican national headquarters. The letter attacked Charles E. Hughes' criticism of President Wilson as "nonconstructive" and propounded ten questions for Mr. Hughes to answer. In a letter to Mr. Hughes Mr. Mackaye said:—

"My attention has just been called to an open letter addressed to you, printed in the New York Herald of August 2, signed by a number of professional writers, among whom my name in included. I beg to send you this word, to say that I did not sign the letter and never saw or heard of the letter until it was shown to me in print."

It was stated at Republican headquarters that neither Mr. Hughes nor any of his staff had seen the letter except as it appeared in the newspapers.

PERTINENT PARAGRAPHS FROM HUGHES' SPEECHES.

"What is the President's policy—does anyone know? Has the Executive ever had a policy for more than six months on the Mexican question?"

"If I am elected President I will see to it that American rights in Mexico are respected."

"There is no man who could successfully present to an American community the platform that an American citizen's rights stop at the coast line."

"We will get through with this old strife between capital and labor. We are not laborers and capitalists in this country. We are fellow-citizens."

"All that the workingmen want is a square deal."

"We want the United States efficiently managed, I want to see men in office who believe in prosperity."

"The Republican Party stands for a prosperity produced by sound American policies."

"We have removed from office men of experience and substituted others to satisfy partisan obligations. This must stop."

THAT FULL DINNER PAIL.

Relying foolishly upon the full dinner pail to accomplish for them what it has so often accomplished for the Republican party, the Democrats proceed to pile extravagance upon extravagance and to make flabby claims of being at peace, even when we are at war, says the Detroit Journal.

For the dinner pail has been filled with munition money, which presently must be supplanted by the true coinage of protected American industry after the war.

And while the dinner pail is full, observe with what inflated foods. This administration promised the worker a lower cost of living. But, as a matter of fact, to the worker Democratic prosperity is a false prosperity. It is a mirage.

Every man with a dinner pail knows that, unless his wages have been increased 20 per cent. under Democratic munition prosperity, he is poorer than he was four years ago. For Wilson rents are from 20 to 40 per cent. higher; the Wilson meat, the Wilson sugar and the Wilson wool are 40 per cent. higher, and the Wilson steel and tin and household goods are from 20 to 40 per cent. higher.

The Wilson bread has advanced faster than the Wilson wage, and the Wilson taxes have risen higher than the Wilson prosperity.

Democracy may have enriched the munition manufacturer, but has it enriched the worker, whose cost of living has increased faster than his earnings?

If the Administration can re-elect itself on the ground that the worker is obliged to move out of his home into an inferior one, or has to double up in tenements and to take in boarders to make up for his loss of economic advantage under the present increased cost of living, then there is no reason why the Administration should not be as extravagant in its taxes as it choosed.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING

UNCLE SAM TO GIVE AMERICAN HIGH SCHOOLS VOCATIONAL COURSES IF BILL BECOMES LAW.

(By United Press)

Washington, August 23—Uncle Sam will put a vocational course of training in every high school in the country if a bill that has just passed the Senate also passes the House of Representatives. Indications today are that the bill will become a law soon.

The bill was introduced simultaneously in both houses by Senator Hoke Smith and Representative Hughes, both of Georgia. It is an elaboration of the federal aid system by which the United States government annually contributes nearly $100,000 to each state for the maintenance of agricultural colleges and experiment stations, as well as four million, one hundred thousand dollars to carry on the rural extension system of vocational instruction for farmers throughout the country.

The proposed law is the result of a steadily growing conviction that the prospective farmer, or, nowadays, scientific agriculturist, should be extended the opportunities of an agricultural schooling at an early age and not compelled to attend the agricultural college for the rudiments of his trade.

It has been felt that a large proportion of boys destined to make their living from the soil are unable to afford a college education and need high school credits for college entrance anyhow.

Eighteen states now extend aid to their high schools for courses in agriculture, the mechanic arts and home economics. Minnesota annually appropriates $300,000 for this work.

To standardize and nationalize the high school aid work the Smith-Hughes bill provides that the United States shall share in the payment of salaries to state teachers, inspectors and directors in state high schools.

It also provides for a Federal Board of Vocational Education.

This Board, which would consist of the Commissioner of Education of the United States as Chairman and four members to be appointed, (not more than two from any political party), by the President. This Board and state educational authorities would co-operate in outling courses.

The State Relations service of the Department of Agriculture has pursued the system still further by preparing a comprehensive system of cousres in agriculture. These have been offered to the states for use in their grammar schools, in the rural districts.

Alabama, Mississippi, Wisconsin, Maryland and Vermont have installed the course in all their elemental schools since the initiation of the plan a year or so ago.

LACK OF WAR ORDERS SHUTS SOUTH AMERICAN FACTORY AND CAUSES MUCH SUFFERING.

(By United Press)

Montevideo, August 23—Lack of war orders for frozen meats has caused the closing of Frigorifico Uruguayo, or Uruguayan Meat Freezing Plant in the district of Cerro and the consequent throwing of 2,000 men out of employment.

Unemployment is rapidly reaching a critical stage in the district, as the number of unemployed has doubled several times by the closing of allied industries. More men are being thrown out of work daily. Much suffering has resulted.

Stock farmers in the interior have also suffered big slumps in the prices paid for their product. The belligerents in Europe do not want any more of these meats right now and there are no ships for the plant's production to be shipped elsewhere in.

Strike Situation Serious

Conferences Are Held At The White House Today

(By Robert J. Bender, United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, August 24—"Since midnight the situation has taken a change for the worse," declared a member of the railway president's sub committee before the sub committee left for the White House at their own request, to confer with the President. "The situation is very serious," he added. The sub-committee R. S. Lovett, of the Union Pacific; Daiel Williard, of the Baltimore and Ohio, and Hale Holden, of Burlington, expected to report the result of the visit to the meeting of the whole number of railroad presidents at three o'clock. They left the meeting of the latter which has been in session since eleven o'clock to make the trip to th White House.

"Everything now depends on this visit to the White House," said one of the three. He would not discuss what term the negotiation had taken to make the situation worse. The executor in question is one who heretofore talked optimistically concerning the proposition for adjustment.

The meeting at the White House lasted only ten minutes. Leaving the White House, President Holden, of Burlington, spokesman of the group said, "The situation is not any more hopeful than it has been."

"Is it hopeful at all?" he was asked.

"I cannot make any statement as to that," he replied, "All I know is that as long as there is something to work with I am going to keep plugging away."

Contrasting to the pessimism reflected by some of the railroad presidents was the very hopeful attitude of the president. In administration circles belief is strong that things look better than they have at any time. There is a certainty that there is no danger of an immediate break off of negotiations. While Holden said the conference with the President was requested by himself on suggestion of the sub committee of eight, it was stated at the White House that the President had asked for a conference.

HUGHES ABOUT READY FOR WEEK'S VACATION IN ESTES PARK.

(By United Press)

Ogden, Utah, August 24—Ogden gave Charles E. Hughes a tremendous welcome this afternoon when the Republican candidate arrived to address a crowd which jammed the city's largest auditorium. He will leave shortly after speaking here for Salt Lake City, thirty miles south, where he will deliver his second and last set address in Utah this evening.

While showing no marked effects from his swift transcontinental campaign trip which opened August 5, Governor Hughes is looking forward to a week's vacation in the Estes Park region of the Rocky Mountains beginning next Sunday.

HUNTER BROS. INVESTIGATION

BANK EXAMINATIONS WERE MADE HERE YESTERDAY AND AT WATERTOWN TODAY.

Special Master Andrew J. MacNaught, named by Judge W. Ray to investigate the alleged misuse of about $114,000 funds of the Hunter Brothers, went to Watertown today to examine bank records. Tomorrow he will go to Clayton, N. Y., and Philadelphia, N. Y., on similar errands. Mr. MacNaught was accompanied by attorneys Nelson P. Bonney and James Hill, of Norwich. They have previously made an examination of bank records here. It is claimed that some of the Hunter Company money was used to pay the expenses of the Hunters as individuals and Judge Ray named Mr. MacNaught to investigate the allegations.

L. C. Foster, cashier of the First National bank of Fulton was examined here yesterday and told of the Hunter transactions with that institution. It was not brought out that the bank was concerned in any transactions where the funds were used for the personal expenses of the Hunters. He testified that the bank has set a limit on loans to individuals and corporations of $10,000. When the Hunter Arms company reached this limit, he said, the Hunter Brothers secured personal loans and later put this money into the company.

The Hunter brothers had transactions with thirty-five banks in many cities throughout the country. From the testimony at the hearing here yesterday it did not appear that any of the money borrowed from the Fulton banks had been used to promote any of their outside schemes.

RAILWAYS HAVE HARD TIMES

SHALL CHILDREN UNDER SIXTEEN BE KEPT OFF FROM STREET CARS?

The interurban electric roads in Central New York are facing a unique problem in dealing with the infantile paralysis quarantines throughout this section and are using divers means and methods to keep children under sixteen off the cars.

On the Oneida branch the company's ticket representatives have been instructed not to sell tickets or accept cash fares from people under sixteen unless they present properly signed health certificates.

The Empire United Officials have instructed their representatives to use persuasion and to make the fact known to all would be passengers that quarantines are in force at several places on the Empire United Lines. The officials of this road have decided that it is not advisable to refuse as passengers children under sixteen as there are no state laws giving authority for such action. It is claimed that there is a danger of damage suits if any are put off the trains.

The officials claim that their system of moral persuasion is having very good results and that there have been very few persons who cared to run the risk of entering a town that has been placed under quarantine without the proper health certificates.

The fact that no two towns have made the same provision for the enforcement of the rules is making a great deal of trouble for the railway companies. Steps have been taken toward having all the towns declare a quarantine under the same provisions and to be backed up by the State Board of Health.

DEALERS DENY DOPING MILK

DR. WALKER'S STATEMENT REGARDING MILK AND INREGARDING MILK AND INCAUSED MUCH COMMENT.

Dr. Mary Walker's statement in this paper Monday that infantile paralysis was due not to germs, but to soda placed in milk by dishonest milkmen has aroused the ire of several Syracuse milkmen who hasten to deny any such charges.

While the milkmen do not attempt to dispute the fact that Dr. Walker has the right dope regarding the source of the disease, since no one appears to know where it really does come from they register what they call a legitimate kick about the soda part of it. Syracuse, they say is free and clear of all such milk and they say that housewives and mothers in this vicinity who are now looking upon all milk with suspicion and alarm have no reason whatever to be afraid.

The stringent regulations governing the milk supply both by state and city authorities are so rigidly enforced that the dairymen and dealers do not dare to violate a single provision they claim. Putting soda in the milk is one of the things prohibited.

The inspection of dairies, stations, bottling plants and methods of every dealer is not only thorough but erratic, so that at all times, if a dealer wants to remain in the business very long he has to live up to the law in every particular. They can never tell when an official is going to swoop down upon them, take a sample of their milk for analysis or inspect their bottles and cans. This has been the case for several years and the dealers say that they cannot afford to take any chances whatever. The risk compared to the doubtful profit, they say, makes honesty in handling milk the only policy.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS MEETING

The Board of Public Works met last to consider the improvement of streets in the Third Ward in accordance with a request made by people of that vicinity.

It is the intention of the Board to use the sub-base taken from East First street to improve the following street: South Third between Broadway and State; South Fifth between State and Pratt; and South Sixth between Broadway and State.

Aldermen E. O. Barker, Wade C. Gayer and Charles Kirby all spoke in favor of the improvement.

The board passel a resolution to improve the streets and instructed Superintendent of Public Works F. H. Rumsey to notify the property owners.

E. R. Redhead appeared in behalf of the Victoria Paper Company and placed a proposition before the board in regard to remodelling the North First street bridge. The cost of this improvement would be about $300, one third of which the paper company agreed to pay. The Board decided to investigate and report at the next meeting.

HAS RETURNED FROM AUTO TRIP

Mr. J. G. Light, manager of the Fulton Fuel and Light Company, has returned from an extended auto trip through western New York and Central Pennsylvania. He motored home by way of Buffalo and Niagara Falls and was well pleased and delighted with the sights at the Falls, they being exceptionally beautiful at this time of the year. One of the "sights" however, that interested him most was the rapid transfer of a tire on his machine which he had occasion to have changed. The time consumed by the lightning garage employe was 2:08 1-4 and the charge was $1.00. Mr. Light is now busy figuring up how much the man makes each hour during summer months when picking is good.

BAND CONCERT.

A band concert will be held this evening on West Broadway. Community dancing will be permitted and the music will be furnished by the local Elks' band.

THE FRENCH DRIVE BACK THE GERMANS

(By United Press)

Paris, August 24—Two German attacks near Soyequort, south of the Somme, preceded by intense artillery fire were completely repulsed by the French in last night's fighting. It was officially announced today. The first attack by the German grenade parties was repulsed by machine guns and infantry fire in the Champagne region. The French repulsed several surprise attacks on the right bank of the Meuse northeast of Verdun. The Germans bombarded the positions recently captured by the French on the Fleury-Thiaumont front. The French took five officers and 250 prisoners on this sector. The French aviators brought down four German claims during the day.

STARTS ACTION FOR $5,000 DAMAGES

Speaker of the Assembly Thaddeus C. Sweet and Matthew A. Heeran, of Rennselaer are mentioned as the persons in whose presence the state architect Lewis F. Pilcher, uttered alleged slanderous remarks concerning Albert O. True, of Rennsalaer who has started an action against the state official to recover $5,000 damages. True was employed as a sanitary engineer in the state department of health from May, 1910 to July, 1913 when he resigned to take a similar position in the office of the state architect. On July 1 of this year he was dropped from the pay roll because the item for his salary in the appropriation bill was vetoed by Governor Whitman. He had secured through the Assembly Ways and Means committee inclusion in the bill of an item increasing his salary from $2,150 to $2,350.

AT THE QUIRK TODAY

One of the marks of the exceptional picture is that its characters are not drawn solid—that the author has not been content to apply on his background mere moving blobs of unrelieved excellence, sweetness and wickedness to represent his hero, heroine and villain. There are other signs to which the really big picture may be known: they are made by the work of the director, his cast, and his staff.

And "The Unwritten Law" has them all.

The story may be taken as one of woman in the abstract—good and loyal as a rule, yet—human. The concrete example with whom we are concerned is Kate Wilson, of whom Beatriz Michelena makes a character that will live.

OUR BEST AID TO MEXICO

President Charles William Dabney, of the Cincinnati University, in discussing the Mexican situation, says:

"Mexico can not have a free and orderly government so long as the great masses of its people are illiterate. A democracy must be based on an organized public opoinion, and such a public opinion can be made possible only through a system of education, which, while it trains in the industrial arts, also disciplines the character and develops leaders of scope and vision. The best aid to a man is to help him help himself. Our best aid to Mexico would be to help that nation train itself."

These are splendid words, and in the main true. But it seems that those who discuss Mexico lose sight of one thing, namely that a large part of the people are too poor to receive an education. That may sound foolish to the scholars who seem to believe that education will solve all economic problems, but we believe it is absolutely correct.

What good would an education do a man who had no place to stand upon the face of the earth? What good would it do the Mexican peon to be able to work out astronomical questions if he were not allowed to leave one ranch and go to another? What future is there before a generation, however highly educated, if it is held in serfdom and not allowed to leave the soil, nor seek its own employment? That is exactly the condition in Mexico.

The first thing that must be done for Mexico is to break up the present land system. There is no hope for the country until that is done. You cannot catch a Mexican and ram an education down his throat and turn him loose to become a good citizen when he and his family are compelled to live upon a certain tract of land or starve.

We can aid Mexico by making it plain to her that she must correct her land system—and we are doing it. The Mexican statesmen themselves are seeing the light. The leaders of all parties down there are talking about reforming the land system, and no matter what party controls the affairs of the nation in the future, the chances are that something will be done to remedy the evil that must first be remedied before we can hope to see a stable government stablished. Education will come with the coming of proprietorship in the land, but it will never come so long as the people are virtually held in bondage as at present.

Service of the Political Committees

The man who criticises the corruption of our times the most freely is rarely the same one who is ever willing to serve on a political committee. It is much easier to sit on your front porch and find fault with graft and inefficiency. If he served on a committee he might have to strain his patriotism by attending a few meetings.

Yet the work of political committees has to go on. Plans of campagn have to be mapped out. Rallies have to be held and advertising written and paid for. The voters have to be canvassed to get out a full poll. They have to be checked off as they vote, that the laggards may be rounded up.

There are many abuses in the work of political committees. Few men are willing to serve on them from pure zeal for community good. Usually they are looking for appointments or nominations. In return for work done, they expect favors from those who gain the office. This frequently involves the appointment of unfit men.

Yet the political committee performs its indispensable service. It at least knows that it must make the party program attractive to voters. It must see that candidates of a certain standard of decency go on the lists to be balloted for. Otherwise the party will be beaten every time. If there were no political committees, nominations would be made haphazard. It would be as well to snap up a cent to see who should go on the ticket.

Better politics can not be secured without good work being done. Reform is never accomplished by sitting at one's fireside and finding fault. Where improvement is made, it is because some one has gone to work. People who want better government should be willing to serve on political and campaign committees. Only by giving of their own time and interest can they command any support for their ideas.

MUST STUDY GEOGRAPHY

The business men of this country, especially those who expect to do a foreign business, must take up the study of geography. Their ignorance upon the subject handicaps them in many ways in securing the foreign commerce concerning which we hear so much these days—and that the average business man is ignorant of the geography of the world is known.

The Philadelphia Inquirer points out that ignorance in a rather striking manner, by relating an actual occurance of recent date. It seems that a gentleman from Rio de Janeiro was in this country for the purpose of purchasing supplies, and was being entertained by a party of New York business men. One of them asked the gentleman from South America how long it took him to reach New York from his home. He said that he had made it in the very good time of eighteen days.

Then the New York business man, to show that he was "well posted" said: "I supposed that with the completion of the Panama canal you could make the trip a few days quicker." Do you blame the gentleman from Argentina for smiling at the ignorance of the New York business man? But there are a lot of business men in this country who have never taken the trouble to learn that in going from Rio de Janeiro one does not pass anywhere near the canal.

This is only an instance. There are thousands of them happening every day with our business institutions. We wonder why we are not able to compete with the Europeans in the matter of South American trade, but we do not take the trouble to find out. The European understands geography; he knows the location of the various subdivisions of the earth. But he doesn't stop there. He sends representatives to this country to study the conditions and the business methods of these countries. He knows upon what terms they do business; he knows the needs or requirements of the trade; he knows how goods must be packed and shipped in order to be acceptable to them. These things the American business man come to know if he expects to compete with European nations after the war.

Modern Invention Will Eventually Solve the Labor Problem

By J. G. PHELPS STOKES, Publicist and Student of Socialism

WHEN one hears the name of a great inventor nowadays one can feel quite confident that in reality it includes the names of scores or hundreds of associate inventors and technicians and mechanics and others who have worked with him.

Hundreds and sometimes thousands of men are working together in close association today TO SOLVE THE MECHANICAL PROBLEMS AND TO IMPROVE THE MECHANICAL DEVICES OF MODERN INDUSTRY.

It requires no great stretch of the imagination to perceive that in the not distant future the productive capacity of man will have been so colossally enhanced by this modern method of co-operative inventing that the physical tasks of life will be infinitely reduced and life's physical burdens well nigh done away.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The fact that the Democratic campaign managers have booked Secretary Daniels for a speech in Maine seems to indicate that they have abandoned all hope of carrying the State and simply don't care what happens to the ticket in the September election.

Senator J. Ham Lewis, a spokesman for the administration, in attempting to apologize for the President's mollycoddle expression that we are "too proud to fight," explains that it is an old Latin quotation. But the people already know that it is out of date and the expression of a decadent nation.

"We don't want to maintain a political almshouse," remarked Mr. Hughes to the North Dakota farmers, and a nation applauds him. Americans are beginning to see a possibility in the near future of regaining their self-respect.

This Administration seems to have sold everything it could, from the nation's honor down to the smallest rural postmastership.

Secretary Daniels says this is no time for politics. And it's no time for Secretary Daniels, either.

Senator Lewis, defending the President on his "too proud to fight" expression, intimates that it was due solely to the ignorance of his audience that the popular interpretation that has been put upon it was evolved, and that anyway it didn't mean what it appeared to mean. The latter statement can be taken with some degree of confidence, as it is quite a well-known fact that most of the things the President says do not mean what they are supposed to mean.

Secretary Redfield has presented another of those living illustrations of the old adage that "fools rush in where angels fear to tread," with one important modification. The difference in the Secretary's case is that he walked right in and turned around and was kicked right out again.

The Democratic contingent in the Senate is all worked up over the fact that the terms of the treaty for the purchase of the Danish West Indies "leaked out." "Pitiless publicity," you understand, has been consigned to the scrap heap with a large assortment of various other Democratic policies and promises.

Of Mr. Wilson it may be said he meant well, but he now finds himself buried under the evidence of inefficiency that Mr. Hughes has brought forth.

Mr. Wilson has made no reply to the charges of Mr. Hughes. Is he still too proud to fight?

WILSON FLEXIBILITY.

We do not see why there should have been any stir in the senate over the discovery that President Wilson has completely reversed himself in the matter of the proposed child labor law. Senator Borah was able to show that Mr. Wilson described this legislation in his "Constitutional Government" as unconstitutional, an "obviously absurd extravagance," carrying the congresssional power to regulate commerce beyond the "utmost boundaries of reasonable and honest inference," and making it possible, if sustained, for congress to legislate over "every particular of the industrial organization and action of the country." That, we must confess, has also been the Evening Post's view. But the Evening Post and Senator Borah are old fogies, dating back to the time when it was the custom to have fixed beliefs and principles and stick to them. The senator has evidently not read Mr. Wilson's letter in explaining his change of front on the tariff commission—that it is only a narrow man, whose mind is stupidly closed to new ideas, who does not alter his opinions. By this test, Mr. Wilson is obviously one of the broadest minded men this country has ever produced, for he has changed his mind, to date, on the initiative, referendum, recall, woman suffrage, the tariff commission, tariff for revenue only, a permanent diplomatic service beyond politics, the merit system in the civil service, the proper place of Tammany Hall in the scheme of the universe, child labor legislation, preparedness, Bryan, a continental army —but why continue? It is a long enough list to prove that Mr. Wilson's political views are not fossilized by any fear of inconsistency.—New York Evening Post.

SUFFRAGISTS GIVE COMMUTERS CANDY

Women Distribute Sweets and Poems to Men to Take Home to Wives.

New York.—What with being held up at stations for health certificates and one thing after another, it must have given the man commuting between New York city and Connecticut, Long Island, Westchester or New Jersey a pleasant jolt recently to find his latest holdup nothing worse than a box of suffrage candy and a special message for his wife.

The box of candy was for the man, although it's dollars to doughnuts its contents went home to the kiddies who would be standing at the station with little brown bare knees to meet him in Cos Cob, or Mahwah, or Suffern, or New Canaan, or Far Hills, or Katonah, or Summit, N. J. In the box were twelve candies and a suffrage poem:

Within this box are suffrage sweets,
Their number twelve, we pray you note,
A stick for every western state
Where women have the right to vote.

Wyoming first set woman free.
Then Colorado, Idaho
And Utah followed; then there came
These states all in a suffrage row:

Arizona, Illinois,
Kansas, faroff Washington,
Montana, California,
Nevada then and Oregon.

If these confections now you like,
Pray help more suffrage states to win,
So that 'twill take a larger box
To get our suffrage candies in.

All over the city at the railroad terminals and ferry slips from which the afternoon commuter makes his dash for freedom women in white with suffrage colors of blue and yellow stood with arms full of candy boxes tied with yellow ribbons, handing them out to Mr. Commuter as he rushed past on his way to the train.

MISSOURI COUPLE MARRIED SEVENTY-TWO YEARS

Have Nearly 100 Living Descendants, Among Them Several of Fourth Generation.

Clinton, Mo.—Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Nutt of Clinton were married seventy-two years ago in Ohio, the state of their nativity. She is ninety-one and he almost ninety-two years old. After their marriage they spent some time in Illinois.

They have 135 descendants, nearly 100 living, including several great great-granchildren. They are the parents of twelve children.

Nutt has always had poor health, but his wife, despite the fact that a few months ago she slipped on the ice when carrying coal and broke her hip, moves about with the assistance of one crutch.

Since she has not been able to walk so well her fingers have been busy piecing numbers of quilts and quilting them with the dainty stitches only possible to the women of the old school of needlework.

These she has on sale. She only uses her glasses to sew and read with. Since Mr. Nutt retired from his business—stock raising—he has kept busy with odd jobs and until this season had a garden that was the pride of Clinton. Not enjoying an idle moment, he also begged his neighbors to let him help with theirs.

When they were married Nutt made but $13 a month.

GIRL HIDDEN TO AVOID WITCH.

Parents Keep Daughter Locked Up For Three Months.

Green Castle, Pa.—Neighbors of a family named Keller, who moved to this city from the country near the mountains some months ago, had observed that a daughter, aged twenty-one, had been missing since Easter. Inquiries met with evasive answers.

The rumors spread, the stories became magnified, and recently a constable was called and sent to the house. He demanded that the daughter, if locked in an upstairs room, as the stories had it, must be released at once. After demurring a bit the parents unlocked a door, and the young woman was set free.

She had been penned in the one room since the day after Good Friday. Her parents said they locked her up because she was being bewitched by a hex doctor.

UNIQUE CEREMONY

The Japanese Rite For the Battle Slain of the World.

IT EMBRACED ALL NATIONS.

On a Floating Temple In Sumida River a Priest of Tokyo, With His Flock, Offered Prayers For the Souls of Soldiers Dead Because of Wars.

Unusual preparations were made one morning in Shussanji, or the Going Out of the Mountain temple, a quaint little place of worship hidden away in a labyrinth of crooked streets in a poor quarter of Tokyo—preparations for a celebration on the Sumida river to pray for the repose of the souls of all those slain in battle regardless of nationality and to scatter scraps of paper bearing the image of Jizo Sama over the waves, one for each departed spirit.

The chief priest, an aged man, with his assistant and the supporters of the temple, had been busy for days in advance, and all was ready. The red and gold altar of Shussanji was heaped up with offerings of rice and fruit, and a plain wooden tablet had been placed there bearing the words:

"To console all those souls who have passed into the beyond because of war."

The old priest, his bald head shining, clad in his coarse cotton robe of gray, officiated before the altar, and when the last prayers were uttered the people formed a procession to the Sumida river, a short distance away.

Near a bridge an unusual craft was waiting, a deep cargo junk roofed over with canvas bearing bold black Buddhist symbols, and at the bow fluttered a white cotton banner on which was written in large black characters:

"A service to console the spirits of the whole world's departed ones."

Quickly the parishioners embarked and squatted down upon the cushions spread over the bottom of the boat, and the priest, the central figure in the religious ceremony, as gray and faded as the robes he wore, took up his position in front of the altar. A piece of soiled embroidery did duty for an altar cloth, and there was set up a tarnished statue of Jizo Sama. Just below were three wooden tablets. The central one read, "Pray for the whole world's departed ones' souls." The others had inscriptions asking for prayers for the Japanese army and for prayers for the allies of Japan.

The priest placed some sweet scented squares of incense upon the coals in a small brass brazier, and as the clouds rose into the air the boatman with his bamboo pole pushed off from the shore and the holy man's voice was heard chanting—all the worshipers, old women and young, men and children, murmuring in an undertone, "Name Amida Butsu!"

Out upon the Sumida river the ceremony of scattering the papers was begun. Old and young with their hands full leaned over the sides of the junk, throwing away the sacred papers with the effigy of Jizo Sama stamped thereon, each meant for the solace of the soul of some soldier slain in battle.

Those who have mourned dear ones slain in war would have been touched to the quick by this simple service of humble Japanese people given for all that great host of unknown who have laid down their lives for their countries.

And, while the priest intoned, the incense rose into the air, the metal and the wooden drums were beaten, the worshipers chanted unceasingly, and the squares of paper fluttered out of the boat on all sides and were carried away by the wind over the water to make a long wake behind the vessel.

For three hours the temple junk floated down the river, the papers falling noiselessly over the waves as the banks of the Sumida were passed.

A halt was made at noon, when thin white wooden boxes filled with rice and vegetables were brought out, while an old woman brewed the tea over a little charcoal fire.

The spot at which the stop had been made was a sacred one, for in that exact place a Jizo Sama stone had been buried under the water. Here after the simple meal a special service was held before the boat returned upstream, and a long, narrow piece of wood was driven into the sandy bottom of the bay. The inscription upon it read literally as follows:

"Herewith the service is held for the whole world its departed soldiers to console."—London Times.

Fish Lived In Box Nine Months.

Beloit, Kan.—Last October Ray Corn caught eleven catfish in the river near here and placed them in a "live" box for safe keeping over night. The next day the fish, box and all, were gone. The water is low, and Corn accidentally found the box stuck in the mud. In raising the box two of the fish escaped, but the rest were as lively as when he placed them there. Enough food floated through the cracks to keep them alive.

Whales Once Lived on Land.

Scientists tell us that whales did not always live in the sea, but in prehistoric days dwelt upon the land. They are not true fishes, and their skeletons still give evidence of the days when they possessed four legs. Furthermore, while fishes breathe water from which the air is separated by means of their gills whales breathe air and separate the life giving oxygen from the other gases by internal lungs like land animals. In contrast to fishes also they are warm, red blooded animals. The largest whales are found in the antarctic and arctic seas.

Our First Canal.

America's first canal was dug at South Hadley, Mass., when Washington was president. It was completed in 1796. That little waterway gave De Witt Clinton his idea for the canal across New York state—the greatest single impetus ever contributed to the upbuilding of a large city.

It was the Erie canal that gave New York the needed speed to pass Philadelphia as the metropolis of this continent.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Malay Houses.

Malay houses are invariably built on posts so as to raise the floor from four to six feet above the ground. The floor is composed of bamboo, with interstices between slats, the earth beneath becoming the receptacle of the drainage of the establishment. The universal plan of the well to do natives is to build the house in two divisions, the front one for receiving visitors and lounging generally, while the rear portion is reserved for the women and children.

Liberal Education.

Liberal education is an end in itself apart from all its utilities and applications. When we teach a child to read our primary aim is not to enable it to decipher a waybill or a receipt, but to kindle its imagination, enlarge its vision and open for it the avenues of knowledge. The same is true of a liberal education on its utmost reach. Its chief objects for the individual are development, inspiration and exaltation; the practical advantages which flow from it are incidental, not paramount. —Charles William Eliot.

CANAL NEARLY COMPLETED

BARGE CANAL SYSTEM WILL BE OPEN FROM HUDSON RIVER TO OSWEGO RIVER NEXT SEASON.

The State Engineer in the last issue of the barge canal bulletin reports that the canal system east of Syracuse is completed with the exception of a few scattered jobs, involving no engineering problems, and that the western section work is preceding encouragingly. He has this to say of the work in this section:

"The new Champlain and Oswego canals are completed throughout their entire length. Where the old canal is in use it is only because of uncompleted work upon which little remains to be done.

"The sections of the barge canal, which are being used this year are not the only portions which are ready for operation. There are certain parts which can be thrown open as soon as a few uncompleted pieces of work are finished.

"The new channel between Sylvan Beach, at the eastern end of Oneida Lake and Newark is thus ready for operation with the exception of three short stretches. One of these is between Clyde and Lyons, another is situated near Montezuma and the third extends from Three River Point to Onondaga Lake and is now in use, serving as a part of the Oswego canal.

"There will be no excuse whatever for failure to open the barge canal system from the Hudson river to Oswego with the opening of navigation in 1917, and the remainder of the work should certainly not require more than a year longer for completion. The eastern section might be opened during the present navigation season."

LARGE PARADE BY WOODMEN

LOCAL LODGE ENTERTAINS NATIONAL OFFICER

A large street parade followed by a program at their rooms, was given last night by the Modern Woodmen of America, in honor of their esteemed guest, Thomas H. Duffy, the national lecturer of the organization.

The parade started at 8:15 from the trolley station headed by the Elks' band. About two hundred Woodmen were in the line with uniforms of white and red, before which automobiles with the visiting officials in decorated cars rode.

After showing the visitors the beauty of Fulton they were taken to their rooms where a delightful program took place. The address of welcome was given by Mayor Lewis and was followed by the National Lecturer Thomas H. Duffy, who with all due reverence presented the two banners which are tokens of the strenuous work now completed by the local order.

The program follows:

THE CYCLONE

The fury and danger of the Cyclone is nothing compared to the destruction levied by the mail order business. The havoc caused by this evil will never be known. It can not be reckoned in figures. One well-known mail order house alone issued and circulated in one year twenty million catalogs, and there are also 1,000 mail order houses in the United States today. Towns have been wiped out of existence, land values wrecked, farms depopulated and business brought to a standstill. Thinking people of all classes—farmers, merchants, manufacturers—are now alive to the danger and have begun work to counteract its effects. Every town is being urged to wage a campaign of education to arouse the thought of the people. The imaginary, long-distance bargain has never yet measured up to standard and value of home bought goods.

CONSUMERS WILL NOT PAY FOR MEAT CONTAINERS

A $100 fine imposed on Swift and Company in a Yonkers, N. Y., court for charging for meat containers will have its effect all over the state and cost the meat packers $1,000,000 per year, according to their attorneys and save this sum for the consumers.

Under the complaint of John D. Eylers, state sealer of weights and measures the judge found the packers guilty of violating the law by charging for meat containers the same price as for the meat they contained. Eylers said that the company had sold "Swift Premium" ham weighing eleven pounds and six ounces in a container weighing six ounces and charged for eleven pounds and twelve ounces of meat.

As the ham sells at twenty-two cents per pound the purchaser of the package was paying about eight cents for the container. The state law provides that the net weight of the ham must be stamped on the container and that the consumer must not be charged for paper containers at meat prices.

The company's defense was that hams are a class apart from ordinary meat, and that when they are purchased the buyer knows that he is paying meat prices for the paper containers.

The Armour Company was recently fined $100 for a similar offense. The verdict was affirmed on appeal.

ASSERTIONS MADE NOT BINDING

INJURED EMPLOYES STATEMENTS CANNOT BE ACCEPTED.

Signed statements made by injured employes to claim agents for the employing companies cannot be accepted literally by the compensation commission when offered by the companies to their sureties as a defense to any claim for compensation being made by the injured party.

This is the ruling by Deputy Compensation W. C. Richards of Syracuse, in charge of this district in a Binghamton case.

The agent of the Erie railroad offered in evidence at the hearing a statement purported to have been made and signed by Donald Hennessey, seventeen, who is seeking compensation for the loss of four fingers on his left hand and for other injuries when he fell between two freight cars on a moving train in that city.

He testified at the hearing that he was knocked off the top of the car by a signal post. In his alleged statement he said he had jumped on the car to see what was dragging under it and was knocked off and that the accident was all his own fault. Mr. Richards refused to take the paper in evidence holding that it had been the experience of the commission that many statements of this nature were made at the time of accidents when the claimant is suffering bodily injuries and mental strain and that they were not binding upon the commission in the determination of claims or the fixing of awards.

OFFICIALS WILL PLAY BALL.

As a result of a challenge, the city officials will journey to Pathfinder Island next Wednesday afternoon to cross bats with the team known as the "Pathfinders." A luke warm contest is expected inasmuch as the city team has been undergoing strenuous practice on local diamonds in preparing for this game.

The line up for the officials is as follows: Painter, p; G. Allen, c; E. J. Dyer, 1b; V. C. Lewis, 2b; Thomas Gordon, ss; W. Guppy, 3b; William Hillick, cf; John Frawley, lf; G. C. Hill, rf; substitutes, C. M. Allen, Jr., Harry "Bunk" O'Brien, Frank Van Valkenburg.

[illegible] WARM WEATHER COMPLAINT

The most sensible explanation of the so-called infantile paralysis that we have observed, is that it is primarily a warm weather complaint. The hot humid atmosphere of the last few weeks is responsible for the outbreak. The peculiar atmosphere permeates the pores of young children, with the result that the circulation becomes sluggish and the limbs cease to perform their functions.

Infantile paralysis is not a contagious disease. This conclusion robs the disease of its greatest terror. The United States Health Service has found that out of two thousand and [illegible] persons exposed by residence in the same houses and in the same families with patients, only fourteen developed the disease in pronounced paralytic form. It is rare that more than a single case occurs in one family.

The attempt to quarantine is therefore not only useless but absurd. To keep children from places of amusement and to delay the opening of the schools, is likewise unwarranted and unnecessary excitement of the public.

The effort to locate the germ, responsible for infantile paralysis has not only failed, but must continue to fail, as it is not a germ disease. It is a warm weather disease, intensified by stomachic conditions, and superinduced by dislocated vertebrae in the spine in its virulent form.

A good preventive against infantile paralysis is to make sure that the spinal column and other bones are properly adjusted. Any competent chiropractor can render the necessary service.

If the bones in the spine are out of place above the heart and lungs it is at once a serious matter if paralysis attacks you, and this is just as true of adults as of children.

The infantile paralysis of today does not differ materially from the malady which long prevailed in China, and which was finally controlled by treating it as warm weather disease with symptoms herein mentioned.

The chief medical director of Philadelphia says "I can call to mind only three rules, and they are applicable to the fight against all other diseases as well as infantile paralysis. They are, cleanliness, fresh air, and good food."

There are a few additional helps, the elimination of fear, attention to the bowels and adjustment of the spinal column. If these precautions are observed, the spread of infantile paralysis will be reduced to a minimum.—The Elmira Advertiser.

Unsigned Complaints To Dr. Hall To Be Consigned to Wastebasket.

Anonymous statements in the form of complaints have been received very frequently by the local health officer, Dr. A. L. Hall. The nature of the complaints have been in the form of a prejudice against some one else. No names were signed to the post cards and letters and therefor Dr. Hall states that no attention will be given them. Complaints coming with names signed will receive attention, otherwise they will be cast aside.

The doctor stated this morning that he had been bothered lately by telephone calls from people not wishing to give their names. Letters and post cards have been received abundantly of late, with the signature of "A Citizen," or "Neighbor." These people will not get results from such missiles according to Dr. Hall's statement this morning.

All of these communications have been in the form of an unsanitary complaint concerning some other person's dwelling or property.

"BILLY" SUNDAY LEAVES SYRACUSE

YESTERDAY HE PARTICIPATED IN A BALL GAME AT FOURTH LAKE.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 24—Still flushed with triumph at his feat of banging out a single and scoring the winning run in a five inning ball game at Fourth Lakes yesterday afternoon, Billy Sunday today left the mountain camp of D. M. Edwards, of Syracuse, and for the next two days will tour the Thousand Islands. Friday night he will leave for Philadelphia, and from there goes to Ocean Grove, N. J., for a few days revival.

Billy's life during the past few days has been full of pleasant surprises. Yesterday he took his first ride in a motor and it was a regular motor boat, the Naiad, classed as one of the fastest of its kind in the world. Billy declared she was a "hummer." He took one trip and then insisted on taking another.

Billy is at the camp of D. M. Edwards as the guest of the Billy Sunday Business Men's Club, of Syracuse and practically every evening meal is turned into an informal meeting of the club with a few words by the evangelist.

The greatest joy that Billy has experienced since he came to the camp, however, came yesterday afternoon when he got inta a baseball game between his team and a team composed of campers at Rocky inlet.

The game was a tieless affair until the fifth inning. With two out in the later part of this session Billy dropped a dinky single over first, stole second and third and came home a second later when Dan Edwards lammed out a single. It was a hot battle before 300 fans, which included "Ma" Sunday and her daughter Helen. The opponents of the Sunday team were an aggregation of college and semi-pros and this was the first game they have lost this season. Billy played center field.

THREE SCORE AND FIFTEEN

Mr. N. J. Taft Celebrates Birthday Anniversary.

My Seventy-fifth Anniversary.

Three-fourths of a hundred years, do you say,
Is the time I have lived since my natal day?
Well, I scarce can believe that your reckoning's true,
Better run those figures once more through;
For I feel much younger than that, understand.
My heart's still strong, and so is my hand,
My hair's not white, nor my eyes grown dim,
I can hear very well and I've lots of vim.
If you don't believe it just let me race
With a fellow that is half my years, and the pace
I'll set for him to follow will show
I'm as full of pep as a mountain doe.

Yes, the years hang lightly o'er my head
Though more'n three-score and ten have fled.
I've not worried much as I went along;
Instead I've kept cheerful and sung a song.
When the road was rough and the clouds hung low
I just plodded on, content to know
That a smoother path would be reached some day
And the sun would shine again on my way.
Why worry over winds that never blow?
Why cross the bridges before they show?
Such foolishness always turns grey the hair
And wrinkles the brow that ought to be fair.

But I'm not going to take to myself all the praise.
For the strength vouchsafed through these many days;
The Lord my helper has been since my youth,
He's girded me round with his buckler of truth,
And fulfilled so sweetly his promise to me:
"As thy days are on earth, so thy strength e'er shall be."
Then he helped me to choose a good partner in life,
A woman whose proven a most noble wife;
"For richer, for poorer, for better, for worse,"
She said she'd stand by me through blessing or curse,
And true to her pledge she has been till this hour;
How much I owe to her gentle power.

Two children God gave us to enrich our lives,
And well they've repaid all the sacrifice
That we've made to uprear them to manhood's estate,
Where now they stand forth midst the worthy and great,
Both workers, both bound everywhere to maintain
The good name of Taft, as links in a chain
That binds them to ancestors rugged and true,
Patriots all 'neath the red, white and blue,
They stand close beside us, like Aaron and Hur,
Upholding our hands in the battle's fierce whir;
Fresh courage we take as we look on their forms,
And banish all fear of life's oncoming storms.

So you see why I question your word when you say
That this is my three-score and fifteenth birthday.
But accept it I must, to be truthful and fair;
'41 was the year of my birth, they declare,
And adding to this four-score minus five
Will make up the number, sure as you're alive,
Of 1916—this year of God's grace—
To which we have come through life's strenous race.
For all of his mercies, the Lord praised be.
Hitherto as my helper he's never failed me,
And through all future life, howe'er long that may be,
I'll trust him to keep me till eternity.

And now, my dear relatives, met here today,
I thank you for all you have done 'long life's way
To add to my comfort and make my days glad;
You've lightened the burden whene'er I was sad,
And often by word and deed nobly wrought
You've shown forth the love that our Master has taught
Should subsist between those who acknowledge one God
And claim to be washed in the all-saving blood.
May the Savior o'ershadow us now and alway,
Through his grace may we all reach the perfect day,
And resplendently shine at length with God's Son,
When to each has been spoken the applaudit, "Well done."

N. J. TAFT.

The above poem was read by N. J. Taft at his seventy-fifth birthday celebration held on Tuesday afternoon at his home, 208 Pratt street. The affair was an informal one held on the lawn. Among those present, in addition to Mrs. Taft, were his two sons, the Rev. [illegible] and family of Boston, Mass., and Ernest H. Taft and family of this city, Mrs. Ovid Taft, of the West Side, and Miss Mattie Parkhouse and Mrs. Charles Conklin of Oneonta. Mr. Taft has been a lifelong resident of Fulton. He is enjoying excellent health in spite of his advanced years, and still works regularly every day as an employee of the Hunter Arms Company. He is a member of the Borrowed Time Club.

OUR NAVAL SCHOOL

Origin and Rise of the Grand Institution at Annapolis.

BANCROFT GOT IT STARTED.

He Worked For Its Establishment With Untiring Zeal, and It Was Formally Opened on Oct. 10, 1845—Our Previous Naval Schools.

We had a military academy almost half a century before we had a naval academy. It was not until the administration of President James K. Polk that the government thought it necessary to establish a naval academy at which young men could be educated for that part of our protective service.

George Bancroft was the founder of the United States Naval academy, which was at first called the Naval school. It was formally opened at Annapolis on Oct. 10, 1845. For several years prior to this effort there was a school working along similar lines at the Naval asylum in Philadelphia, where the midshipmen prepared themselves for examination and promotion.

The school was reorganized in 1850 and the course was increased from five to seven, the first and last two years to be passed at the school, the intervening years at sea. At this time the separate departments of instruction were established, a vessel was provided and annual practice cruises were instituted. In 1851 the requirements of sea service were abolished, leaving the course four consecutive years of study.

At the outbreak of the war in 1861 the Naval academy was removed to Newport, R. I., where it remained until the summer of 1865, when it was re-established at Annapolis. In 1870 the title of cadet midshipmen was substituted for midshipman, and three years later the course was increased by the addition of two years' sea service in cruising vessels, at the expiration of which the cadet midshipman returned to the Naval academy for examination in professional subjects prior to graduation.

Previous to the establishing of the Naval academy several attempts had been made to establish training schools for officers and sailors of the navy. In 1838 Captain M. C. Perry suggested a school for engineers, but little was accomplished before Bancroft called the meeting in Philadelphia which decided the establishing of the present school.

At first there was considerable of a wrangle as to where the school should be located. The site finally chosen was an old army post known as Fort Severn, located on the point of land which forms the easternmost extremity of the city of Annapolis and lies between the harbor and the Severn river. Poor as the place was in the eyes of Bancroft, he saw that it was far less likely to challenge congressional criticism than a more pretentious habitation, and besides, as the board of naval officers had said, the fact was undeniably true that it might "be enlarged and perfected at some future time."

Fort Severn was duly transferred by the war department to the navy on Aug. 15, 1845, and a fortnight afterward Secretary Bancroft published his "plan," which, together with the "regulations" subsequently prepared by Commander Buchanan, governed the workings of the school until 1850. The first superintendent of the Naval academy was Commander Franklin Buchanan.

At 11 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 10, 1845, all hands assembled in one of the recitation rooms, and the superintendent, after a brief but pointed address, in which he announced he should exact rigid compliance with all laws, orders and regulations, declared the school open. The old buildings at the ancient army post at Annapolis, where the midshipmen began to receive instruction, had been termed by Secretary Bancroft "a modest shelter for the pupils," and it is said that they certainly deserved no more complimentary description.

Mr. Bancroft at once began plans to have the academy more commodiously housed, and he asked congress for an appropriation of $28,000 to be expended for repairs, improvements and instructions at Fort Severn, Annapolis. The secretary brought all his diplomacy and skill to bear, and at last had the profound satisfaction of receiving the appropriation by an ample majority and of seeing the naval school of the United States then become duly organized by law.

Thus ended the long fight for it. Three days after the bill became a law Secretary Bancroft directed the superintendent to enlarge the buildings and construct new ones sufficient to accommodate 100 midshipmen. This small beginning was the foundation of the present large and effective institution, which trains the sailors in a way equal to that furnished by any other country in the world.—Philadelphia Press.

Train Your Dog to Wipe His Feet.

A puppy can easily be taught to wipe his feet on the doormat when entering a house, and the habit once formed is seldom broken. The modus operandi is simple. Every time the dog is brought to the door the command is given, "Wipe your feet." The trainer then lifts each paw in succession and pulls it twice across the mat. In a few days the dog will be wiping his own feet.—Good Housekeeping.

JACKSON'S INAUGURATION.

Unwelcomed by Adams, but the People Made Things Pretty Lively.

It was on Feb. 11, the day the electoral votes were counted, that Jackson arrived in Washington and took up his residence at Gadsby's, an inn famous in stage coaching days. He declined to call upon President Adams, implying that he could not bring himself to touch the hand of a man who had attained office through unworthy means. He busied himself with the office seekers, who rushed to Washington in incredible numbers, likewise avoiding Adams to flock around the power that was to be. Adams, resenting this breach of etiquette, took no official or social notice of his successor and left the city on the 3d of March, neither he nor any member of his cabinet remaining to welcome Jackson to office.

On the morning of March 4 those fortunate to secure a commanding position on Capitol hill looked down upon Pennsylvania avenue alive with carts and carriages full of women and children, their male escorts walking beside them. At last a small company of men was seen marching compactly through this crowd up the middle of the avenue, one tall figure holding his hat, while the wind played through his willful gray locks. There was something military in the sight, something most unmilitary in the rabble of people shouting themselves hoarse in acclaim of the spare, erect figure. It was an expression of popular will and popular trust that gripped the heart and sent an ache to the throats even of those who feared the "Tennessee barbarian" and his host.

After taking the oath of office Jackson returned to the White House on horseback, followed indiscriminately by white and black, rich and poor, men, women and children, who swarmed over the lawn and through the rooms of the executive mansion, where no police provision had been made for such an onslaught. The courageous old warrior was forced that day to do what he seldom did. He retreated and sought refuge in his old quarters at Gadsby's. Current rumor had it that a quantity of china and cut glass to the value of several thousand dollars was broken in an attempt to get refreshments to the multitude, and finally great tubs of punch were carried out in front of the house, but that "hogsheads would not have been enough."—Helen Nicolay in Century.

BOILING WATER.

It Is Not Always Hot and Sometimes May Be Barely Heated.

If you scald yourself with the teakettle you are apt to think that boiling water is a pretty hot proposition. But boiling water is not always very hot water, and this is the way it happens.

When water boils ordinarily it is because great heat has separated the tiny particles of the water, forcing upward and outward in lively bubbles the air which is contained in them. This is done in spite of the downward pressure of the atmosphere. After the water has become hot enough to boil it can get no hotter, because the air escapes as fast as it is sufficiently heated to do so.

There are places on the earth where the pressure of the atmosphere upon the water is so slight that it requires but little heat to push apart the particles and set free the air bubbles which are confined in the water, so it begins to boil before it becomes very hot. It ought hardly to be called cold water, perhaps, but it is certainly far from being as hot as ordinarily boiling water. This state of things is found on all high mountain tops, as the atmosphere grows weaker and its pressure less as one ascends.

A man traveling at a great elevation in the Andes mountains put some potatoes in a pot of water over a hot fire. The water began to boil almost immediately, but the potatoes did not cook. All the afternoon and all the night the water bubbled and boiled, but still the potatoes were not cooked. The boiling water was not hot enough.

Humbled Arrogance.

"That did me more good than anything that has happened in a long time."

"What did?"

Her Saddest Hour.

"A woman's saddest hour," said the amateur poet, "is that in which she finds her first gray hair."

"Not necessarily," his wife replied. "It may be the hour in which she learns that the man she jilted when she met the failure whom she married has become a millionaire."—Life.

A Slight Omission.

The Scrap Book

Ruined His Climax.

It used to be the annual custom of Mr. Ledger, proprietor of the London Era and a clever journalist, to entertain the theatrical celebrities of the day at dinner and to commemorate the occasion by some Lucullan freak.

He once had eighty strawberry plants carefully nurtured in pots so that at dessert he might say to his guests, each opposite a blooming strawberry plant, "Now, my dear friends, gather your own fruit."

The dinner had progressed finely to the dessert when the service seemed slow. Ledger cried to his man:

"Come, come! The dessert!"

"In a minute, sir," was the reply. "They've nearly finished picking the strawberries!"—London Globe.

The Right Road.

The right road is a long road,
And at times it may be rough;
But don't leave it for the wrong road
That is paved with sham and bluff.
And don't mistake the smiling
Of the men who travel there;
Or the gold that they are piling
As a sign that all is fair.

For beneath the jewels shining
And the pleasures they possess,
And behind their hours of wining,
There is fearful loneliness.
Though the road that they are taking
Seems a splendid thoroughfare,
Hearts for honest joys are aching,
And the lives they live are bare.

There are rough spots in the right road,
There are dangers grim to face;
And it's often not a bright road,
But it's free from all disgrace.
And it's lined with friends to love you,
And its joys are of the best;
And when stars come out above you,
With a conscience clear you rest.

He Quit His Kidding.

"I've quit kidding," said a business man. "That kind of chickens come home to roost and can't be driven away again, I've found to my sorrow.

"The way of it was this: A few days ago I took my wife to a well known restaurant for luncheon. We got a table next to that occupied by a pair of fellows whom I have 'kidded' unmercifully in times past. In a moment of temporary mental aberration I introduced these fellows, both good friends of mine, who can take a joke and never wince under it, however severe it may be on them, to my wife.

"The quicker witted of the two, seeing an opportunity to get square with me for the last joke I played on him, said without a smile: 'I am delighted to make your acquaintance, Mrs. B—. The last woman Mr. B— introduced as his wife had red hair.'

"When I tell you that my wife has black hair you can readily understand the position this placed me in. As a matter of fact I am not out of it yet, as she more than half believed that I had met these fellows with a red headed woman whom I passed off as my wife. I don't know whether I will ever be able to convince her that they were 'kidding,' so I've stopped it."—Philadelphia Press.

Family Pride.

The following story is told of the mayor of a western city:

A small boy who afterward proved to be a nephew of one of the mayor's stenographers was wandering about in the city hall when one of the officials there happened upon him.

"Well, sonny," inquired the man genially, "for whom are you looking?"

"For my Aunt Kate."

"Can't you find her?"

"I can't seem to."

"And don't you know where she is?"

"Not exactly. She's in here somewhere, though, and I know that the mayor works in her office."—Harper's Magazine.

No Sale.

Notwithstanding the fact that the ventures of native students into the labyrinths of English are sometimes adventures indeed, nevertheless it is the mistakes of the Americans who attempt to express themselves prematurely in other languages which most appeal to our risibles. The Spanish word for sons is "hijos," for figs "higos." One can therefore easily understand how the following conversation might easily have taken place. A lady went to a grocery store to buy figs. The conversation actually was as follows:

"Have you any sons?"

"Yes," replied the storekeeper pleasantly.

"White ones?"

To this the man replied in the affirmative.

"Very well, I will take one pound, if you please," said the lady.

The storekeeper is said to have replied that they were not for sale, and certainly not by the pound.—World Outlook.

Where the Splinter Came From.

Certain members of the house party were describing the accidents that had happened to them during their various careers. Adventures by flood, fire and field had all been well received, and De Sappleby, eager for fame, thought it was his turn.

"D'you know," he said, "I had a very painful experience once. I ran a confounded splinter quite half an inch long right under my finger nail, don't you know."

"Really, Mr. de Sappleby," said a maiden of the party. "How did you do it?"

"Well," he said, "it happened like this." As he spoke he unconsciously raised his hand and scratched his forehead.

"Oh, I see," she interrupted sweetly. "How very careless of you!"

HE WHO WROTE IT

The Man Who Penned the Declaration of Independence.

WORK OF TIMOTHY MATLACK.

He Was a Clerk In the Continental Congress When That Immortal Document Was Adopted and Was Also the Finest Writer In the Country.

Who wrote the Declaration of Independence? Thomas Jefferson, of course; every one knows that. But who held the pen and formed the letters on the great piece of parchment that the members of the Continental congress signed? It is one of the largest official papers in existence—one skin of parchment nearly three feet long and more than two feet wide. The writing is nearly twice the normal size and is unusually handsome and clear.

The secretary who was ordered to promulgate the work was Charles Thomson, a man of high character, who had been the principal of a school at New Castle, Del., and an active patriot. The first congress chose him as secretary in 1774, and he held the office until the Continental congress passed out of existence on March 2, 1789. During all those fifteen years it was only on rare occasions that any other hand than his wrote in the journal.

One of the clerks in Thomson's office in 1775 and 1776 was Timothy Matlack, who died at Holmesburg, Pa., in 1829, when he was ninety-nine years of age.

To carry out the order of the congress that the Declaration be proclaimed, Thomson needed more than a score of copies, for he had to send it to every one of the states and to the army. So, to save time, he did not attempt to have any copies written off with the pen, but sent the original draft, which the congress had passed, to the official printer, John Dunlap. The following morning the printed copies were in Thomson's hands. They were printed on one side of the paper on large sheets eighteen inches long and fourteen and a half inches wide in the form known as broadsides.

It was from one of those copies that Philadelphia first heard the Declaration read, and it was one of them that became the official copy, for Thomson had not copied the Declaration even into the journal of the congress before he gave it to the printer; but when he wrote the journal for July 4 he left a blank space for the Declaration, and the next day, with two wafers of red wax, he fastened in the printed broadside.

I have said that sometimes an entry was made in the journal of the congress by another hand than Thomson's. The first of those occasions was on June 12, 1775, when Timothy Matlack recorded a resolution to set aside a day for fasting and prayer to avert the desolating calamities that seemed to be impending. Matlack had been appointed a clerk in Thomson's office on May 15, and five days later, on May 20, he wrote out the most important document that the congress had issued up to that time—the commission to George Washington to be commander in chief of the American army. The identification of the penmanship of the commission with that of the entry in the journal and of both with an autograph letter of Matlack's that is among the papers of the Continental congress is certain.

Probably there was not at that time a man in the country who was Matlack's equal as a penman. Fortunately, Matlack was still a clerk in Thomson's office when the Declaration of Independence was ordered to be engrossed for final signature, and the task of copying it was assigned to him. He copied from the printed broadside. That is clearly shown by the heading of the broadside, "In Congress, July 4, 1776," which is reproduced in the written Declaration in the same form of lettering.

A few years ago some of the officials in the library of congress, who knew that Matlack was the best penman employed by Thomson, made a comparison of General Washington's commission, which was known to have been written by him, with the Declaration.

The first peculiar letter in the commission is the capital "N" in New Hampshire, and we find its counterpart in "Nature's" in the second line of the body of the Declaration. The graceful flourish at the top of the "T" in the word "To" in the commission is repeated in the second of the sentences beginning "That" in the Declaration. In the word "offer" in the commission there is a marked peculiarity in the double "f." The first "f" is made like the old fashioned long "s." It appears in the word "effect" in the Declaration, then in "suffer" and "sufferable." That is the most noteworthy peculiarity in Matlack's writing. The capital "D" in the commission and in the last line of the Declaration, the capital "B" in the commission and in the word "British" in the Declaration, the whole word "Congress" in both documents—those and other details established beyond a doubt that the writer of the great Declaration was Timothy Matlack.

In 1824, when John Quincy Adams was secretary of state, a skilled engraver, William J. Stone, made a copperplate facsimile of the Declaration. That is the only one that has ever been made. It was distributed by order of congress and is familiar to us all. It is a perfect reproduction in every particular of the original document and is a fine specimen of the engraver's art.—Gaillard Hunt in Youth's Companion.

BIBLE DECEIVES CENSOR.

Nurse Tells of Famine In Turkey; Cholera Also Prevalent.

Using Biblical quotations on a postcard to deceive the Turkish censor, a missionary nurse "got across" a story of famine, pestilence and personal danger confronting American missionaries in Turkey.

Ostensibly the card received by a friend and published by the American board of commissioners for foreign missions is just a word of greeting. Its wording is:

"We shall very soon have to test the first part of the twentieth verse of the fifth chapter of Job and still sooner, even now, of the last of Ps. xci, 3. What a blessing to have a God who is true and able. Lots of love to you all. Dr. Hamlin's famous mixture in demand here."

Job v, 20, reads, "In famine we shall redeem thee from death."

Ps. xci, 3, reads, "For He shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler and from the noisome pestilence."

"Dr. Hamlin's mixture" is a medicine used in the treatment of cholera.

Bees attacked by the disease quit work, go off to a corner of the hive and lie there until they die, says Mr. Shaw.

HOW AUTOS CAN OBTAIN GREATER MILEAGE TO THE GALLON. —Gasoline is elastic. A gallon will drive a car almost any distance—the record is nearly ninety miles—says a writer in the current number of Motor Print. This is food for thought for those who are worrying over the high price of fuel. By taking a few simple precautions it is possible for every owner to reduce greatly the consumption per mile.

If the car is run too slowly or fast there is fuel waste. Fifteen miles per hour is a good average.

Until now the average motorist has been careless about the amount of fuel be used because it was comparatively cheap and was a small percentage of the total car expense.

Make sure that you are getting all the gasoline that you pay for. Some owners are not. Watch the counter on the pump to see that it registers the correct number of gallons and that the operator does not tamper with it while filling your tank. Furthermore, be certain that you obtain full measure. Some gasoline pumps leak; others have been "fixed" to give a short gallon. It is almost impossible to find the error by examining the pump, so it is necessary to check the amount in your tank by frequent measurement, or, if this is not feasible, it is advisable occasionally to buy a gallon in a can of your own and measure the quantity when you get home.

Most cars can be operated with a leaner mixture without affecting the production of power. Some motorists may even deem it advisable to run with a very lean adjustment, notwithstanding a reduction in hill climbing ability or speed. The exact adjustment must be determined by trial.

An auxiliary device which may be attached to the manifold and operated from the dash should be used. It will be found helpful when running with light load along a smooth, level road or downhill. When the motor is used as a brake the suction on the carburetor is reduced to a minimum by opening the auxiliary air device wide.

The car should run easily. All the bearings should be well greased and free. It should be possible to push the car without difficulty with one hand on a smooth, level surface. The importance of reducing friction to the minimum is shown by the fact that a racing car in good condition may be pushed with one finger.

Costume In White Serge

Misses' costume of white serge featuring the new overdress effect. It is trimmed with stitching and buttons.

Better results are obtained with white serge than with any other material in making inexpensive costumes because it not only wears well, but combines smartly with all of the modish materials of the season. The frock which features the overdress arrangement bids fair to be the dominant feature of early Fall. A splendid type of the new style is pictured here. The costume has a sleeveless underbody and a three-piece foundation skirt. The overdress is in one piece, closing at the center front with a round collar to finish the V-shaped neck. The fullness of the overskirt is held in by a straight belt of self-material.

In medium size the costume requires 4 yards 54-inch material, with 1⅞ yard 36-inch lining 36 inches wide for the underbody and foundation gores.

The serge and the lining are both folded before the ... sections of the pattern are placed into position. The front and back gores of the overdress are laid directly on the lengthwise fold of serge, as is also the flounce for the piecing. The flounce comes next to the front gore and if the cutting guide is carefully noted it will be seen how the collar and facing also can be sandwiched in along the lengthwise fold of material. The sleeve, sleeveband, pocket and vest are placed on a lengthwise thread of the goods.

The back of the lining and the front gore of the foundation skirt are placed on a lengthwise fold of the lining material, while the front of the waist and the back gore of the foundation are laid on a lengthwise thread.

If the overdress is desired closed at the center front, cut off the upper edge of front on double "oo" perforations. If desired with open front, cut out along indicating small "o" perforations. Perforations are also made for shortening the sleeves and the skirt, if preferred.

Buttons add much to the effectiveness of the dress, being used to trim the front and the pockets. No decoration is more fashionable this season and never was the variety in buttons greater.

Cessation of War Not Likely to Bring Enforced Idleness to American Labor

By CHARLES E. CARPENTER, Manufacturer, Philadelphia

THAT the industries of the nations of the warring countries have been disorganized and it is going to take a very large amount of time to reorganize is undoubtedly true.

THIS IS GOING TO RELIEVE THE INDUSTRIES OF THE UNITED STATES FROM COMPETITION OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES FOR A CONSIDERABLE PERIOD AFTER THE WAR.

It is going to be in a measure an artificial tariff, and I cannot see how that is going to enforce great idleness in America.

There is only one thing that can make for hard times, and that is to take from the working class their purchasing power, and while that may come in spots and will come in spots in the readjustment, while there may be temporary general conditions of dull times due to clumsiness of the readjustment machinery, I HAVE YET TO SEE A SOUND ARGUMENT PRESENTED WHICH WOULD LEAD ME TO BELIEVE THAT THERE IS ANY LONG PERIOD OF ENFORCED IDLENESS OF LABOR AHEAD.

There are too many who confuse the tumbling of the stock market and the lowering of the price of raw materials as indicative of commercial depression, when, as a matter of fact, commerce thrives better when there is the least amount of capital deflected from productive enterprises to stock gambling and when raw materials are at a point which will enable the consumer to purchase the greatest quantity of finished product for the dollar.

TOMATO SALADS.—Tomato and Celery Salad.—Cook one-half can of tomatoes, three cloves, one-half a bay leaf, one teaspoonful of salt and a little red pepper for fifteen minutes. Add one-quarter of a box of gelatin softened in one-half cupful of cold water. Stir until dissolved and strain into a border mold. When firm turn out on a bed of lettuce leaves and fill the center with finely cut celery, apple and broken English walnuts moistened with boiled dressing.

Tomato Jelly and Nut Salad.—Soak one-half box of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water for fifteen minutes. Take one can of tomatoes, season highly, boil and strain, adding enough hot water, if necessary, to make three cupfuls. In this, while boiling, dissolve the gelatin. Turn out into two small molds to give a cuplike form. When cold place on lettuce leaves filled with sliced celery and broken pecans or walnut meats and serve with delicious salad dressing.

Piccalilli.—Slice a peck of green tomatoes in an earthern or agate jar. Sprinkle over them one teacupful of salt and let stand over night, then pour most of the brine off and add three pints of cider vinegar, three cupfuls sugar, tablespoonful each of ground cloves and cinnamon, one cupful mustard, one of grated horseradish, teaspoonful red pepper and four large onions. Cook in a porcelain or agate kettle till soft, keeping it well stirred. Put in jars or in one large stone pot and put in cellar.

Tomato and Cheese Salad.—Cut tomatoes into thick slices after peeling. Between each two put a thin layer of American cheese, spreading it with mayonnaise before adding upper slice. Arrange on lettuce and add a teaspoonful of mayonnaise on top of each just before serving.

Tomato Salad With Cream.—Slice tomatoes in rather thick slices into salad bowl; sprinkle with salt, pepper and a little sugar if desired. Chill and before serving put over them whipped cream and sprinkle with chopped olives.

Tomato and Peanut Salad.—Pour boiling water over large, smooth tomatoes, take off the skins and chill. When perfecty cold scoop out the centers and fill with chopped peanuts mixed with mayonnaise or boiled dressing. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Citron Preserves.

Pare citron and cut in slices one and one-half inch thick and about three inches long. To each pound of citron allow one pound of white sugar. First make your sirup, using one pint of water to every ten pounds of sugar; skim well, then add fruit; boil one hour, or until tender; do not stir; slice two lemons thin, extracting the seeds; put this in the preserves with two ounces of root ginger whites. Do not boil long after adding lemon. This is excellent if made carefully. If you cannot obtain citron, watermelon rind can be substituted, but soak overnight in alum water and boil in clear water twenty minutes next morning.

HANDICAP TO TESREAU WHEN FACING MAJORS

"The first time I ever saw a professional ball team," said Jeff. Tesreau, "was when the Browns came down to Fredericksburg, Mo., to play an amateur team for which I pitched in 1907. They beat us, 26 to 6.

"Later when I was in the International league Joe Yeager, formerly with the Browns and then with Montreal, recognized me as the kid who had pitched against St. Louis that day.

"'Do you know the reason we hit you so hard?' he asked.

"'No,' I replied.

JACK KELLY NEW IRON MAN; STROKES ON THREE CREWS

Jack Kelly, the crack senior single sculler of the Vesper Boat club, joined the ranks of the athletic "iron men" recently by stroking three winning crews and also winning the senior single sculls race in the Schuylkill navy regatta, rowed over a mile and a quarter straight away course on the Schuylkill river. Kelly rowed five and a quarter miles in about five hours, stroking the senior double sculls crew, senior centipede and senior eight oared shell crews.

M'CONNELL SOME TRAVELER.

Cub Twirler Has Been In and Out of Minor Baseball Leagues.

Few Chicago baseball fans think of George McConnell, the elongated pitcher of the Cubs, as a veteran. A New York writer reminds the world that this hurler was a member of the Yankees about ten years and has been in and out of the minor leagues several times.

"Whenever the roll call of baseball's grand old men is sounded the names we hear most often are Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson, Napoleon Lajoie, Eddie Plank and Mordecai Brown. These five will average about thirty-nine years," says Sid Mercer in the New York Globe. "Nobody has proposed George McConnell for membership in this exclusive circle, yet "Long George" is verging on thirty-nine, and he is still pitching good ball.

"McConnell missed fame because his long career has led him into the minor leagues several times. It must have been about ten years ago since he first joined the Yankees. He played two engagements here in New York and filled in the gaps with International league bookings.

"After drifting about aimlessly for several seasons McConnell finally entered the National league via Chicago. Roger Bresnahan tried to attach a can to 'Long George,' who promptly jumped to the Chicago Federals. His pitching helped Tinker to a pennant, and when the Chicago teams were amalgamated McConnell was not forgotten. He can still go some."

MATTY PLAYED FIRST BASE.

Great Pitcher Was Given Chance to Show His Wares at Initial Station.

Matty is always there with a laugh when he is asked about his narrow escape from becoming a first baseman instead of a pitcher. His conversion into a first baseman, almost, was due simply to the fact that he had happened to hit a couple of home runs.

It immediately occurred to the colossal brains then handling the Giants that a man who batted home runs ought to be in there every day instead of only once or twice a week, and so Matty was notified that he would have to take up first basing. Before the change of plans had gone very far there was a change in managers, and Matty returned to pitching without any further talk about his playing first base.

COBB IS TO SHUN GOLF.

Agrees With Matty That Hitting Is Likely to Be Affected.

Tyrus Cobb of the Detroit Tigers is another baseball star who has decided not to mix golf with his regular business during the ball season. Dispatches recently printed declared that Christy Mathewson had reached the same conclusion.

Cobb holds that the golf stroke is so much different from the batting swing that his hitting was likely to be affected.

WALCOTT NOW A PIN BOY.

Once Famous Fighter "Setting 'Em Up" In Boston Alley.

Joe Walcott, once famous prize fighter, is earning a scant living setting up pins in a Boston bowling alley. Since the day Walcott's hand was maimed by a bullet he has had a hard row to hoe.

After the wound healed one of the fingers stiffened out straight, making it impossible for him to don a boxing glove.

Fans Roasted Smith, Now They Praise Him

"HE don't know a ball game from a circus!"

Members of the Cleveland anvil chorus, all atune, were singing this dirge last fall, urging the immediate return of Elmer Smith to the sticks. "Smittie" didn't impress those cash customers who expect a busher to horn into exclusive company and immediately develop a penchant for fence breaking. He could hit pretty fair, but he was a mediocre outfielder.

Did Lee Fohl send the youngster back for further seasoning? He did not. Smittie studied, mastered big league ways and made good.

Any young man who packs this punch doesn't belong in Waterbury, where the Cleveland fans would have consigned him.

Smith is one-half of the Cleveland right field. He breaks into the lineup and in the cleanup hitting position when right handed pitchers oppose the Indians. His clouting percentage was compiled against the best slab artists in the league, for every club has been putting on extra speed while trying to throttle the suddenly refreshed Ohioans. When southpaws grace the peak Smith warms the bench, Bob Roth going to right field.

FREDDIE WELSH TO RISK TITLE

Lightweight Champion and White Clash Labor Day.

BATTLE SHOULD BE HUMMER

Welshman Will Have His Hands Full With Chicago Boy—The Latter Is One of Hardest Hitters In the Game Today.

After a month of inactivity for the boxing gentry the sport will thrive once again. But the expected activity will be but a circumstance to the condition that will exist if one event transpires before the busy season sets in.

Said event would be the dethroning of Freddy Welsh as lightweight champion of this war plagued universe, and it is not unlikely that we will pay homage to a new champion in a short time, for Welsh has been trapped into risking his coveted title in Colorado on Labor day.

Charley White, Chicago's noted walloper, is to be Welsh's opponent on this occasion, and it may be Welsh's last appearance as a ring gladiator, for a decisive defeat would end his inglorious reign as champion.

We say "decisive defeat" advisedly. White must score a decisive victory in order to gain the favor of the referee, Billy Roche, not that Roche has any personal dislike for White, but because Roche is in the way of Freddy Welsh. Billy has been Welsh's portable referee ever since Freddy won the title from Willie Ritchie on July 7, 1914.

Roche to Referee.

Roche has refereed for Welsh in New York, in Boston, in Canada—in fact, in pretty nearly every town in which he has fought during the last two years.

It was only on condition that Roche be the referee that Welsh finally acquiesced to the Sept. 4 date. White will have to knock out Welsh in order to lift the title. The Chicagoan will have to trounce the Briton so severely that Roche will be apprehensive of robbing White of his justly won honors. A slight margin at the end of the twenty rounds will get White nothing better than a draw. Rest assured of that, you White rooters.

Welsh and White have already battled three times since the Pontypridd dancer became champion. Each bout was of ten rounds' duration, with no official decision attached. The popular verdict favored White twice and Welsh once.

Twice during these bouts White had Welsh verging on a knockout. In the first round of their Milwaukee bout White stunned Welsh with the very first punch, and Frederick was wabbly for the rest of the fight. White, however, lacked sufficient finishing power or the knowledge to finish a befuddled champion and let the opportunity of a lifetime slip through his fingers.

At Brighton Beach a year ago White had Welsh in sore straits in the seventh round. But again Welsh's generalship saved him. White, instead of standing off and measuring the tottering champion, rushed headlong into Welsh, flailing both hands at random. This afforded Welsh the chance to clinch until his cobwebbed brain cleared. Once again White passed up a glittering opportunity.

Charley guarantees to do better next time. The Chicagoan realizes it will be his final chance at the crown while Welsh is champion, and if he ever has Freddy in bewilderment on Labor day White is going in for a knockout or be knocked out himself in the attempt.

White has everything to gain and nothing to lose in this bout. A victory—if he can convince Roche he is the winner—will mean a title and the attendant big money and glory. A defeat and White's status among the lightweights will be just what it is today.

White Is Hard Hitter.

White is undeniably the hardest hitting lightweight in the game today. His record bears out this statement. For awhile, up to less than a month ago, it was feared that White's wallop had become rusty and that he could not deliver with the effective snap of old. But Charley dispelled all these doubts when he virtually knocked out Mat Wells, the former English champion, in five rounds. Wells was floored thrice in the fourth round and was sagging to the floor in the fifth when his manager humanely threw a sponge into the ring in acknowledgment of defeat.

Wells had never been floored, and with an alien referee in the ring Freddy feared a "job." Had Billy Roche been present the bout would have gone through as per schedule despite the sparse assemblage of spectators.

This time Welsh will have his own referee, so it is up to White to dispense with the judgment of the arbitrator by flattening Welsh with a good old left hook to the chin. A finishing body blow might afford Welsh the chance to claim a foul—and get away with it.

STANDARD FOR GRAIN SHIPPERS

WILL EFFECT OSWEGO COUNTY FARMERS.

Oswego county grain shippers are vitally interested in the United States Grain Standards Act which gives the Secretary of Agriculture authority to establish official standards applicable to grain shipped in interstate or foreign commerce. The new law has just gone into effect.

The act authorizes the secretary to investigate the handling and grading of grain and to establish as soon as may be, standards for corn, wheat, rye, oats, barley, flaxseed and other grains. Not less than ninety days public notice must be given in advance of the date on which any such standard becomes effective.

Whenever such standards are established for any grain, the act forbids the shipment or delivery for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce originating in the United States, of any such grain which is sold, offered for sale or consigned for sale by grade, unless it is inspected and graded by a licensed inspector, either at the place of shipment or at a point in transit, or at the destination. In case no licensed inspector is located either at the point of shipment or at the destination the grain may be shipped without inspection, in which event either party to the transaction may refer any dispute as to the grade to the secretary of agriculture.

The act permits the shipment in interstate or foreign commerce of grain sold by sample or by type, or under any description which is not false and misleading and does not include any of the terms of the official grain standards.

WHAT'S A MERE 103 IN THE TEXAS SHADE TO THIS MILITIAMAN?

(By United Press)

Tokyo, August 24—American militiamen drilling on the Mexican border in terrific heat may cool off when they hear that 2,000 Japanese soldiers marched and maneuvred for twelve days in Formosa and the Percadores with the mercury mounted as high as 130 degrees Fahrenheit. And only three cases of sunstroke were reported during the entire period.

The first nine days were spent in constant marching, the troops covering 100 miles. Because of the heat, the soldiers were permitted to wear any clothing they pleased. Some wore helmets, some straw hats, some a knitted underskirt or a thin kimono.

The maneuvres were deliberately held in the intense heat, in order to give the experts a chance to study the best way to handle men under such conditions.

Bremen to Land at New London?

Liner Willehad is There to Meet Her.

(By United Press)

New London, Conn., August 25—Nosing her way through the fog while a little tug puffed and snorted along side the North German liner, Willehad swung into a pier of the State Ocean Steamship Company here today, adding another chapter to the German defiance of Allied warship patrol off the Atlantic Coast. Custom officials believe the coming of the Willehad forecast the early arrival of the merchant submarine, Bremen, from the German port of that name. The Willehad made the trip from Boston without escort, coming through Cape Cod canal and then south to the open sea. The liner traversed more than fifty miles of the journey through the zone in which she was subjected to attack or capture had an enemy ship sighted her. She went beyond the three mile limit and was not molested.

It is believed here that the Willehad is to serve in the same capacity for the Bremen as the Neckar in turn did at Baltimore for the Deutschland. The Bremen's cargo will probably be transferred to the Willehad which will act as a mother ship for the submarine, housing her crew while in port and also protecting the submarine from an enemy attack.

HEALTH OFFICER HAS POWER

ALL SCHOOLS MAY BE CLOSED BY OFFICIALS IF DEEMED ADVISABLE.

The health authorities have unlimited powers to keep the public schools closed. The following letter was received this morning by Health Officer Hall and what action will be taken depends wholly on the outcome of local conditions:

NEW YORK
State Department of Health
ALBANY
August 24, 1916

School Letter to Health Doctors:

Dear Doctor: You may have already been asked by the educational authorities of your municipality as to the propriety of opening the schools or you no doubt soon will be. It seems to us that in counties where no cases have occurred that there is no reason why the schools should not plan to open on the usual date, unless a number of cases should develop in your municipality prior to the date of the opening of the school when further action should be considered.

There are a number of counties in which the disease has existed in widespread epidemic form and in which it would not seem advisable to open the schools in any of the municipalities for several weeks or at least until the epidemic has in some degree abated. In large cities where there have been only one or two cases it would seem to be entirely safe to have the schools open under extra health supervision, or perhaps safer to postpone the opening for a fortnight giving opportunity for those children who have returned to the city from infected districts time to go through the incubation period before opening the schools.

As in many other conditions, it is not possible for this department to recommend a uniform procedure as the conditions vary so much in the different localities. I would be glad to advise you or the educational authorities in any individual case.

Yours truly,
HERMANN M. BIGGS,
Commissioner of Health.

HARD TIMES FOR THE BOY

"POOR LITTLE RICH BOY" MUST GO BACK TO STEPFATHER'S MOTHER TODAY.

(By United Press)

Nyack, N. Y., August 25—William Crossman Lee, "the poor little rich boy," who cried and said he was "tired of being dragged around the county" by relatives interested in the $2,000,000 estate he inherits from the late William Crossman, coffee king, will shift guardians again here today.

Supreme Court Justice Tompkins decided that De Witt H. Lyon, Port Chester lawyer, must return the boy to Mrs. Emma Kenyon Lee, mother of Frederick T. Lee, of White Plains, stepfather of the boy.

The battle for possession of the two million dollar boy has waged hotly for more than a year in the New York courts between William Mills, Jr., of California, father of the boy and Lee, his stepfather. His father started seven separate actions to get the boy and the management of his estate, but lost every one.

The boy's mother, who divorced Mills and married Lee, died in New York two years ago. Testimony at the hearing said that Mills never had taken any interest in his son until he inherited the estate of the coffee king. The boy testified that his mother had remaining with his stepfather.

The lawyer, Lyon, was appointed guardian a few months ago, and the boy taken away from Lee. Lee and his mother hid the boy and were haled into court. It is expected that they will now be permitted to keep him.

SHIRT COMPANY SEEKING LEASE

Rumors are current about the streets that the Metric Shirt Company, now located in Patterson, N. J., and New York city, have sent representatives here in search of a permanent location.

These proceedings are the results of strenuous work on the part of Edward Quirk, G. C. Warner, of New York city and the local Chamber of Commerce to arrange for the concern enough labor to supply their needs.

These people, it has been found through investigation have a very good financial standing from what can be judged by their mills now located in the East, they have modern plants with complete equipment. The conditions of their plants in other cities according to data received by the local chamber are the best.

It is the intention of the concern to locate here and as soon as papers can be drawn to assure them of their site, which already has been decided upon, they will install one hundred machines for the stitching department and will employ one hundred girls and women. They also expect to enlarge their plant as fast as satisfactory help can be secured.

The fact that people residing in Fulton are not familiar with the art of shirt making makes it necessary to employ unskilled labor. They will, however increase their factory work here as soon as the help becomes familiar with this branch of work.

The firm according to reports is old and established and give as their purpose for changing location a scarcity of competent labor. They claim that providing the conditions are satisfactory other departments will be added to their factory here and it will be a question of but a short time before the entire process of shirt manufacture will be located here. These representatives expressed their desire to meet at the Chamber of Commerce office the people who have made application for positions with this concern.

PRICE OF PAPER MAY COME DOWN

TO MAKE WHITE PAPER OUT OF MARSH GRASS AND REEDS

Syracuse, N. Y., August 25—The first practical test as to whether marsh grass and reeds can be used in the manufacture of white paper will probably be made in this city.

William Heffron is negotiating for the purchase of the Montezuma marshes and the plant of the Montezuma company. Earlier experiments at this plant showed that a satisfactory fibre could be extracted that would answer all purposes for certain classes of paper, and that an abundance of material grows in the marshes in that vicinity. While this pulp would not be suitable for news print it is claimed that it makes a very excellent corrugated paper.

On account of the insufficient plant it is understood that the pioneers at this point in this business were unable to put their concern on a paying basis. The new company is understood to have plans in mind for a complete plant in which grass pulp will be utilized and corrugated paper manufactured and placed on the market. There is a good field for this product and with the men behind it predictions are made that it will be successful.

Germans Admit Loss to French.

British Advance Their Lines on 700 yd. Front.

(By F. S. Keen, United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, August 25—A successful doubled barred offensive by the Allied forces on the Somme shifted interest from the Balkan fighting to the western battle front today. The German War Office this afternoon admitted the loss of the Mauretas village to the French.

The French War Office announced that General Fouch's troops are consolidating their new position north of Mauretas only a mile and a half from the important town of Combles, the local objective of the present French advance, north of the Somme. General Haig reported to the War Office this afternoon that the British advanced their lines on the 700 yard front across the famous Leipzig redubt in heavy fighting yesterday and last night. An advance that increased the peril of the Germans caught at Theutrel and Talient village. While the fighting was goining on other British forces pushed forward several hundred yards on both sides of the road from Longueval to Bapaume.

OFFICIALS ARE ECONOMIZING

SHORTAGE OF PAPER HAVING EFFECT OF CUTTING DOWN SUPPLIES.

State officials all over the state have received orders from Albany to cut down their use of paper in every possible way in order to conserve the supply. Similar orders have been issued at Albany and are being strictly enforced.

The first effect of the shortage of paper has on the several departments and bureaus at the capital is the cutting down of some reports and documents and the utter elimination of others until the paper situation is relieved.

Officials in the various departments are also ordered to cut down the use of stationery, not only because of the increasing price but also because it is exceedingly hard to get.

All of the state departments are practicing the strictest economy both as regards the use of the material and the saving of scrap paper. It is gathered daily and baled and sold. The money from its sale reverts to the state treasury and amounts to a considerable figure a ton of scrap and waste paper from the capital building every day. All mail that is received, not required for filing purposes. All newspapers, all reports and old books, documents of all sorts which have been used merely as a reserve and many other paper scraps are being carefully gathered and baled.

There are over one hundred bureaus in the state government and many of them have their own system [illegible] the reports which are [illegible] to be printed by the state printer and turn out from week to week large quantities of data relative to their state departments. The State Education department has its own printing plant.

DR. PAGIERE BLAMES WAR FOR HIGH FOOD PRICES—RELIEF IS PRIMED.

(By United Press)

Buenos Aires, August 25—Dr. Jose Marcos Pagliere today denied the report that the Radical party soon to put its hand to the administrative machinery in Argentina has no program. The statemeent has been made by a number of their political opponents and by many radicals themselves.

Dr. Pagliere, a prominent Radical who probably will have a place in President-elect Irigoyen's cabinet, says they are mistaken.

"We Radicals," he declared today, "are men of action, with deeds, not words, for our daily motto. Personally I look forward to a new constitutional life in Argentina which will make our nationality as immovable as the rock.

"There will be more security for the people and for the stranger."

Dr. Pagliere said the Radicals will reduce the food prices.

"The European war," he said today, "has unnecessarily increased the cost of bread in Argentina to 15 1-2 cents for 2 pounds and 2 ounces. We have studied this matter and at the end of three months of experiment have disposed of much bread at eight cents and eight mills for two pounds and two ounces. This was done without the loss of a single cent. We will do the same with meat and milk very soon."

The French infantry are pressing eastward, south of Combles to pocket the Germans in much the same manner as the British are closing in upon Thiapauz.

PAPER FAMINE IS THREATENED

NO IMMEDIATE RELIEF IS IN SIGHT

The International Paper Company announces to its customers that the paper situation is such as to demand the utmost caution in the use of print paper of "news stock" as the product is known to the trade, for the next four months at least. The company states that an actual paper famine is in sight for September and warns consumers that their output must be very materially curtailed if they expect to continue the publication of their newspapers. The company emphasizes with the utmost gravity that unless publishers take immediate steps to curtail production there will not be enough paper to go around.

The International Paper Company is popularly known as "the trust" and it has been charged with organizing a "corner" in news stock. The company explicitly denies in its announcement that it has been a party to increased exportation of paper and points to the alleged fact that whereas its exports in the first months of 1915 totalled 22,059 tons, the total for the first six months of the present year totalled 20,479 tons. "This statement clearly answers and refutes any statement to the effect that The International Paper Company is exporting paper to the detriment of its domestic customers," it is declared in the statement.

As the largest producer of white paper in the country the International Paper Company's position is of great interest at the present time owing to the alleged danger that publishers may be compelled to print smaller papers or ediions, or even suspend publication entirely. For it is stated by representatives of the various paper houses that the atitude of the International will be that of all other paper manufacturers and that no matter of whom the supply is purchased, the curtailment will be the same.

The charge has been made in Congress that collusion exists among the paper manufacturers to curtail the supply and raise the price, and that advantage is being taken of an unusual situation to increase profits. An investigation has been demanded and an investigation is now in progress whereby such a probe will be made. Publishers themselves organized the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and have taken steps to correct abuses in the waste of white paper and also to save the alleged corner in "news stock" thoroughly investigated and the tacts aired before the general public. The American Newspaper Publishers Asociation has wired all members to use the most extreme caution in the use of stock, to curtail the size of editions wherever possible and to eliminate waste in every possible form. Reduction in margins is one means whereby the big publishers propose to overcome the emergency in part; but even this step according to statements submitted by the International Paper Company will not serve to meet the situation.

The International has not, however, advanced the price of paper as much as some of the independent makers and has taken care of its patrons so far. An advance was made July 1st to contract customers and new contracts were made for six months only. By some concerns the price was advanced one hundred per cent. The company advises all its customers that the available supply of white paper is constantly decreasing and that next month perhaps its supply may have to be distributed pro rata.

This would mean that each publisher would receive shipments proportionate to his contract, and would necessitate radical steps to meet the deficiency.

Just what the pro rata allotment is likely to be the company does not state.

WOMEN ROOKIES AT LAKE GENEVA LEARNING TO THINK, TALK AND WORK FOR AMERICAN IDEALS.

(By United Press)

Lake Geneva, Wis., August 17—The 150 women rookies who are here in khaki and military training so they can "think, talk and work" for American ideals have settled down to their routine duties and are making rapid headway toward military efficiency today.

These women represent the 499,850 other American women members of the Women's branch of the Navy League. They are under the direction of Mrs. Vylla Poe Wilson, relative of Edgar Allan Poe and militant Quakeress from Washington, D. C. She originated the Women's Branch of the League.

"The league so far as we are concerned has been organized little more than a year," said Mrs. Wilson today, "yet we have half a million members. Mrs. George Dewey is president, Mrs. Natalie S. Lincoln, treasurer; Miss Elizabeth Poe, general secretary; myself organizing secretary. Some of the other prominent members are Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. Alvah Willing Astor, Julia Marlowe, Mrs. Gobson Fahnestock, Mrs. Hugh L. Scott. Ninety-five American cities are represented.

"Hundreds of women wanted to join the organization but complained that they didn't know how to do anything; so we started this work.

"We know, that with seventeen million men of military age in the United States that we would never be called upon to bear arms, but we know we would be called upon for aid in many ways if this country ever goes to war, so we're preparing.

"The pledge signed by the women in the organization reads:

"'I pledge myself to think, talk and work for patriotism, Americanism and sufficient national defenses to keep the horrors of war from America's shores forever.

"'In these days of strife and peril I will strive to do my share to awaken our nation and our lawmakers to the dangers of our present undefended condition so that we may continue to dwell in peace and prosperity and may not have to mourn states desolated by war within our borders. In so far as I am able I will make my home a center of American ideals and patriotism and endeavor to teach the children in my care to cherish and revere our country and its history and to uphold its honor and fair repute in their generation.

The second term of the Lake Geneva school will begin September 1, immediately after the close of the term now in session.

FARM PRODUCTS TO BE SAVED

MARKETING AND FARM CREDITS CONFERENCE TO SEEK TO CHECK "BILLION DOLLAR WASTE."

(By United Press)

Chicago, August 17—How to check the billion dollar waste in the marketing of farm products will be the dominant theme of the fourth national conference on marketing and farm credits, called today to meet in Chicago, December 4 and 5.

Farmers of all states are expected to unite in a discussion of ways and means to remedy a condition termed "wasteful and inquitous in the extreme" by the committee in its meeting notice.

Surveys will be made prior to the winter gathering that will show the movement of crops such as livestock, grain, cotton and hay. The whole milk problem and its relation to city distribution will be worked out.

Practical plans will be drawn for eliminating waste, improving farm products and increasing the consumption of certain farm crops.

Half of the conference work will be devoted to rural credits and the federal farm loan act will come in for its share of criticism.

"The delegates will analyze the scope and limitations of the act," said Secretary Charles W. Holman, of Madison, Wis., today. "And when they are through the American farmer will know what to expect under its terms. Contrary to the general belief, this act does not solve the rural credit problem. It is a beginning, but a crude one. It may prove to be almost inoperative in a number of states where federal jurisdiction will clash with existing homestead laws.

"Nor does the act touch even remotely the question of personal credit and it is a long way from striking at the great problem of turning tenants and landless men into home owning farmers.

"How to adjust state laws to harmonize with the act will be shown by speakers at the conference. Aid for the landless man and the immigrant will be discussed. We expect delegates from every state in the Union and from Canada.

"A feature of the winter sessions will be hearings to bring out needed information. The results of careful investigation and long experience will be presented on practical phases of the questions.

Farmers organizations will be invited to send men to tell their troubles.

"The conference is an open forum now in its fourth year. It is non-partisan. Its deliberations are followed up from year to year by committees and special bodies working for the delegates. The general committeemen signing the call are:

Frank L. McVey, chairman, Grand Forks, N. D., president of the University of North Dakota; Frank P. Holland, of Dallas, publisher of Farm and Ranch; Gifford Pinchot, Milford Pa.; Governor Arthur Capper, of Kansas, president of the Capper farm papers; Charles S. The Banker-Farmer:

The figures of the New York State Department of Agriculture as to farm lands and farm cultivation in the state strikingly bear out the frequent charge of the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers association that New York has been very backward in fostering farm life and farm conditions. In various states, in the East as well as in the West, there have been definite movements among the banking interests in behalf of farm development. New York state has some eight hundred national and state banks and trust companies, with resources approximately as large—perhaps larger—than the combined resources of the states in which there are definite movements among bankers for farm cultivation. There is no question but that the banking institutions of New York state have ample reason and ample means for an organized effort in behalf of agriculture as an industry.

The figures of the Department of Agriculture show that of the 22,036,367 acres of farm land in the state of New York only 8,500,000 acres are now under cultivation, and this despite the fact that of the total acreage there are 15,500,000 acres classed as improved land.

It is the opinion of the commissioner of agriculture that in order to supply the demand for farm produce every acre of land in the state capable of producing any commodity should be under cultivation. During the year 1915 the farms of the state produced commodities valued at $475,000,000, yet this was not sufficient to meet demands.

One can readily understand this unsatisfied demand when it is noted that only twenty per cent. of the population of the state is to be found in the rural district, and that only a part of this twenty per cent. is engaged in agriculture. The fifty-seven cities and 465 incorporated villages of the state account for 8,000,000 of the otal population of 9,687,744.

The relative unpopularity of farming in this state may seem somewhat extraordinary in view of the facts that farm products bring high prices, that farm life is independent, that the farming communities have good roads, that educational advantages have been much improved, that there is reason to expect substantial advances in land prices, and that the state and railroad corporations, notably the New York Central, are giving direct and extended assistance and instruction to agriculturists. And yet it is not so extraordinary when it is considered that the banking interests have not co-operated in this work of assistance to an extent at all commensurate with their power or with the needs.

It is to be borne in mind, of course, that urban life has been a magnet to many thousands who have found rural life rigorous and monotonous. But it is difficult to explain why many of these have preferred poverty in the cities to full stomachs in the country unless we take cognizance of the lack of organized banking support. Perhaps another reason is to be found in the psychological aspects of the matter. If so, all the more reason why financial and business interests should seek to improve the conditions of farm life so that it will attract rather than repel the thousands who have been turning to the cities from the farms.

In a bulletin just issued by the State Department of Agriculture there is presented a list of New York farms which are for sale. In many cases the farms are near cities and villages—sufficiently near for their occupants to enjoy city and village advantages. The prices for such farms are, of course, higer, but there must be many individuals and families of sufficient intelligence and industry to be able to handle these farms as business propositions, soon make them pay for themselves, and at the same time find happiness in life through independence and through the enjoyment of neighborhood advantages. —Daily Financial America, New York.

The Industry of the Nation Stands Loyally Behind the Government

By CHARLES M. SCHWAB, Steel Magnate

THERE are two great questions concerning the future of American industry. The first is, How shall we enlist that personal element that has done so much for American industry? All capital and industry is of little value without the brains and ability to make it a success, and those men whose brains and ability have made industry a success and who make it a success should, in my opinion, have a wider share in the profits and benefits of the industry to which they have contributed.

© by American Press Association.

C. M. SCHWAB.

I MEAN THAT EACH MAN WHO PROVES HIS ABILITY TO MAKE ANY INDUSTRY SUCCESSFUL SHOULD BE ADMITTED TO A PROPORTIONATE SHARE IN THE RESULTS OF THAT INDUSTRY.

And now we come to the second matter. It is through understanding between the government and industry in this country that we shall progress. The government should encourage and build up industries, not destroy them.

The industries of this country will stand shoulder to shoulder with the government, but the government should foster and stand by those industries that will work with the government. The government should listen to the industrial men who prove their loyalty. THEY SHOULD BE CALLED UPON BY THE GOVERNMENT AND THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD CO-OPERATE WITH THEM IN THEIR INDUSTRIES.

Use of Alcohol by Parents Invariably Harms Their Offspring

By Dr. HAVEN EMERSON, Health Commissioner of New York City

IF any one had said five years ago that we would reduce the first year infant mortality to seventy-five in a thousand we would have been told that it was impossible; yet that has been done. New York has beat all the big cities of the world in this fight.

Infant mortality is a bargain counter proposition for the health authorities because the results of scientific methods are certain and sure. There are rooms in this city in which babies are born that calves and pigs would not be allowed to be born in. THE TIME WILL COME WHEN WE WILL HAVE THE POWER TO ABOLISH SUCH PLACES.

But the great field is that of prenatal influence.

WHILE IT MAY BE DEMONSTRATED THAT ALCOHOL MAY BE USED IN SMALL QUANTITIES BY INDIVIDUALS WITHOUT APPARENT HARM TO THEMSELVES IT INVARIABLY HARMS THEIR OFFSPRING.

Statesmanship and Militarism Separated by Wide Abyss

By MAXIMILIAN HARDEN, Famous German Editor

THE abyss between militarism and statesmanship was never more evident than in the conflicting viewpoints of the school favoring the unlimited use of the torpedo and that endeavoring to avoid a breach with the United States.

Even if the assumptions of the first school were correct, peace brought about by the unsparing use of submarines and dirigibles could only have been a TRIUMPH OF A DAY AND SPELLED THE UTTER ISOLATION AND WASTING AWAY OF GERMANY.

Germany has taken the first step from militarism into statesmanship by its decision in the American problem and should now go FORWARD ON THIS PATH, WHICH IS THE ONLY ONE LEADING TO A LASTING PEACE.

THRIFT CAMPAIGN SERIES

No. 13.—MAKING DECISIONS

From the time we are old enough to know right from wrong we are compelled to make decisions; to say "yes" to some things and "no" to others. In fact, all life consists in yielding to good impulses and resisting the bad. No man ever succeeded unless he learned this lesson. We can never form a character, acquire property, gain knowledge, provide for old age, take care of those dependent upon us, or get a job worth while until we learn to make decisions. And the men who draw the big salaries are those who can pass judgment, and are willing to stand by the judgments they make.

It is the easiest thing in the world to take the line of least resistance and to do the easy thing. If a man would acquire an education he must forego pleasures for a time. If he would get and keep a good job, he must deny himself indulgences that do not tend in the right direction. If he would save money he must make decision after decision and stick to them.

How many of us resolve that we will save money and make a good start, but fall down, because we yield to the temptation to go to those places or in that company where our resisting power will be weakened. Suppose we have a spare night. If we stay at home we know that we won't spend any money. If we go to the theatre we will spend a certain amount; but if we go to the club, or out with the crowd, we are not certain where we will go, or what we will do, and being with the crowd we must do as the crowd does. The result is bound to be a breaking down of the resolution to save.

The habit of consistently saying, "no" can only be acquired when a man has an ambition, a goal, and an incentive. If he would own a home, acquire a business, get a good job, be a man among men, and have a master passion, the impetus will be with him steadily to spur him on and help him make the many little decisions that bring the result he desires. The bread line is full of men who could not make decisions and stick to them; who played with temptations of various kinds until they lost out; whose declining years must be spent in doing the easy things because in other days they couldn't do the hard ones.

You never will learn the secret of how men acquire money until you learn the fine art of making decisions; and if you do not learn this lesson for yourself, the world will decide for you, and the decision will doubtless be that you have no will power, are not strong in keeping promises to yourself and therefore cannot be expected to be strong in keeping those to others, and relegate you to the ranks of the "has beens," or the "never was," where you will drift along until the end. The saddest thing on the ocean is a drifting ship, and the saddest thing in life is the man who is going nowhere, and cares not how long it takes him to get there.

THE INDUSTRIAL SPIRIT

We are accustomed to regard this age, and particularly the last few years, as peculiar in the maifestation of industrialism. The great modern commercial combines fill the center of the stage and all other interests than those of money seem to be of subsidiary importance.

But, as a matter of fact, it has not been greatly different in any period. Industrialism has always been and always will be the chief interest of mankind.

It is industry which has given man purpose and efficiency and comfort. It has elevated and chastened his ideals. It is the great civilizing, the great moralizing, the great spiritualizing force of all the world of all ages.

For labor is life. It is the only force by which dead clay is developed into virile manhood.

The quick growth of big corporations has introduced new industrial system rather than any new spirit. It seems to have brought the mere money-getting more prominently to the front through his stupendous successes, and made the lot of the common man appear hard by contrast.

But the truth is that never before in the history of mankind has any such large mass of the people been economically efficient and comfortable.

Labor, with its leavening influence, is being carried into deeper and darker recesses of life than ever before. Inefficiency, pauperism and misery disappear before it as mists before sunshine.

The mere money-getting instinct is the lowest in human nature; but this is not to be confounded with the industrial spirit which projects enterprise and sets the heart of mankind thrilling with hope, purpose, effort.

ANOTHER UNEASY CONSCIENCE

"Thus conscience does make cowards of us all," ejaculated Hamlet, as recorded by Mr. William Shakespeare, and that the melancholy Dane was speaking in accordance with facts is being demonstrated now as it was back in Shakespearean times, says the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph. Every day or so a conscience gets so uneasy that the owner of it mails Uncle Sam a sum of money, generally a five-dollar bill, in some instances as much as $100, and occasionally much more, as a contribution to the fund that has grown out of the lashings of conscience. Now and then, as the result of similar uneasiness, some fellow sends a farmer a "fiver" to atone for a raid, years ago, on his orchard or his melon patch, and occasionally a grocer or some other merchant is agreeably surprised in the same manner.

It remained for a West Virginian, however, to show that a conscience can work both ways, first in making a man fearful and cowardly, and then making him brave. The man in this case, according to his confession, broke into a West Virginia postoffice two years ago, soon thereafter his conscience got busy, so busy that he was in constant fear of being captured. He dreamed the other night that detectives had caught him, and that settled matters. He was a hundred miles from Charleston when he had that dream, but he tramped all the way there and gave himself up to the United States commissioner. It is an easy matter to send Uncle Sam a contribution for the conscience fund, but it requires courage to walk a hundred miles and voluntarily surrender in order to quiet the urgings of a disturbed conscience. The moral is: Don't do anything to make your conscience uneasy.

—According to a glaring headline in a morning sheet, health authorities in New York are of the opinion that infantile paralysis is carried by dust. It seems to be the prevailing opinion, however, that it is a manufacturer of "dust," for many officials who would otherwise be "short" on the "long green."

—Political clubs are now being formed all over the country by patriots anxious to serve their Fatherland in public offices.

HOGS

With hogs selling at more than ten cents a pound "on the hoof," a lot of us are going without our breakfast bacon. In fact, the market report these days is the most doleful reading ever encountered by the city man and there is no hope of relief in any item. But hogs—that is the sorriest subject of them all, and strikes a fellow quickest and the hardest.

If our farmer friends have any of them to sell, it is to their advantage to have the price so high—provided it doesn't cost to much to fatten the stock. But the truth is, the farmer does not profit as greatly as the high prices would indicate for the reason that when prices are high he hasn't a great deal to sell, and what he has to sell has cost him more to produce than when prices are lower. So the farmer seems to make just about as much money with moderate prices for farm produce as when the prices are abnormally high.

But the city folks—they are the ones who are going to suffer on account of the price of hogs. For the hog enters into the household economy more generally than does the product of any other of our farm animals. We could get along without beef products much better than without the products of the hog, and an excessive price for beef wouldn't affect living so greatly as it is affected when hogs are high.

While the rich man must use hog products in one form or another, the hog is the poor man's friend. It is the fuel of the working man, if you please: It furnishes the energy for laboring humanity to a very large extent—if not directly, then indirectly. For the fat of the hog becomes all kinds of foodstuffs in one form or another, many of the vegetarians consuming a great deal of it while believing that they are consuming nothing but vegetable products.

The high price of hogs is due to two things—scarcity of hogs and the demand for grain upon which they are fattened. The drought which existed in several sections of the country for some weeks reduced pastures, and hogs had to be fed on grain. Grain is in such demand for bread that it is selling at abnormally high prices. So the result is that hogs are selling for higher prices than they have ever sold in this country—at least within the memory of the present generation.

—A two weeks' vacation usually means more than that length of time before and after—before, in saving up the money, and after, in trying to economize to make good the deficit.

—It is to be hoped that our health officer will not deem it necessary to exert his authority to the extent of not allowing our public schools to reopen as usual.

—As prohibition at Washington was beaten, it becomes possible for Congress to remain in session a short time longer.

—An exchange says: "Cambridge had an unhappy drowning." Of course such affairs are usually happy ones.

—The backbone of the heat wave seems to have been broken at last.

—Thanks, weatherman, old top!

HELD A ROAD WORKING "BEE."

Citizens of Cottonwood Falls and Bazaar, Kan., Put Five Miles in Shape.

Cottonwood Falls, Kan.—With motorcars loaded with picks, shovels, rakes and other road working implements a score of men from this city and Bazaar started from their respective towns recently and thoroughly worked the five mile stretch of road between. In the party of good road boosters were business men, county officials, merchants and farmers.

Each party starting from its own town worked until they had joined near the center of the five mile stretch. In addition to their hand tools the Bazaar men had horses and road scrapers to aid in the work.

HIS CARGO BECAME ALIVE.

But Part of It Wasn't Displeased With What Was Happening.

Kansas City.—Harry Deutsch, a baggageman, got a call that almost set him up in the poultry business.

A commission house on the north side had thirty cases of bad eggs it wanted dumped into the river. Deutsch backed his wagon to the river and began heaving the eggs into the water. Cries of protest came from one of the cases. Deutsch found two live little chickens and in another case two ducklings. The ducklings tumbled and tossed until they got into the water and floated away. He has the chickens.

NOVELTIES IN U. S.

American Souvenir and Favor Manufacturers Aided by War.

FOREIGNERS DO EXPERT WORK

New York Corporation Which Struggled For Years Against Unequal Competition With Europeans Enlarges Force by Employing Women From France and Germany.

New York.—The curtailment of European imports resulting from the war has forced Americans to engage in scores of industries they would have been content to leave to Europeans. It is one of America's important benefits from Europe's misfortune.

One new industry is the manufacture of novelties—the paper flubdubs used for souvenirs and favors. A New York corporation which struggled for years against unequal competition with Europeans has enlarged its force by bringing from France and Germany several hundred women expert in making novelties. That company now supplies most of the novelties used in this country. Its output is worth several hundred thousand dollars a year.

Joseph Reichel, manager of a Kansas City hotel, purchased in this city $12,000 worth of souvenirs and favors to be given guests.

"American made novelties are as good as those imported from Europe before the war," Mr. Reichel said. "When importations stopped makers here tried American girls in their shops, but they were not so rapid as French and German workers and the quality of their product was not so high. So the manufacturers brought hundreds of French and Germans to New York for the work. For obvious reasons they put the French in one room and the Germans in another."

MINER FINDS QUEER BEETLES.

Strange Insects With Markings That Puzzle Scientists.

Portland, Ore. — Beetles bearing Masonic and other markings that have proved a puzzle to the Carnegie institute have been found by Fred Steen of the Steen mine in the Cornucopia district in Oregon.

The insects are of the general type of the long horned wood borer, but according to the Carnegie institute there is an apparent variation from any hitherto known species.

The backs are black and the markings are traced as though in white ink. Some markings form a combination of letters and Arabic numerals. Many have markings "V U 6." Others have the Masonic emblem of the square and compass plainly discernable.

PAY FINES IN INSTALLMENTS.

How Law Has Worked in Illinois. Only Fourteen Cases in Year.

Chicago.—For a year Illinois has had a law permitting judges after fining a defendant to admit him to probation and allow him to pay the fine in installments so that he might support his family instead of working out the fine by labor in prison.

But since its passage the law has been used in only fourteen instances. Two of the defendants have paid their fines in full, five have paid a part, two are trying to have their fines remitted, two have paid nothing, one has just been fined, one has absconded and one is in jail.

DINNER FOR DOGS.

It Was a Birthday Party, and Bones Were in the Dessert.

Lorain, O.—Pedro, three years old, was the guest of honor at a dog party given by Miss Leota Babcock, daughter of A. H. Babcock, capitalist.

Pedro is Miss Babcock's pet French bulldog, and the party was in celebration of his third birthday anniversary. Frenchie Harris, Tip Reed, Fox Henry, Queenie Roth and Curly Stack were guests. Dog biscuit was a feature of the menu, while meaty bones provided a dessert. An imitation cat operated by clockwork was provided for amusement.

MODISTE WITH MONEY IN BANK NEARLY BURIED AS A PAUPER

Body Sent to Morgue Saved by Public Administrator.

Kansas City, Mo.—Miss E. A. Heitcamp, a hair dresser, found Miss Anna Leavy, sixty-five years old, dead in her home here. The body was taken to the morgue and would have been buried in the potter's field had not Miss Heitcamp notified Public Administrator Newell, who made a search of her home and found that she had fourteen shares in the Shapleigh Hardware company, par value $100 each; a bank book showing $492 in the Mechanics-American National bank; $14 in cash and a note for $1,500 executed in her favor in 1904 and signed, according to Miss Heitcamp, by a name which she thinks is that of a former official of the Shapleigh Hardware company, now in New York city.

Miss Leavy was a modiste, and was said to have made many of the gowns worn by queens of the Veiled Prophet.

FEDERAL MEDIATORS STOP MANY STRIKES

Forty-seven Have Been Averted Since Board Was Organized in 1913.

Washington. — The United States board of mediation and conciliation, which was called upon by the government to prevent a national strike, was created on July 15, 1913, by act of congress. Its members were appointed by President Wilson three days later, and they acted in the railroad strike situation of 1913 and a strike was averted.

According to the act under which it was created the purposes of the board are: "To settle by mediation, conciliation and arbitration all controversies concerning wages, hours of labor or conditions of employment that may arise between any common carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property (in interstate commerce) and their employees."

The services of the board may be sought by either or both sides. Both sides must consent before it may act. It has no peremptory powers. In the forty-seven cases in which the board has been successful, thirty-nine were settled by mediation and eight by arbitration.

Its members are William L. Chambers, chairman; Martin A. Knapp and G. W. W. Hanger.

SMALL TWINS GOOD TYPISTS.

Five-year-old Children Profit by Teachings of Parent.

Spokane, Wash.—Robert and Grace Rice, five-year-old twin children of E. I. Rice, are shorthand writers for whom their father claims a speed of a hundred words a minute, considered a remarkable record for children.

The children are speed typists and are able to better the performances of many business college graduates. They are home taught and for the last three months have had regularly two lessons a day, the practice periods being at first of very short duration, but increasing in length until now each lesson lasts fifteen minutes. Their typing has made them excellent spellers, and shorthand has led to fair proficiency in drafting.

BRIDE FOR THE SIXTH TIME.

Woman With Long Matrimonial Record is Only Twenty-nine Years Old.

Conway, Ark.—Mrs. James Richards Lea, twenty-nine years old, became a bride for the sixth time when she was married to a man named Roberts in the courthouse here by Judge John W. Holt, according to County Clerk James A. Lea. The fifth marriage took place here about three years ago, and the bride has lived at Russellville since that time.

Mrs. Roberts is a sister of George Doss, forty-three years old, who recently eloped with Addie Pruitt, fifteen years old, that marriage [having] been annulled.

FLEXIBLE WOODEN SHOE SOLE

Hungarian's Invention Consists of Several Layers Gripped Together.

Budapest, Hungary.—Barna S. Kohlener, a captain of cavalry, whose military usefulness was ended when he lost an arm, has devoted himself to inventing a wooden soled shoe that shall be flexible and announces that he has solved this problem.

His sole instead of being one piece of wood is constructed of a number of layers joined together by heavy oils or fats, which thicken and grip the pieces of wood together. Captain Kohlener declares it has the elasticity of the leather sole.

TROPHIES OF WAR

Captured Flags Carefully Preserved by Uncle Sam.

ON VIEW IN NAVAL ACADEMY

Restored by Special Process After Having Been in Tatters For Years, They Are a Living Proof of the Heroism of Our Soldiers and Sailors.

In the auditorium of the academic building at the United States Naval academy at Annapolis are 15,000 square yards of flags, most of them trophy flags.

The capture of these tattered banners helped to make the stars and stripes respected by the nations of the earth and reflect undying glory on the men of the United States navy. They are living proofs of the heroism and courage of the soldiers and sailors who fought to maintain the flag when the nation was struggling for independence and later when it was fighting to establish firmly the foundations of the greatest republic of the world.

From 1847 to 1901 this collection of flags, which should be one of America's most highly prized treasures, was kept at the Naval academy and exhibited in the old naval institute hall.

In 1901, when it was decided to tear down this building, the flags were packed in iron boxes and stored away. Being in a dilapidated condition when they were taken down to be packed, grave fears were entertained that they would be further damaged by moths.

During the ten years they remained in storage repeated efforts were made to have the government take some steps to put them in a permanent state of preservation, but without success. In 1912 congress appropriated $30,000 for the work of preservation.

About three months later Mrs. Amelia Fowler, an expert on flag preservation, obtained the services of forty needlewomen, who began the arduous task of sewing over by hand every inch of the 15,000 square yards in the flags, as the natural decay of age as well as the almost hopeless ravages of moths made any ordinary method of preservation seem impossible.

A special process was originated by Mrs. Fowler, which is described as "spreading the tattered remnants of each flag upon a backing of heavy Irish linen of neutral color."

The delicate work was guided by the original measurement of the flag, by a knowledge of its design and by placing in vertical and horizontal line the warp and woof threads in the fragments of bunting.

What remained of the original flag was then sewed firmly to the linen backing by needlewomen under Mrs. Fowler's instruction and guidance.

Less than a year after the labor of repairing was begun, on May 16, 1913, the flags were completed and put on exhibition at the Naval academy.

In the ceiling of the academic building is one of the most interesting of the trophy flags. It is a British royal standard taken from the parliament house at York, now Toronto, then the capital of upper Canada, when the place was taken by the squadron under Commodore Isaac Chauncey and a land force under General Zebulon Montgomery Pike, April 27, 1813.

The squadron, with about 1,700 soldiers aboard, effected a landing at York under cover of a fire of grape from the ships, cleared a way through the Indians and sharpshooters that the English had formed to oppose them and stormed the batteries. The capture of York resulted in the acquisition of the royal standard the only British royal standard captured and held by any nation.

The flags captured by Admiral Dewey at Manila bay are in this auditorium, and some of them are exquisite. The one flown at the main of the Spanish cruiser Don Antonio de Ulloa is a reminder of the plucky captain of that cruiser, Enrique Robion, who refused to surrender at the battle of Manila bay on May 1, 1898, so the Ulloa sank with its guns blazing defiance and all flags flying.—Boston Globe.

Imitation Damask.

Imitation damask is made today by means of printing upon the surface, with a sort of transparent mucilage, the designs. These designs appear to be woven into the cloth. By immersing a sample in boiling hot water and allowing it to boil for several minutes the design will disappear.—Washington Post.

PROMINENT DENTIST DIES

DR. HAMBLEY S. ORCHARD PASSED AWAY.

The death of Dr. Hambley S. Orchard, thirty-eight years old, occurred at the home of his grandfather, Doir Calkins, on the East River road today.

The deceased was an active and competent dentist and succeeded through diligence in working up a large practice.

He was a member of the Hiram Lodge No. 244, F. and A. M., also a member of the B. P. O. E., No. 830, of Fulton. He was born at Oyster Bay, where he held his residence until he graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Dental College. After completing his education he came to Fulton to practice his profession.

The deceased had a host of friends and he will be missed greatly.

He is survived by his widow, and two sons, Leroy and Neil, also his mother, Mrs. Louis Orchard and one sister, Mrs. H. VanTassell, of Ossining, N. Y., and his grandfather, Doir Calkins, of this city.

A Masonic funeral will be held Sunday, from the home at 419 Rochester street. The Rev. F. N. Darling will officiate.

LOCAL PEOPLE ARE INTERESTED

WILL SECURE HALF MILLION DOLLAR CANADIAN TIMBER TRACT.

As representative and attorney for the Bondholders Protective committee of the Battle Island Paper Company, S. Guy Daley, of Syracuse is in Canada today to secure possession of the Canadian timber lands owned by the defunct concern. The tract is estimated in value at between $300,000 and $500,000.

Decision to take possession of the property immediately was reached at a meeting of the committee in Syracuse recently and it was decided to send Mr. Daley to Quebec to perfect the title and wind up the loose ends of the prolonged litigation that has held up the ownership and sale of the tract of timber.

The fight for the ownership of the land has been carried on in the Canadian courts for the past two years and was carried to the highest bench.

The courts held that the Chicoutimi Paper Company did not have any claim on the timber rights and now that the time for the appeal has expired the title is clear. The Columbia Trust Company of New York as trustees for the bondholders committee has abandoned the claim that the Ha Ha Bay railroad had no lien on some free hold lands so that litigation from this source is prevented.

It is expected that steps will be taken immediately to dispose of the property. Several months ago an offer of $300,000 for the entire tract was received from the Ontario Paper Company. From another source there has come an offer of about the same. One lot of 25,600 acres has a $90,000 purchase lien against it and this will be paid when the land is sold. The remaining portion of the company's holdings is known as crown lands, or land to which the concern had a timber right. This consists of about forty one square miles, including a rossing plant, and several pulp mills.

Before long briefs in the Battle Island Company's claim against the state will be filed and then attorneys for both sides will sum up before the court of claims. The award will probably come shortly after.

Attorneys Piper and Pendergast, of Fulton, are looking after the interests of the Fulton people interested in the negotiations.

VERY FEW LOCAL BANKS WILL HELP SWELL ALLIED LOAN.

Very few Central New York banks will participate in the new quarter billion loan to Great Britain and Ireland that is now being floated in this country through the J. P. Morgan company. Neither will they subscribe any great amount to the huge loan that France is seeking to obtain here through the same source.

The loan is to run for two years and will bear interest payable semi-annually, March 1 and September 1.

Many of the banks have passed up the proposition on the ground that by helping swell the allied loan they might offend some of their depositors of German, Austrian or Turkish descent and for that reason they prefer to maintain a strictly neutral attitude. The banks, however, will handle individual funds for the loan if requested to do so.

HERE'S HONEST UMP; SAYS HE ISN'T FIT TO HOLD HIS JOB

When the history of the Texas league is written George Leidy will be put down as one of its most remarkable characters.

Not least of the incidents in his career was his voluntary resignation of his job as an umpire with the candid statement that he had neither the qualifications of temperament nor eyesight to handle the indicator.

Would that a [illegible] of other umpires in big leagues and little could be so honest with themselves and the baseball public. The game would be better off.

MAJORITY OF VARSITY STAR ATHLETES GONE

Seven of the thirteen athletes who won championships and eleven of the seventeen who won or tied for second place in the 1916 intercollegiate championships have graduated from their respective colleges.

Cornell lost more athletes by graduation than any other college track squad, but the Ithacans also retained more good men than any other eastern university. Cornell lost athletes who scored twenty-two of the forty-five points in Potter, Hoffmire, Taylor, Gubb, Van Winkle and Corwith, and with them go Starr, McLaren, Millard and Beckwith, all point scorers in dual meets. Pennsylvania lost Meredith and Kauffman, the backbone of the red and blue team; Michigan lost Harold Smith, great sprinter; Stanford suffers the loss of Fred Murray, dual hurdle winner; Yale will miss Wesley Oler, high jump champion and broad jumper; California will be without Preble and Maker, hurdlers and jumpers; Billy Bingham and John O. Johnstone have deserted Harvard to make a living, and Ted Brown has left Penn State, and this causes Trainer Martin to seek another hurdler.

These vacancies leave openings to be filled by more or less ambitious athletes. The fellows who placed back in the ruck may be champions next spring. The 1916 freshman teams on the whole looked woefully weak, but by next year these selfsame lads may gain in experience and make the patrons forget the champions of today.

BROWNS' STRONG BID.

Their Record of Straight Wins May Figure in Pennant Award.

The St. Louis Browns are making a good bid for the top of the American league percentage column and have established a season's record of thirteen consecutive victories.

One reason for the success of the team is the fact that the men have been camping out in the baseball park. It has been so unbearably hot in the Mound City that the players could not sleep for more than an hour or so in a night. They complained and Fielder Jones conceived the idea of pitching tents in the ball park and having the boys get their rest there.

A little research into the baseball life of Fielder Jones will reveal the fact that his teams invariably put on a spurt toward the top during the middle or latter part of the season, which usually consists of a prolonged winning streak of anywhere from ten to twenty straight victories.

Last year as manager of the St. Louis Federals Jones led his boys on a victorious road trip, putting together thirteen consecutive victories, which put the Terriers in the pennant hunt, where they stayed the remainder of the year, losing the flag by less than a point.

CHAMPION FOOLISH PLAY.

Schlafly Played Prominent Part in Contest in 1907.

Baseball's champion foolish play was made in a game between Washington and the White Sox in 1907. In that battle Larry Schlafly was captain of the Washingtons and also played second base. At the end of an early inning Schlafly went out to telephone or buy a goat or something and was delayed so long that the Senators had three men put out before his return.

The Sox came trotting in for their turn at bat. Washington took the field with only eight men and nobody on second, and the game went on that way till Fielder Jones hit one straight across second. Then, and not till then, was it discovered that there was nobody on second base. Incredible as it may seem, nineteen men—seventeen players and two umpires—had started the half inning in this fashion, and not one of them got wise till Jones' hit shot over the empty station. Schlafly reappeared at this juncture, and the umpires decided that the hit was illegal when made with only eight men in the field. Jones had to go back and bat over.

Yankees' Star Twirler Had Fine Season With Federals.

Nick Cullop, the Yankees' star heaver and leading pitcher of the American league, was formerly with the Cleveland Indians. Last year he worked for the Kansas City Federal league team, and finished the season in a tie with Eddie Plank for third place in the league's pitching records.

Both pitchers won twenty-one games and lost eleven.

CLUB DEPENDENT ON STAR PITCHER

This Is Well Illustrated In the Major Leagues.

TINKER CITES JOHNSON.

Chicago Leader Says Great Pitcher Has Kept Washington Up—Brown Did Same For Cubs, James For Braves.

"One great pitcher can make any sort of ball club perform miracles," said Joe Tinker recently. "The history of baseball shows that a moundsman who can win from 60 to 70 per cent of his games can lift any ball club to or near the top of any league.

"Miner Brown was such a man. His wonderful work back in the old days was the one big reason for the success of the old Cub machine. If we hadn't been possessed of Brown the chances are we never would have been in the fight for so many years.

"When Brown faded you know what happened to the Cubs. They no longer had a star of first magnitude to depend upon. They didn't have a man they could shoot in and be reasonably sure at the outset that the game was won.

real pitching star. Matty kept that club in the fight for ten years and more. He was the mainstay.

"When he went into the box the old gang behind was so confident of his powers that they played behind him with a 'we can't lose' spirit, and they rarely did lose with Matty at work. Whenever McGraw wanted to win an important game he called upon Matty. He knew that Matty could deliver if any man could.

"The Washington team has been a factor in the American league races for the last three or four years. Why? The real answer is Walter Johnson.

"Look where the Dodgers are this year. What's the answer? Great all round playing, yes. That is part of it. But the real reason is that Jeff Pfeffer. The big fellow is whistling along this year at an amazing clip. The Dodgers play their greatest ball behind him.

"They have worlds of confidence in him. They feel he cannot lose. And by winning with Pfeffer in it gives them a higher notch in the average column. That increases their natural confidence and makes them strive all the harder for the pennant honors.

"Early in 1914 the Braves were in the rut, but the players had confidence in 'Big Bill' James. They figured that he would round into winning shape soon and sweep them on toward the goal.

"'Big Bill' did come around, and when he swung he carried Rudolph and Tyler with him. Instead of having but one star to depend upon, the Braves had three. And so they shot up from the cellar to the top, remained there until the race was over and then beat the Athletics in record time.

"And so it has been all along. The team with a star pitcher has been the team that wins."

BOYS CAN NOW ENLIST WITH U. S.

NO LONGER NECESSARY FOR YOUNG MEN TO HAVE CONSENT OF PARENTS.

Young men of this city who are anxious to join the National Guard will be pleased to hear of an announcement just made by the War Department at Washington. Mothers and fathers for the most part will not read the announcement with any degree of enjoyment as it may mean the elimination of a demand which parents have hitherto determinedly set their feet upon.

In the future according to the war department announcement it is not necessary for any boy over eighteen years of age to obtain the consent of his parents or guardians in order to join the National Guard. Prior to this boys between eighteen and twenty-one were compelled to secure the consent of their parents or guardians bfore they could enter the military service.

The new order means in the eyes of the recruiting men that there will be a host of young men, between the formerly prohibited ages who will over rule the wishes of their parents and join the National Guard.

The recruiting officers figure that there will also be a large number of farm boys who want to see a little of the world and believe they will jump at the chance offered them in the now government order.

The telegraphic order received by the commanding general of the eastern department at Governor's island and forwarded to all the recruiting stations follows:

"Secretary of War directs that no person under eighteen years of age shall be enlisted in the National Guard, either with or without the consent of parents or guardians. Minors over eighteen years may be enlisted in the National Guard without the consent of their parents or guardians. Any previous instructions not in accordance with above hereby revoked.

OLD SOLDIERS' CONVENTION

BOYS OF '61 GATHER FOR NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT AT KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

(By United Press)

Kansas City, August 25—The vanguard of Civil War veterans began flocking into this city today for the fiftieth national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which opens here tomorrow.

Hotel lobbies were alive with war talks and the boys of '61 did not seem to think it would be perhaps their last encampment, as many of the "youngsters" thought.

Boy scouts mingled with the grey haired warriors of Gettysburg and Shilo. The lads in Khaki acted as escorted and otherwise busied themselves in the interests of the visitors. Practically every building in the downtown section was decorated with the national colors and the usual "welcome" signs.

There seemed to be much speculation today as to the number of veterans that would march in the great parade Wednesday. Every old soldier already here insists he will be in line when the bugle starts the procession, no matter how high the mercury climbs.

FULTON PEOPLE WERE FLEECED

NUMEROUS FOREIGNERS IN THIS SECTION ARE VICTIMS OF SWINDLING SCHEME.

A state wide police dragnet was flung out today in an effort to catch a gang of medical swindlers, four men and a woman who secured huge sums of money from foreigners in this city, Oswego, Syracuse, Utica, Schenectady, Fredonia and other Central New York points.

It is estimated that the men headed by Dr. J. W. Quinlan, and Dr. Edwin H. Hahn, who worked from their offices at 132 South Salina street, Syracuse, have secured $25,000 in this vicinity and even larger sums in other cities they have "worked."

Hundreds of foreigners are numbered among the victims of the medical fakes, all of them suffering losses anywhere from $25 to $300.

The men came to Syracuse about two months ago, opened an office and began an extensive advertising campaign in the Polish, Italian, and other foreign newspapers which have a large circulation in this section. Periodicals and booklets were also distributed in this city and Watertown and other more northern points. This literature set forth that they could cure four kinds of disease. They promised certain cures and advertised they would refund the money in case the patients were not cured.

Immediately after the advertising campaign began the offices were opened under Dr. Harn's name. The other three connected with the game were an Italian interpreter, a woman Polish interpreter and a man who acted as press agent and advertising agent.

The offices were swamped with patients from all over, Central New York, other tenants of the building say. Only foreigners were accepted all Americans being turned away. From each patient a large cash deposit was taken. This varied according to what the men thought they could get. From one youth who was unable to raise any more they took $2 while from other wealthier ones they secured between $200 and $300. The amounts, however, averaged about $100 or $200.

The same treatment was used in all cases. After the payment of the initial fee the patients were given a bottle of medicine which they were told was to prepare them for the taking of the cure. They were to take this preparatory medicine for two weeks. Then they were to come back and get the cure.

For six weeks the men did a thriving business. Then suddenly the whole force disappeared. In the door of the office was attached a sign to the effect that the doctor had gone on a vacation and advising patients to take the second weeks' medicine after finishing the first. Several of the patients coming to get the cure became suspicious and reported the matter to the police. An investigation disclosed that the rooms had been stripped of all furniture, medical apparatus and that the birds had flown.

The owner of the building says that all of the party except the press agent left the day the office was closed. The press agent requested that the office door be left unlocked for him one night explaining that the doctor had taken the key. The next morning the owner found the office locked and it remained so until the detectives broke in and discovered that it was empty.

Since the investigation began in Syracuse, police inquiries from other towns have been sent out and it has been discovered that the men have operated extensively in this section. They have names of a score or more Syracuse victims and some from other nearby cities. If the men are caught it is probable that these men and women will be called as witnesses.

NOMINEE HUGHES IN WYOMING

COWBOYS AND RANCHERS AT CHEYENNE TO "YIP YEA" FOR MR. HUGHES.

(By United Press)

Cheyenne, Wyo., August 25—A crowd of cowboys and cattlemen from nearby ranches and ranges came to Cheyenne today to "yip yea" when Charles E. Hughes arrives for tonight's mass meeting here. The picturesque "frontiersmen" also will be in evidence when the Republican candidate delivers his address tonight, the only set speech on his schedule in Wyoming.

Governor and Mrs. Hughes left Salt Lake city at midnight and were due to arrive in Cheyenne late this afternoon. Rear platform talks at Rawlins, Laramie and possibly other Wyoming towns being almost certain to delay him.

FORMER CONVICTS TO GET A CHANGE

Ex-Members of the Sing Sing League Tell of Troubles.

WORK TO PREVENT ALL CRIME

New York Police Commissioner Promises That His Detectives Will No Longer "Dog" the Ex-Prisoners "Once a Crook, Always a Crook," Will Never Again Be Slogan of Police.

Ex-convicts are going to get a fair show in New York—at least during the commissionership of Arthur Woods, police head.

There is to be no more dogging the trail of men who have done their prison bit by "bulls" who hold to the motto, "Once a crook, always a crook." Commissioner Woods said so at a remarkable dinner gathering. This was an affair arranged by the national committee on prisons, whereby thirty former inmates of Sing Sing and Auburn prisons were the committee's guests.

Furthermore, the police commissioner is going to co-operate with the ex-convicts, with the idea that they can, by influence and example, help to keep down new crime.

He will meet them from time to time and talk things over, both from their viewpoint and his.

Guests Prison Alumni.

The guests of the national committee on prisons were all members of the Outside Mutual Welfare league, a sort of alumni association of free men who have belonged to the Mutual Welfare league in two state prisons. They were at work and doing well, they reported.

But several of them in addresses they made to the assemblage told bitter tales of how the "bulls" had made life miserable for them—how they had been hounded from one job to another because the detectives had pointed out to the men for whom they were working that they were crooks, jailbirds, and they had no alternative except to admit it.

"I am glad to meet you men and help you," Commissioner Woods said. "It is the first time I have had any experience with your organization. I will gladly work with you and see that the police of New York city instead of hounding ex-convicts will help them in every way possible. In case of any ex-convict your organization will O. K. we will see that he is given every possible chance and all assistance within our power.

"I am hired to prevent crime. You can help me there perhaps. I hope you will and that we may work together harmoniously."

"We will," exclaimed several of the former prisoners as they applauded the commissioner.

Put It Squarely to Woods.

One of the ex-convicts asked, "Commissioner, if you got out of prison with only $10 and had to spend it for food, what would you do next?"

"It was a mighty lucky thing for me," said Mr. Woods, talking of the incident, "that some one changed the topic. I couldn't have answered the question very well, I'm afraid."

He asked the men how many had been in reformatories. It seemed twenty of the thirty had been. He inquired if they were taught anything good there. They hooted derisively and explained that they had been taught only the most evil of things—how to be worse instead of better.

The commissioner told them, in conclusion, he thought they could be of "inestimable value" in helping to keep down crime. "You can do as much as I can along that line," he said.

Martin Loonan, an ex-convict, chairman of the employment bureau of the M. W. L., reported that he had got jobs for 200 former prisoners and 175 had made good. Ernest S. Roche of the employment committee of the national committee on prisons said he had placed 380 in steady employment and 300 had justified the work.

BEST FOR THE BABY.

New York Specialist Says Birthday Clothes Are Healthy.

Combined fashion and health hint to mothers, by Dr. S. Josephine Baker of the bureau of child hygiene, New York —let the baby go naked.

Dr. Baker received a letter in which a much exercised correspondent complained that an east side mother was permitting her children, aged one and three years, to run about the house in their birthday clothes. The informant threatened to take the case straightway to the Society For Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

"That east side woman is a sensible mother," said Dr. Baker. "If every mother of young children in the crowded districts would do the same thing we would have a lower death rate for children under five years. Little tots should go stark naked in hot weather. It's the natural way for them to live. In addition to that, they should be given a sponge bath twice a day and plenty of good milk and cool water to drink."

Will Show 'Em.

Rejected by army officers because his physique could not withstand heavy marching, a man is to walk from Plattsburg to New York to prove them wrong.

ROYAL ARCANUM INSURANCE

CHANGES IN RATES ARE CONTEMPLATED BY THIS FRATERNAL ORDER.

Several hundred Oswego county members of the Royal Arcanum as well as all holders of fraternal insurance policies are watching with interest the progress of the move to make changes in the assessment rates of the above named order. The proposed changes will be discussed when the Supreme Court Council of the Order resumes its thirty ninth annual session at Saratoga Springs, September 6th.

It is realized that whatever action is taken will have a vital bearing on the future of the order. Insurance companies are also greatly interested in the outcome of the sessions. The approximate membership of the order is 250,000.

Alfred T. Turner, supreme secretary has made public the following statement concerning the proposed change in rates:

The Statutes of the various states in which the Royal Arcanum transacts business requires all fraternal societies to collect such rates of assessment as will insure future olvency. Societies must make at three year intervals a valuation of their business and those that are less than ninety per cent. solvent must show at the end of each triennial period positive approach to complete actuarial solvency.

"The valuation of the Royal Arcanum at the close of 1914 was 86 per cent. approximately, while that for 1915 was 85.5.

"To comply with the laws of the various states in which the Royal Arcanum operates and to provite for future acturial solvency was the serious problem which confronted the supreme council.

"During the past year the executive has caused to have investigated the order's mortality for the period from 1905 to 1914, and a table of mortality actually reflecting that experience was prepared, with resultant rates of assessment deduced therefrom. Seven of the twelve members of the executive committee submitted a report of the supreme council, recommending the adoption of amendments to the laws of new rates of assessments as truly reflected by the actual conditions encountered by the order since 1905.

The plan recommended involved an increase in the rates of contributions of all members upon the amount of protection now being carried, except those who have selected option D and whose rates are proved to be adequate when measured by the new mortality table. An option was proposed, however, by which members could continue the payment of their present rates and receive such amount of protection as is proportionate to the rates required under the new mortality table.

"Members now upon the half cash plan could continue paying half cash at the rates required for their respective ages, as shown by the order's experience since 1905, or they could surrender such an amount of protection as is equivalent to the lien accumulated upon their certificates, have the lien discharged, and receive a new benefit certificate for a definite amount and pay a uniform monthly rate during the remainder of the membership.

"Since January 1, 1915, it has been necessary to withdraw approximately $1,800,000 from the emergency fund in order to meet current death claims, and it is indisputable that some change that will furnish additional revenues is imperatively commanded. The only alternatives confronting the supreme council are adequate rates with actual and complete solvency and assured permanence or a temporary expediency and future triennial rate adjustments.

MEAT PACKERS ARE INDIGNANT

CAN NO LONGER SELL WRAPPING PAPER AT THE PRICE OF HAM.

Meat packers and meat sellers of New York state are thoroughly aroused by the decision of a Yonkers court in fining Swift and Company thesum of $100 after having been found guilty of selling hams without marking the net and gross weight of the substance.

No sooner was the decision communicated to state officials than John F. Farley, state superintendent of weights and measures announced that 1,100 cases of similar violations will be taken up at once.

"There are many cases of retail butchers selling meat products, such as ham, in paper wrapping and charging meat prices for the paper, when the law expressly says that all such products shall be plainly marked with the net and gross weight, so that the consumer can easily tell just what he is paying for," Mr. Farrell declared.

The decision against Swift and Company which followed closely similar action against Armour and Company means that virtually all the meat packing companies doing business in this state will be compelled to live up to the weights and measures law. Mr. Farrell predicts that efforts to reverse the Yonkers decision by carrying the matter to the higher courts, which is being done, would result in failure. He pointed out that for every pound of ham sold in the state there is an ounce of paper sold at regular meat prices. Meat packers say they stand to lose $2,500,000 annually in the state by the decision.

COMPLAINTS MADE BY CAMPERS

Numerous complaints have been made to the Police Department in regards to people bathing at North Bay. The campers who have been plentiful during the exertemely warm weather were greatly molested by these bathers in scanty costume. Chief of Police E. J. Dyer has been notified and has detailed a man to watch the resort and cause the arrest of any person violating the city ordinance.

The cove at North Bay has been very popular this year for campers and cottagers. This will undoubtedly be developed into a summer resort within a few years.

Dainty Snails.

Snails are most dainty feeders and strict vegetarians, as many gardeners know to their cost. Apparently three centuries ago snails were more popular in England than they are now. The fastidious author of "The Faerie Queene" gives a recipe for their preparation:

With our sharp weapons we shal thee fray
And take the castill that thou lyest in;
We shal thee flay out of thy foule skin,
And in a dish, with onyons and peper,
We shal thee dresse with strong vynegarre.

PAID TO SPEND.

Colonel H. C. Rogers Just Gets Rid of Thousands of Dollars.

BUT IS NOT A SPENDTHRIFT.

Chief Quartermaster of Southern Department on Funston's Staff Spends Money "Right and Left" in Little Wads of $25,000 or $50,000 in Texas.

San Antonio, Tex.—The "biggest spender" in Texas is Colonel Harry L. Rogers, but he isn't a spendthrift. His position on Funston's staff as chief quartermaster of the southern department makes it his duty to spend money "right and left" in little wads of $25,000 or $50,000. Little wads!

Just imagine a sum like one of those in greenbacks wadded up, then the squeeze removed. But Colonel Rogers is used to trifles of that sort, or at least to handling Uncle Sam's checks that represent such piles.

For instance, there are 75,000 pairs of army shoes in San Antonio. Twenty thousand pairs are at Fort Sam Houston—just sort of shelf stock. Each pair cost $2.81.

Colonel Rogers said the army is short on nothing except tent cots. They are not kept in stock, and 100,000 extra cots is a big order to fill instantly, which is the reason for the shortage.

Mosquito bars are another article issued to soldiers. One hundred thousand of them cost something too. Double ones are obtained for $2.29 and single ones for $2.16. Double refers to weight and not to size. Each mosquito bar is for one bunk.

One hundred thousand single bars—and the government may have double that number—cost $216,000.

Gasoline costs the government from 21 to 26 cents a gallon, according to where it is delivered. That delivered at San Antonio is 22 cents a gallon. The previous contract price was 9 cents a gallon.

PILLORY TAMES WIFE BEATER.

On Promise to Reform, Judge Brady Releases S. T. Pike.

Kansas City, Mo.—Judge J. H. Brady's walking pillory for wife abusers made a convert of one of the two Kansas side men he tried it on the first time. S. T. Pike, twenty-three years old, 841 Splitlog avenue, appeared before Judge Brady and said:

"I promise I'll go and live with my wife and be good to her. But I can't live in this city any longer. You made me go out there handcuffed and sweep in the streets. I'm disgraced, and I can't live here."

Pike was released. R. B. Stephens, Pike's companion in chains, remained obdurate. He said he would not live with his family. So Judge Brady sent him to the workhouse for a year.

MAN FELL 12 STORIES, LIVES.

Frame Scaffolding Diverts Course of Drop to Cement Pavement.

New York.—John Gervleno earned the doubtful privilege of boasting that he had fallen twelve stories to a cement pavement and lived to tell the story. He was working on the top story of a building in the course of construction when he lost his balance and toppled off the structural iron work.

The falling workman dived head first through a thin frame of scaffolding at the second floor, which changed his course and broke his fall. Instead of striking on his head on the pavement he landed in a sitting posture. While he was severely injured, physicians believe that his life would be saved.

MUSKRATS DAMAGE ROADS.

Seem to Have Conspired Against Autos in Indiana.

Valparaiso, Ind.—Muskrats seem to have conspired in the Kankakee region against the automobile and within two days caused the wreck of three cars just south of Kouts. The muskrats burrow under the gravel on the roads, and the cars break through.

The attention of the county commissioners was called recently when a Chicago man, who left no name, appeared here with one arm in a sling. His car, containing himself, wife and daughter, turned over, he said, at the same point where two other cars were upset. One woman suffered a broken arm in one of the accidents.

IMAGE A PEACE BAROMETER.

French Expect Figure's Fall to Mark End of War.

London.—High overhead above the ruined and desolate streets of Albert, in France, the great gilded figure of the Virgin with the infant Christ still hangs from the tower of the Church of Notre Dame de Brebieres. For more than a year she has now hung thus at an angle of some fifteen degrees below the horizontal, face downward to the street below, holding the infant out above her head.

In local French the belief is the day the holy figures fall will see the end of the war.

Says She Has Stingiest Husband.

Sioux City, Ia.—Charles S. Burga, a blacksmith, has not spent a nickel on his wife in the last seven years, she alleges in her petition for separate maintenance. Once he was so generous he gave her a dime to pay for a car ride to a park, but later forced her to borrow a dime to repay him, she claims.

WANTS CITY TO PAY FOR SHOES WORN OUT IN PRISON

Says He'll Sue Unless He Gets 75 Cents.

St. Louis.—Edward Lane, a negro, went to the Municipal Courts building for the avowed purpose of forcing the city to pay him for a pair of shoes which he wore out while serving a 100 day sentence in the workhouse on a peace disturbance charge.

At the police court parole office Lane was told there was no fund from which he could be reimbursed for his shoes.

"Them shoes was worth $5, but I'll take 75 cents and call it square," said Lane. "If I don't get it I'm going to sue the city. I won't hire no cheap lawyer, neither. I'll hire Senator Hoke Smith of Alabama." Smith is a senator from Georgia.

Lane left the building saying he would see Judge Hogan, who fined him. The judge said the negro did not visit him.

"If he does," he said, "I'll give him the money and save the city from a lawsuit."

ADVANCE PRICE OF YOUR FAVORITE BOOK

Will Have to Pay From 10 to 25 Cents More For Current Publications.

New York.—Book lovers will have to pay from 10 to 25 cents more for current publications. Publishers and retailers already have increased the price. Books formerly selling from 50 cents to $1 now are rated at 10 cents higher. Those in the past priced from $1 to $2 are sold at an increase of 25 cents each.

The publishers claim that there has been an increase in the price of paper, leather, cloth and ink amounting to from 50 to 100 per cent during the past twelve months, and it is impossible to produce books at old prices.

The consensus of opinion among them is that under the present serious conditions a further increase of from 10 to 20 per cent may be necessary. They say their only hope is in the ending of the European war. It is claimed there is also a shortage of chemicals which must be obtained from Europe for the manufacture of their particular grade of paper. The surplus supply of this class of material is exhausted and the publishers will have to depend upon a new supply.

TROOPS MAKE ADOBE HUTS.

With Dog Tents, United States Soldiers Now Have Combination Houses.

San Antonio, Tex.—Combination adobe and dog tent huts now shelter a large proportion of the American troops in Mexico, according to General Tasker H. Bliss, assistant chief of staff of the United States army, who returned here recently from a trip to General Pershing's headquarters.

General Bliss said that on finding themselves due to stay in Mexico for some time thousands of soldiers constructed adobe walls about three feet high and U shaped. On top they pitched their dog tents, previously their only shelter, thus gaining a roomier and more comfortable lodging. Beds have been supplied by stuffing sacks with grass.

WIDOW 34 YEARS, PENSIONED.

Mexican Veteran Died Before Law Was Passed Providing Pay.

Buffalo.—Thirty-four years after the death of her husband, who fought in the Mexican war, Mrs. Laura M. Hawley of Lockport was notified by the local pension agency that she would receive back pension from 1887, the year the law granting pensions to soldiers of the Mexican war was passed. She will receive $3,200 in a lump sum and $12 a month for the remainder of her life.

Mrs. Hawley was the second wife of Hawley, who died five years before the pension law was enacted. She did not learn until five years ago, she said, that she was entitled to a pension.

WHITE MAN IS NEGRO'S HEIR.

Prominent College Athlete, Adopted Son, Gets About $100,000.

Baltimore.—The adopted white son of James L. Hitchens, negro, to whom an estate of about $100,000 is left, is a football and basketball player. He was a student of the Maryland Agricultural college for a year and of the Baltimore City college for three years.

The youth's adopted name is James L. Hitchens, Jr., but his real name is James L. Lindemann. His mother died when he was four years old. His father was an actor. Young Hitchens, now twenty-one years old, is married.

LOSES INHERITANCE BY DRINK

Heir Dies a Pauper Rather Than Forsake John Barleycorn.

Ashtabula, O.—Peter Walstrom, sixty, heir to $30,000, died a pauper.

Heart disease, said to have been brought on by overdrinking, was assigned as the cause of death.

Eighteen or twenty years ago his father, living in Stockholm, Sweden, died and bequeathed his son $30,000 with the understanding that it was to be held in trust for him until he gave up drinking. The liquor habit, however, had too close a hold, and he never got the money.

STOLEN MEXICAN SHIELD.

Bears Coat of Arms and Disappeared Night Madero Abdicated.

Douglas, Ariz.—A rawhide shield, bearing the embossed national emblem of Mexico, stolen from the Hall of Ambassadors of Mexico City the night Francisco I. Madero was seized by his officers and forced to abdicate the presidency of the republic, is in the possession of Ives G. Lelivier, Mexican consul here. He has written the Carranza government for authority to keep it.

The shield was taken by a customs officer from a Mexican who was trying to get across the international line at Nogales, Sonora.

Its seizure by the customs officials ended a search of three years, beginning the night it was stolen after it had been cut by the bullets which flew from the pistols of officers and orderlies in a melee which started in the Hall of Ambassadors when Madero stood under the shield and protested against his arrest.

The rawhide hung on the wall in the days of Diaz, and President Huerta valued it so much that he commissioned detectives in an effort to find it.

SNAKE CAN'T HURT HIM.

"Prophet" Claims Immunity and Lets Copperhead Bite Him.

Cumberland, Md.—John Nash of near Elk Garden, styled "the white robed prophet" and "the divine healer," debated in a grove near Flintstone, this county, with the Rev. B. Y. S. Teter, a Dunkard minister. Following the debate Nash allowed himself to be bitten by a copperhead snake that was caught at Flintstone.

Nash asserts he has been bitten by all kinds of snakes and is immune to the poison. Barefooted and in patriarchal garb of white, with long hair and reddish beard, Nash attracts attention as he appears with his twelve-year-old son, similarly garbed and called by his father "Jacob the Prophet."

His face was wan from many days of fasting. He said the fasting would strengthen his spirit for the debate. Nash is a former United States soldier.

DOG GUARDS NEWSPAPERS.

Growls When Passersby Read the Headlines Too Long.

Chicago.—Newsboys with street corner stands believe there is a limit to the time a passerby may stop and read the headlines of these sellers on their stands. One of these sellers has left the final verdict to his dog.

Nellie has been so well trained she seems to know when a person means just to keep on reading with no intention of buying.

Nellie passes many hours daily on a shelf in the stand where her master's papers are displayed. When a pedestrian stops long enough to read the war news of both Europe and Mexico she utters a slight growl. The next warning is a bit louder. If the reader still does not move on, Nellie gets up on her feet and thereafter war dispatches hold no further interest for the reader.

BATHED PIGS TWICE A DAY.

At That, Neighbors of New York Man Complained to Health Board.

New York.—Spotless town has been found. It is North Bergen, N. J.

Neighbors of Louis Tracassa complained to the board of health that he did not keep his five little pigs in "clean and sanitary condition."

Tracassa appeared before the board to defend himself. With an aggrieved tone he told of his sanitary precautions.

"I give those pigs a bath every morning," he said, "and my wife bathes them every night. What more to you want? Should I get up in the middle of the night to wash them again?"

"How do you bathe them?" he was asked.

"In a tub," said Tracassa.

The board of health took the case under advisement.

PULLED STUMPS TO MUSIC.

Brass Bands Played to Lighten Labor in Canadian Army Camp.

Camp Borden, Canada.—Never before was stumping done to the accompaniment of martial music. Four battalions were engaged the other day in uprooting old pine stumps while their brass bands played in the midst to lighten the labor and to allay any pain old Mother Earth might feel in the process of extraction.

About a million stumps have been removed in the camp area. As the ground is sandy, the roots are easily pulled up with a stumping machine. They are then gathered together in heaps and set on fire. The sight of these bonfires on the plain at night in the vicinity of the camp is reminiscent of Homer's Iliad.

FINED $50 FOR KILLING BEAR.

Pennsylvania Hunter Was Also Forced to Surrender Cubs.

Warren, Pa.—It cost James Nolan of Morrisons, near here, $50 and costs for killing a mother bear out of season.

While Nolan was out fishing near his home he discovered a female bear with two small cubs wandering through the forest. He quickly returned to his home and, getting his rifle, went back to the forest and killed the bear with one shot.

After killing the bear Nolan took the cubs to his home, where he was feeding them from a milk bottle, when I. K. Hogarth, state game warden, placed him under arrest. Hogarth took charge of the cubs.

belted low. Cording and much stitching are both signs of autumn's note, so the long coat skirt has a corded hem. The collar and cuffs are organdie.

HOMEMADE CARAMELS.

No Reason Why One Should Not Be Successful With Them.

To make chocolate caramels take a quarter pound of grated chocolate, three ounces of butter, three-fourths pound of sugar, one gill of milk, two good dessert spoonfuls of syrup, a small dessert spoonful of glucose, half a teaspoonful of vanilla essence. Put everything except the vanilla into a pan, and dissolve over a slow fire. Boil to 246 or 248 degrees, take off the fire and add the vanilla essence, and turn into a well greased tin. Mark with a knife when set and cut into squares and wrap each in wax paper.

The tin should be greased with oil or clarified butter—i. e., butter that has been put into a pan and heated and the scum taken off as it rises.

Molasses candy (caramel) is made of three-fourths of a pound of sugar, a quarter of a pound of butter, one and a half pints of milk, two tablespoonfuls of molasses. Melt the butter and sugar in a saucepan, then add the sirup and milk, and boil, stirring till it leaves the sides of the pan clear. Pour on to a buttered plate and when nearly cold cut into squares and wrap each in wax paper. If a thermometer is used it should boil to 252 degrees. Ten to fifteen drops of vanilla can be added, if liked, before turning it on to the buttered plate.

Galatea For Frocks.

It is astonishing to note that galatea is being used in dresses for grownups. Hitherto it was confined to dresses for the schoolgirl and little tot, but at the present time it is also adapted for mother. It is shown in plain colors, such as blue, green, rose and white, and often trimmed with pique or a combining fabric. Other models are shown in striped effects, the foundation being white and the stripe in color. One particularly attractive dress was seen recently, the colors being blue and white. The arrangement of the stripes affords a novel detail. The odd flat collar with flat satin tie and deep cuffs are of white pique. The broad brimmed hat and high button boots are details of interest. A gown of this type is especially useful for morning and informal wear. Galatea is an excellent fabric for use in middy blouses and sports skirts, because it has sufficient body to avoid getting crumpled. It is also very suitable for simple sports suits, where the skirt is a two pieced model and the coat a box cut, which is belted at the waist line. With appropriate hat and shoes a suit of this type proves an ideal and practical summer outfit. As a "tub" frock, that is so indispensable during the summer months, there is nothing to equal the shirt waist dress of galatea in plain or striped effect.

Homemade Motor Veils.

Just a length of chiffon or similar weight veiling, twenty-seven inches or more in width and about one and one-half yards in length. Both ends are finished with a tiny hem. Insert a nine inch length of round elastic and attach at each end of the elastic a narrow ribbon string. The veil is adjusted by placing the elastic edge well down over the hat in front and holding the veil in place over the hat by tying the ribbon strings at the nape of the neck. Many of the bordered motor veils frequently sold so reasonably are long enough to make two of these handy requisites.

Costume In Burgundy Faillie

Attractive costume in the fashionable Burgundy shade trimmed with narrow braid. If desired a cape may be added to the back.

The fulness of the skirt emphasizes the snugness of the waist of this charming costume. It has an underblouse of crepe Georgette and long kimono sleeves. Provision is also made for the new cape effect at the back, if desired. The skirt is a three-piece model gathered at the waistline and attached to the waist. Narrow soutache braid trims the jumper. In medium size the dress requires 5¼ yards 36-inch material, with 1¼ yards crepe Georgette for the underblouse and 1 yard lining.

The first thing to do to the under body is plait the lower edge. Then close seams as notched and hem the front. Adjust belting to position for a stay and face the neck. The long sleeve should not be plaited. Lap to small "o" perforations and stitch leaving edges free below large "O" perforation. Close remaining seam and sew cuff to sleeve.

Next, join the gores of the skirt as notched, leaving opening between small "o" perforation in back gore for placket. Close back seam and gather. Arrange two pocket sections together, edges even. Stitch, forming a bag, and sew to opening in side seam. Arrange two pocket trimming pieces together and close the seam, leaving opening between small "o" perforations. Adjust on skirt, with opening over the pocket opening and stitch. The narrow end of the pocket is the upper part. Adjust skirt to waist.

New, plait the front of the jumper and join two back sections. Close shoulder seam and lap pointed end of back on front and stitch. Sew collar to neck edge. Arrange jumper on underbody, center-fronts and back even. Lap upper pointed end of pocket trimming on jumper as indicated.

If the cape is used it should be lined with plaid silk or a brilliant plain color.

Pictorial Review Costume No. 6858. Sizes, 16 to 20 years Price, 15 cents.

The Adder's Poison.

One of the most wonderful things in nature is the arrangement of the teeth in the mouth of the common adder or viper. The creature does not use its poison fangs when it bites the animals on which it feeds, and so by a very curious arrangement these fangs are laid back flat in the roof of the mouth out of the way of the ordinary teeth which are used for feeding. By this means the adder can use whichever set of teeth it pleases. One set will poison its enemy, and the other is more suitable for eating its food.

Papers In China.

Papers published in China are reported as having several classes of readers, the first class being those who first purchase the papers at the subscription price. When these papers have been read and thrown away they are carefully gathered up and sold at a less price to a less prosperous element among the people, and from these, in turn, they are passed on down to the poorer classes, each paper, if it has lasted that long, thus finding three grades of readers.—Christian Herald.

NEW NETHERS.

The Kind of Stockings That Go With Fall Shoes.

Whoever said that simple footwear was coming back into fashion was much mistaken. To be sure, certain styles of "fancy" shoes were marked down last winter, but other styles quite as elaborate took their place, and, as for stockings, never before have they been so varied and so far from plain or simple.

There is some thought that cotton stockings, colored ones at that, may be worn, for the price of silk stockings is soaring by the hour. But just at the moment silk stockings are made in hundreds of patterns.

Stripes form the most prominent stocking decoration or motive. Sometimes they are up and down stripes, sometimes stripes running around; sometimes they extend the whole length of the stocking, sometimes only halfway down or halfway up.

There are checked stockings, too, and plaid ones, and there are stockings with odd and irregular designs. Then, too, regular clocking at the ankles, in colors or black on white, is a prominent feature of the summer stockings. Clocks are especially smart for wear with sport shoes, and they add to the effectiveness of low shoes worn with short skirts.

One black and white combination shows half inch stripes extending from the toe to the calf, ending there in arrowheads. Another shows a panel of stripes extending the full length of the stocking, about four inches across the front.

One of the newer sorts of evening stockings show beaded embroidery. This is in line with the vogue for beaded embroidery and sequins and spangles that is so strong for evening frocks.

Inserts of real lace, too, in fine silk stockings are used for evening. And another evening idea is a white silk stocking painted with flowers to match a painted kid slipper. This, of course, is so unusual that it may almost be considered a freak style. But it is interesting and is mentioned for what it is worth.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

RUN OFF PRIMARIES IN TEXAS TO BE A FIGHT BETWEEN WETS AND DRYS.

(By United Press)

Dallas, Texas, August 25—Individuality will be largely lost sight of tomorrow in the run off primaries for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. Tomorrow's balloting will be a battle between wet and dry forces, with odds favoring the latter, politicians say.

Senator Charles Culberson and O. B. Colquitt, former governor, are the principals in today's voting. In the regular Democratic primaries July 26 Culberson got 80,000 votes to Colquitt's 107,000 and the present job holder only beat Dr. S. P. Brooks, former president of Baylor University, by about 6,000. But the nomination fight even then had resolved itself into a prohibition and anti-prohibition issue, with Colquitt admittedly favoring the antis and Culberson and Brooks the pros. The prohibition vote split on its two candidates.

Submission of prohibition at a general election to follow the next session of the Legislature, carried in the primaries. The drys are expected to unite behind Culberson and despite his defeat by Colquitt in the first primaries he is admitted by politicians to have the better of it "on paper."

A QUESTION AS TO WHO WAS THE EMPLOYER.

Deputy Compensation Commissioner Richards is trying to settle a dispute as to whose employ Daniel Burke, of Oswego, sixty-one, was engaged when he was injured internally by the cave-in of a ditch. The question is whether he was employed by the firm of A. Paine and Son or by Charles Paine, personally.

Burke has been awarded compensation of $376.81 covering disability from the time of his accident May 15, 1915 to April 22, 1916, but his case has never been closed.

A. Paine and Son object to the award on the ground that he was not in its employ at the time of the accident. Burke himself in his claim declares that he was employed by Charles Paine.

Commissioner Richards will thresh out the matter at a hearing in Syracuse in the near future.

DRINK A GLASS OF REAL HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who ar accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

HOW THE TOWN LOOKS WHEN THE MONEY THAT IS SPENT GOES TO THE MAIL ORDER HOUSES.

AND HOW IT LOOKS WHEN THE MONEY IS SPENT AT HOME

KEEP THE TOWN SPIRIT ALIVE

Is our town on the down grade? Are things slackening up? Are the weeds commencing to grow on our main thoroughfares? Do people shun our community? Maybe it isn't as bad as all that. And yet we feel that all is not right. The hustle and bustle of business is wanting. We don't get together as often as we used to. Each man is keeping too close to himself. If this is so, our town needs a tonic. We must get after ourselves. We must start a campaign in the interests of home trade. We must keep our town alive at all costs. Even if it does cost money to keep the town spirit alive, it is surely money well spent. There's no use in waiting. We must make things hum now.

FUR FUR FOLKS A FOR SURE FALL FASHION AGAIN

By Margaret Mason

(Written for the United Press)

Read
And heed
If you care
What you'll wear
One and all
In the Fall.

New York, August 25—It isn't the stuff that dreams are made of that interests us just now even if we have been running to Shakespeare for the last few months.

It's the stuff that our Fall and Winter frocks and suite are to be fashioned from that has us all agog.

One thing is sure, we are going to be even more fearsomely fursome than ever. Esquimos will look positively bareskinned compared to us if we wear all the furry fashions that the fur designers have prepared for us.

Fur coats are to be fuller and more ripply than last season and in order to rob Peter to pay Paul or, in other words, save on our other fur garments to put more into our coats, muffs are to be positively skimpy, as 'twere. Just little round bullet affairs.

The craze for moles that has evinced itself in our summer fur collars promises to lap over in the winter season and, in consequence, these little underground habitants have sky high prices. Basking in the dazzling light of popular fancy is enough to account for the blindness of the 1916 mole.

Mink will return this winter fashionable favor and kolinsky and skunk still hold their own.

Obviously, with such a craze for furs impending, near furs or materials made to imitate the real thing will be much in evidence. "Ederella" is one which simulates breadtail. It comes in narrow strips for bandings and also in yard width lengths. In the same widths also comes "ursine" which has a thick, soft furlike nap.

For frocks we will ape the monks with two materials loosely woven like sackcloth or the coarse fabric of which friars robes are made.

Like a twilled ratine is "serge moufflonne," and "drapelled" is a close imitation of breadcloth.

Serge and gabardine still continue in favor and there is a lovely thick soft diagonally twilled material, quite new, called "double trykho."

As for colors we are to go quite subdued and almost sombre, demurely draped in brown, blue or violet.

Brown in particular is to be much worn and many a smart Fall suit will be done brown. There is a new shade of it called "Senegalais." At least, its name is new and that is about all as it would be hard to differentiate between it and our old brown friend "tete de negre."

Skirts are to be longer to match the days and they do say that fickle Dame Fashion will cast her hoops out of her heart and her wardrobe and return to slimpsy, soft, straight lines.

Coming events cast their shadows before it is true, but just because the shadow happens to look a bit hoopless now don't get reckless and hurriedly cast off your hoops on the strength of a mere forecast. Bear in mind that G. B. Shaw says "You never can tell."

AT THE QUIRK TODAY

"What Happened At 22."

Not frequently, but now and again, conditions force one of the South's fair daughters to disregard tradition. Heeding the subtle call of The Big City, she will pack her traveling bag and a few days later be seen aboard the ferry crossing from the Jersey shore, gazing wild-eyed at the long sky-line of the "City of Hope," no doubt wondering if the clouds kiss the tall towers that rise heavenward.

To her, it is "The City where dreams come true"—where the fairy prince who awaits her arrival, will make vanish her sorrows, that all may be happy again. And so all fair daughters may find it, if like Louise Lloyd, they seek, through the right way—what most women deserve—Eternal Happiness.

"Baralogyns of The Trenches"

To Assassinate All Living Germans in the Trenches

(By United Press)

Berlin, August 26—Charges that the French have introduced a new body of men whose duty is to assassinate all living Germans in the conquered trenches with knives, revolvers and hand grenades, were made today in a statement given out by a semi-official news agency. The statement headed "Baralogns of the Trenches" recalled the killing of the German submariners by the crew of the British Baralogn.

The French some time ago introduced a new fighting system which was the most cowardly violation of the law known up to the present time. It expressed an order, "to remain behind in the conquered trenches and kill all the Germans that were alive." These troops are called Metoyeurs. Their equipment is not the cartridge rifle and bayonet of the other regular soldiers, but the revolver, knife and hand grenade.

When the French storming column succeeded in taking a trench the Meaoyeurs started to clear the trench of the living persons, assassinating the Germans with the hand grenades, thrown into the dug outs where the wounded were lying. Those who escape are killed by knife or shot if they attempt to come out. The slaughter continues from man to man. Every man whether wounded or not, whether armed or not is mercilessly stabbed or shot.

Helm's fleet opened fire with twelve inch guns.

HAS TOURED THIRTEEN STATES

(By United Press)

Denver, Col., August 26—With three speeches in Colorado, Republican Nominee Hughes concluded the first step in his campaign tour and was to leave tonight for a three days' rest at Estes Park. Up to today the Republican candidate has campaigned through thirteen states, being almost continually in what is declared to be Republican states with the exception of possibly California and Illinois. He has made more than one hundred speeches and arrived at Denver very tired physically, although well. He is anxious for a complete rest in the seclusion of the mountains.

1797 Cases To Date Infantile Paralysis

(By United Press)

Albany, August 26—Fifty-two new cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the state department of health this morning, making the total 1,797 cases in the state outside of New York city. Nine deaths were reported today. Eight in Syracuse and one in Yonkers. The total number of deaths is 199.

WEST SIDER ENTERS PROTEST

DOES NOT APPROVE OF THE UNLIMITED POWER PLACED IN THE HANDS OF OUR HEALTH BOARD.

Editor Evening Times:

On the first page of your paper last evening appeared an article under the heading "Health officer has power—All schools may be closed by officials, etc."

In view of the diversity of opinion as to the contagion of infantile paralysis by prominent personages, who are graduates of well known medical colleges, have their diplomas on the wall in their respective offices and are registered under the laws of the state to diagnose and treat diseases is it not well for the layman to stop and ponder and wonder "where he is at?" The M. D., who is not paid by the state or by some municipality for asserting that some disease or another that may spring up is contagious, is not nearly as prominent along that line, as the health officer or doctor who has a duty to perform for a fee or a specified salary. Even the poor little dog must come under the ban and be unfortunate enough to be murdered because his abode happened to be in connection with quarantined quarter, but, perchance, the officer receives an additional fee for destroying the dog.

I am in favor of strict sanitary regulations and the enforcements of laws that will tend to keep our surroundings neat, clean and inviting, that they may in no way be obnoxious to our neighbor, but when so-called authorities are so equally divided and nearly all evidence shows that there is no possibility of infection in infantile paralysis cases why should there be any reason for allowing only those who have a financial interest at stake to dictate to the masses.

If laws have been enacted giving such power, there should be immediate steps taken to have them repealed and I would be one to support any man for the legislature who would signify his intentions of doing all in his power to do away with such arbitrary methods. The day has passed when people will submit without protest to being quarantined upon the supposition of some man who has passed through a school of medicine. The injury and injustice that has been done to many families is beginning to bring a flood of protest and we hope that it will not be long until the class of physicians who are making the public take their medicine whether they want to or not will find themselves without laws to back up their every whim.

Children were excluded from the county fair, but on elevated sheds and railroad were crowded close together hundreds of the little youngsters where they could get a view of the sights over the fence top. And yet no effort was made to disperse them. Would the children not have been much better inside the gates in company with their parents?

There is not a day but what hundreds of little boys congregate at the foot of Rochester street and go in swimming. How much better off these children would be in school, when the proper time comes, than in herds roaming the street. Do you not think so Mr. Law Abiding Citizens who do not want your rights trampled upon when they do not interfere with the health or happiness of others.

IS GREETED BY WOMEN VOTERS AT UNION STATION

(By United Press)

Denver, August 26—Coming to a suffrage state enthused by his declaration in favor of National Woman suffrage, Charles E. Hughes was greeted by almost as many women as men on his arrival here today.

Union station was jammed by a crowd which wanted to catch the first sight of the Republican candidate for president.

A committee of Colorado's leading Republicans met Governor Hughes and escorted him by automobile to his hotel. Conferences with Republican leaders were to precede the first address scheduled for tonight at the municipal auditorium. Twelve thousand persons can be jammed into this hall and an overflow crowd was expected.

Candidate Hughes, Mrs. Hughes and the newspapermen who have crossed the continent with them will leave shortly after tonight's meeting for Estes Park, Colorado's beautiful mountain resort, where Governor Hughes will spend a week climbing hills and vacationing in preparation for his return to the east.

"HIGH" ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

WILL PICNIC TUESDAY AT PATHFINDER ISLAND

Final negotiations have been made for the High School Alumni Association picnic to take place Tuesday afternoon, August 29th, at Pathfinder Island.

Arrangements have been made to carry the people from the Cayuga street station to the island for twenty cents a round trip and conveyances will start at three o'clock. Supper will be served at seven o'clock and thus far one hundred and fifty reservations have been made.

The day will be spent according to the program, in baseball games, canoe trips, etc., and it is rumored that a tennis contest will be staged. Dancing will be enjoyed at the club house, the music to be furnished by the high school orchestra.

Graduated classes dated as far back as 1885 will be represented at the outing. Many of these old "grads" have been most active in their attempt to make this event a success and every student who was ever identified in high school circles has been notified of the outing.

It is the intention of the society to co-operate with the local schools in encouraging fraternity spirit and they contemplate the planning of several large entertainments and dances through the winter season.

TOUR OF INSPECTION WILL BE MADE

T. C. Cherry, general manager of the Empire United lines; C. Loomis Allen, one of the receivers, and H. J. Clarke, chief engineer will make an inspection of the Syracuse Lake Shore and Northern road and the Oswego City lines next Tuesday. Monday they will make a trip over the Rochester, Syracuse and Eastern.

The inspection is being made to find out the condition of the lines and to discover where improvements may be made in the service. They will meet agents along the line and discuss conditions.

Strike Seems Certain

President Wilson Ignored and Crisis Has Arrived

(By United Press)

Washington, August 26—With dramatic sinister a sudden crisis came today in the negotiations to prevent the threatened strike. A break between the Railroad Brotherhood, representing 400,000 men and presidents, representing $12,000,000,000 capital seems certain. The fifty executors called here a week ago by President Wilson ignored his proposition and decided to submit a proposition which even the most optimistic feel that the Brotherhood will turn down.

WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC EVIDENCE BROUGHT FORTH

(By United Press)

New York, August 26—Evidence that the white slave traffic reached its fangs into the best districts and into the better homes in this city was attained today by James E. Smith, Assistant District Attorney in charge of the vice probe. Smith said there was a trap for seventy-five men, who in the guise of respectable citizens are making their living by the efforts of women. He added that many women involved are believed by their friends and relatives to be leading moral lives. To date indictments for extortion and accepting bribes in white slave cases have been returned against seventeen men." I have found twenty-five cases," said Smith today.

Allies Have Failed To Break German Lines

(By United Press)

Strausberg, Germany, August 26—In eight weeks of tremendous effort with lavish extenuation of human flesh and blood and ammunition the Allies not only failed to break the German line on the Somme, but did not even dent it. General Alexander Von Pluck who commanded the German right wing in the great advance to the gate of Paris told the United Press today. In the eight weeks of fighting they have gained a few kilometers at a terrible loss said the German War Official here. England has accomplished nothing and has only exposed herself to our counter-attacks.

Prendergrast, of Brooklyn, and Thomas R. Proctor, of Utica. The committee will open Whitman's headquarters in Room 707 of the Manhattan Hotel, in New York city. The headquarters will be maintained throughout the primaries and the general campaign, "to cooperate with and as an aid to the Republic State Committee." The headquarters will be opened Monday.

British Counter Attack the Zeppelins

(By United Press)

London, August 26—British aeroplanes made counter attacks yesterday on the Zeppelins raiding the English coast for two miles, during the past twenty-four hours and bombarded the German airships at Nanur Belgium. It was officially announced today. It was impossible to observe the amount of damage done. One British machine failed to return.

OBJECT OF MALEDICTIONS

John G. Holland once wrote:

"Look over the whole track of history and see how everyone who did great good in the world has been the object of the world's maledictions and then be careful how you join in an unreasonable outcry against any man."

It is a knowledge of the tendency of the world that enables men to continue their work in the face of criticisms. The strong man is familiar with history. He knows that others before him, with the best of motives, have been condemned. He does not therefore despair because of adverse criticisms, but goes about his way content to know that he is doing the best he can, and that his motives are good. Were it not for that knowledge, nearly every man would be discouraged early in the game. He would give up in disgust. For it does not seem to be possible for any man to do good without having his motives questioned at the time being.

This is true in politics as in other walks of life. There are too many people who do not give a public officer credit for trying to do his duty; too many people who question public men's motives. This can be accounted for frequently on the ground that those who criticise do so for selfish purposes—to enable them to gain a political advantage, or to have their friends gain a political advantage. But the fact remains that men in office, more than any others perhaps, must face the world's maledictions.

But if it stopped at public office it would not be so bad. The truth is, it extends to private affairs. A manufacturer does something for the comfort of his men, and it is said that he is doing it "for advertising purposes," or that he will "get it out of his men" in some other way—they will have to pay for it, the critics harp. Another makes a donation to a worthy cause. He does so for a purpose, according to the critics. It is about time he was doing something for somebody else, they mutter; he has done enough for himself. Always the world's maledictions are against those who do things.

GOING BACK AFTER THE WAR

Instead of suffering from a flood of immigrants to this country after the European war, a million or more foreigners now in this country will go back to Europe as soon as the struggle ends. That is the report of the steamship companies, anyway, and it is based on pretty reliable information.

These steamship companies state that they are having hundreds of thousands of inquiries concerning passage to Europe, and that many foreigners now in this country are actually making deposits on tickets to be secured just as soon as the war ends. Their agents in Europe also report that there are no inquiries for passage, and that there is no prospect of any considerable number of persons coming to this country at the close of the war. The students may prophesy as they please; we prefer to accept this cold-blooded reasoning of the steamship companies.

The reason for the exodus from this country is simple enough. These foreigners want to return to their homes to see what has become of their relatives. They may intend to return to the United States when they find their friends, but in that many of them are mistaken. Once in Europe, where there will be a demand for their labor, at good wage, they are more likely to remain there than to return to this country.

There are hundreds of thousands of foreigners in this country who have not been able to hear from their relatives since the war began. Naturally they want to know what has become of them—and just as naturally they are going to Europe to find out as soon as they can go back to the lands from which they came. So we shall actually lose instead of gain population.

The statement of the steamship companies bears out what every editor in this country knows to be the truth—that there are many foreigners who are anxious to hear from friends and relatives. Many papers have written letters for these foreigners, and have interceded with the State Department for a number of them. But in few instances have inquiries been satisfactorily answered for the reason much of the poulation of Europe has been shifted a time or two, and the exigencies of war are such that little atention is paid to inquiries concerning individuals.

LIVING IN BACK ROOMS

We pity the poor who are compelled to live in back rooms, shut off from the brighter outlook upon the world.

But how many of us, who can well afford much better, voluntarily take upon us that condition?

What would we think of a housewife who would keep closed the shutters of all her windows except those on the shadow side, opening upon the pig-styles and the garbage heap, and accepting the dampness, the ill-odors and all the litter of a back-yard, instead of sunshine, pure air and a front view?

Could it be possible for her to have much joy in life? Could she ever see much beauty in the world? Could she ever be really alive to the higher purposes and possibilities of existence? No; her life would be narrowed down to the one side of her environment, and that the meanest. She would be foolish, indeed.

Yet, this is precisely what we al do when we keep closed the shutters of the mind on the side of sympathy and unselfishness and leave open only those on the side of the material and selfish.

By this foolish process we shut out the light of life and the sweet vision of real success, and keep constantly before us the impressions and influences that discourage and degrade.

A WAR PICTURE

Mr. Karl H. Von Wiegand, correspondent for the New York World, is at the front for his paper. He is with the German army, and is writing word-pictures of the activities of war—probably the most striking pictures that are now coming to us from the troubled sea. Take for instance this word-picture from a recent letter:

"It was a sizzling hot day. The Red Cross flags floated lazily, many of them presenting a depressing and gruesome picture. The white aproned surgeons were working over the operating tables, calmly and cooly, steady with knife or needle, even where the places were under fire. Black and white lie sometimes together, a bluish-gray of the French, the yellow khaki of the English, the greenish field gray of the Germans, side by side. The anguish and misery of suffering and pain transforms enemies of a few hours ago into a common brotherhood. From the operating tables come moans, sometimes cries. Amputated legs, arms and fingers lay about. Faces were distorted with agony. The atmosphere and heavy, sickening odor of blood and wounds is inseparable from such places, but especially so on a hot day."

Gaze upon that picture, you who are war-mad. It is not peculiar to Europe; it would be true to life if we should have war in this country. The sickening odor of such places would be in your nostrils now, right here in this good land of ours, if we had been dragged into this European contest. Your own boy would probably be suffering beneath a Red Cross flag, drooping lazily. Your income would be going to pay war taxes. The manufacturing plants in the country would be making munitions and nothing else, and there would be depression and gloom upon every hand.

We take exceptions to one sentence in Mr. Von Wiegand's articles, however—where he refers to "enemies of a few hours ago." These men were never enemies. They had nothing against each other. They were unacquainted; neither had injured the other. If they had been uninfluenced by rulers, they would have been as friendly before the battle as they are now friendly stretched side by side in the hospital. But the connivings of king and emperor and czar, the ambitions of the selfish, the thoughtlessness of those in authority, the wild denunciations of those who are loose of speech—these people were responsible for this awful contest, a single feature of which is so graphically described by the newspaper man.

A Willing Witness.

"Did his actions have an air of verisimilitude?" the lawyer asked the witness.

"What was that, sir?"

"I say, did his conduct wear an air of verisimilitude?"

"Oh!" replied the witness. "Sure! He was versimilitudin' all round the place."—Saturday Evening Post.

EXPERT EXPLAINS GOOD ROADS BILL

How Government Will Improve Nation's Highways.

STATES CARRY HALF BURDEN

$75,000,000 Will Be Taken From National Treasury In Next Five Years and Equal Amount From States. Measure Has Been Passive For Seventy-five Years.

A. G. Batchelder of Washington, executive chairman of the American Automobile association, a national authority on good roads, has written the following statement on what the new good roads law, appropriating $75,000,000 for the improvement of public highways, means to this country:

"When the congress of the United States in 1806 passed an act which met the approval of President Thomas Jefferson and provided for the laying out and construction of a road from Cumberland, Md., to Ohio, the commissioners intrusted with the work were given $4 a day in full compensation for their services and expenses. They were authorized to employ one surveyor, two chainmen and one marker, the chainmen receiving $3 and the marker $1 per day. The first stagecoach bearing United States mail from Cumberland to Wheeling traveled over this road Aug. 1, 1818. And it continued a federal artery of communication until between 1831 and 1844, when its parts were taken over by the states through which it passed.

"July 11, 1916, President Wilson in the presence of a contingent of good roads enthusiasts thus spoke;

"'I take a great deal of pleasure in signing this bill and having a part in the good work that has been done, particularly because it tends to thread the various parts of the country together and assists the farmer in his intercourse with others.'

"The Bankhead-Shackleford good roads bill after more than three-fourths of a century of passive policy accentuated the return of the federal government to the policy of aiding the states in the construction of public highways.

States Must Carry Half the Burden.

"From the federal treasury in the period of five years $75,000,000 is to be distributed among the several states on the condition that they contribute a like amount, and the joint money is spent upon whatever roads the state highway departments and the secretary of agriculture mutually agree upon. In addition, the measure carried $10,000,000 for the construction of roads in and adjacent to national forest reserves.

"It should be noted that this federal co-operation with the several states safeguards the expenditure of the money in a manner totally different from that contained in any other appropriation from the federal treasury. While the duly constituted state authority suggests the roads which are to be improved and the manner of improvement, the federal authority exercises a supervising power over the whole proceeding. Furthermore, if the state does not properly maintain the road that has been constructed with national and state funds its apportionment for the succeeding year is withheld until the first built highway receives the needed repair to bring it up to the standard established.

"In order to qualify for any of the federal money a state must equip itself with a highway department. Thus it is that Indiana, South Carolina, Georgia and Texas must provide this machinery within a four year period or forfeit their allotment, the money in the meantime remaining in the federal treasury.

National Road System Coming.

"Since highways improvement started with a co-operation between a state and its counties and resulted in first attention to the most used roads, and finally in the taking over by the state of the trunk lines, it is not unreasonable to assume that a similar development will take place in reference to the most important roads of the several states. First there will come a joint partnership and ultimately the establishment of a national road system not dissimilar to the one which welds France into a complete nation and, except for incidental governmental convenience, obliterates the dividing lines among its several departments, which are similar to our states.

"If we had forty-eight states, each one possessing relatively the same area, population and resources as the others, then it would be a reasonable conclusion that a state from its own resources should build its avenues of communication, as it provides other things in the public utility class. This also might be said of the county subdivisions of a state.

"But a state is not divided into equal parts, nor is the nation divided into equal states. The inevitable necessity in the building of that which serves a general good is to extend the area of taxation so that the nation as a whole will contribute and co-operate with the several states in such a way as to encourage them toward a gradual amalgamating of the largest commercial zones and finally the parts of which these zones are made up.

"Briefly, this explains why the national government must now include roads as one of the important things which have to be dealt with."

ENGLISH HAVE TROUBLE WITH FRENCH LANGUAGE

Fearful, Yet Wonderful, Pronunciations of Simple Words.

Fearful and wonderful from the French viewpoint are the pronunciations given by Tommy Atkins to the names of French places, localities and geographical features. Tommy's rather lame attempts to "parler" the Francais are a constant source of amusement to the natives, although M. Atkins is now showing great improvement, and before he returns to his tight little isle he is likely to be an accomplished French conversationalist—regular parleur, in fact. Tommy has now learned that Somme is pronounced "sum," although even that is not so easy as it seems, for the French "u" sound has no English equivalent. The French "u" sound is pronounced by pursing the lips as if to say "o," but to say "e" instead, the combination producing the French version of a "u." Aisne is pronounced "ayne." Loire is "looare," Meaux is "moo." Meuse is "Merze," but with the "r" silent. Oise is "was," Seine is "sen," and Ourcq is "ourk." Peronne is "pearron." Valenciennes is "val-on-see-en," Thiaucourt is "tee-o-koor," Chantilly is "shan-tee-yee," Maubeuge is "moburzh," with the "r" silent; Mezieres is "may-ze-air." Mons is "mawngs," with a nasal sound; Toul is "tool," Soissons is "swas-sohn," Rheims is "rance," and Nanteuil is "nawng tehyee." Argonnes is "argon," Compiegne is "com-pe-eyne," and so on. These are but a few of the stumbling blocks which have stood in the way of Tommy's mastery of the Francais as she is spoken, and in hurling them he has given no little pleasure to his French comrades in arms. Many of the latter, however, are striving to learn English, so that the enjoyment is mutual.

If you have noticed the names of the High School pupils who have written the essays on THRIFT quoted in our ads lately you will see that three out of five were purely foreign names. The names were Jessie Barton, Mortimer B. Williams, Hyman Wanderman, Laura Marie Noque and Thomas Wojciechowgki. The fact that they were High School pupils and that three out of five prizes were awarded to those with foreign names shows that our new citizens are getting an education as well as learning to save.

From our observation we think that the children of the newcomers are more anxious for an education and are better savers than the older residents. If this is true, will not the new citizens be ahead in wealth and influence in a few years?

Mr. Russell Conwell says: "The man who saves money is a better citizen and a better Christian."

The best and about the only practical way to learn to save is to put a part of your earnings in the bank every pay day and allow it to accumulate at the rate of four per cent.

TO TEACH SALESMANSHIP AT COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

Big Banks and Firms Will Aid New Course In Business.

The kid who starts in as office boy or errand boy in the big store and aspires to work up to that pinnacle place, "salesman," probably will disappear within a few years, for the salesman is hereafter to learn his job in college. At least, Columbia university is essaying to teach salesmanship to students in its new business school.

It was announced that a large part of the course to be established by the business school will deal with selling, advertising, sales management, business English and commercial correspondence.

The announcement reads that "students over twenty-one years old actively engaged in business and qualified to take certain courses" may be enrolled. It is pointed out by the faculty that trained study is what has made the German salesman the greatest of his kind in the world. The course will be of three years.

Professor Edwin R. A. Seligman, head of the department of political economy of Columbia, asserts the new school will have the active co-operation of many banks and business institutions of New York.

"Arrangements have already been made with the National City bank whereby a certain number of students will be afforded an opportunity to prepare themselves for the service of the bank in foreign fields," he said.

"It is proposed to broaden and generalize these opportunities so that every student will be enabled and expected to do some field work in that particular department of business life in which he is especially interested. In almost every phase of 'big business' in New York today the need is experienced for more expert and thorough training, and it is hoped in the advanced courses of the school to bring about a close co-operation between the corps of instructors on the one hand and the business community on the other."

The faculty will be composed of prominent educators. Well known business men will also lecture.

GAME BIRDS SAVE CROPS.

Colonel Shields Says Hunters Cost Farmers Millions Annually.

If the members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs take up guns for preparedness they are not likely to use them for sport even for game birds after listening to Colonel G. O. Shields tell at the convention of the immense loss to the country through the destruction of birds.

"I was brought up with a gun in my hands," said Colonel Shields, "and for forty years I was a sportsman, but I have not killed a bird since I learned their great economic value. Quails, prairie chickens, meadow larks and other birds have been swept away by millions by the gunners in the south, and now the cotton growers lose $100,000,000 a year because of the ravages of the boll weevil. Scientific men say that it will never be exterminated until the birds have come back.

"The chinch bug costs the grain growers over $100,000,000 a year and the Hessian fly $200,000,000. These insects are microscopic. It takes 24,000 of the former to weigh an ounce and 50,000 of the flies. A quail killed in a wheatfield in Ohio was found by a government expert to have 1,200 chinch bugs in its craw, and a quail killed in Kansas showed 2,000 Hessian flies eaten during the day. A quail in Pennsylvania had 127 potato bugs in its stomach. It costs northern farmers $17,000,000 a year for paris green. Not an ounce of paris green would be needed if there was a normal number of quails in the country, and they would be back in ten years if each farmer would protect the birds that remain and prohibit shooting on his lands."

FINDS YOUNGEST SOLDIER.

Boy of Twelve Complains That They Will Not Let Him Fight.

"I believe I have found my youngest soldier," exclaimed King George during his visit to the front, when he saw a twelve-year-old boy among the Northamptons.

But little Joseph Lefevre was not English. He is the son of a dead Belgian soldier and was found wandering about under shell fire at Ypres, adopted by the battalion and placed on its rolls. He told his story in French to the king and said.

"They will not let me go up to fight, but keep me back with the transport."

"As I was going to suggest and, being a soldier, you will have to obey orders," said the king.

PUNISH TO EDUCATE.

Parents Should Never Act on Impulse of Moment.

Never punish a child on the impulse of the moment. The correcting of a little child is a very serious matter—a matter to be thought over earnestly and (if you are the kind that prays) even prayerfully. Always keep in mind that true punishment is not revenge; neither is it vindication nor retaliation—it is, or should be, nothing more or less than education. The time for punishment affords you an invaluable opportunity to teach a youngster but one of the many, many lessons of life it must learn.

Therefore it is extremely important that you do not punish a child when you are angry. In anger you will more than likely be unjust and also too severe. In anger you are in a fair way to lose your own respect and the child's.

See that the punishment fits the fault and that it has within it the power to teach the difference between right and wrong in the particular instance under consideration.

DULL, DRAB MAN.

The men who are honest only because they have learned that honesty is the best policy, the men who tell the truth only because they are afraid they will be found out, the men who have none of that manliness that will stake all on a principle, are dull and drab.—Dean Charles R. Brown at Chautauqua.

VICTORY FOR TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING

FRAUD ORDER ISSUED BY POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

Washington, D. C., (Special)—In making effective, a fraud order denying the use of the United States mails to the International Automobile League, Inc., and also the International Automobile League Tire Company, of Buffalo, N. Y., and A. C. Bidwell, president of both concerns, the Post Office Department has sounded the death knell of enterprises which government investigations show have victimized thousands of motor car owners in all parts of the country.

"For years this league has been using the mails to obtain money by false representations and pretences from automobile owners, dealer and jobber of automobile supplies," said W. H. Lamar, Solicitor General of the Post Office Department, today. "The order concludes one of the longest and most important hearings ever held by this post office. The hearing occupied forty-six days and revealed a remarkable complexity and variety of unlawful practices employed by the president of the League and his agents, in exploiting the public."

The inquiry by the Post Office Department into the business practices of the International Automobile League was requested, last March, by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and the American Automobile Association to protect motor car owners as a part of the nation-wide campaign of the Advertising Clubs for truth in advertising and honesty in business.

Details of the Scheme.

The facts disclosed by the government's investigations, made public today, reveal an elaborate scheme which has enabled Bidwell, as president of the "International Automobile League," to amass a huge fortune. It is shown that he employed agents who solicited members for the league, representing that the league had contracts with manufacturers of standard automobile tires and accessories which enabled it to sell members such articles at dealers' and manufacturers' prices. The manufacturers of these products testified that no such contract existed. Through its agents, the league also represented that it could sell certain cars to its members at liberal discounts. The manufacturers of these cars told the government that the league could not obtain the cars to sell at such discounts. To impress car owners with the league's buying power, agents are said to have greatly exaggerated the number of members.

Substitution of Cheap Stuff.

It is rvealed by the inquiry of the Department that alleged "manufacturers' prices" on standard automobile tires and supplies were advertised merely as bait to secure a $10 annual fee from members to whom the league might sell inferior tires and supplies at a stiff profit. League members testified that when they endeavored to realize the big savings promised by the prices listed on standard articles, they were informed that the league was "just out" but that an excellent article manufactured especially for the league could be supplied in place of the one ordered. When members complained they were referred to a clause in the membership contract which specified that goods listed would be furnished when obtainable. "Crystal Oil" was a lubricant listed in the league's catalog as being of "exceptional quality." Government investigation showed that this oil came out of the same barrel from which orders were filled for a cheaper grade.

Members testified that five or six years after they had paid their initial $10 annual fee to the league, an attempt was made to collect $10 for each of these years on the strength of a clause in the application making membership perpetuating unless resignation was filed by registered mail sixty days before the expiration of the membership year. Evidence showed that membership in the league carried no privileges except that of buying tires and other supplies from it at prices fixed by Bidwell, the president.

Scheme's Gigantic Operations.

It is shown by the official inquiry that about two hundred thousand dollars worth of stock in the "International Automobile League Tire Company" have been sold throughout the country on representations that stock holders would be able to buy their tires from the company at factory cost and would receive enormous dividends because of the market provided by the league's membership. Not only was the number of league members greatly exaggerated in the representations made to sell this stock, the official inquiry revealed, but evidence also showed that the tire company had never built, nor operated a factory nor done business of any kind since its organization in the State of California, in 1912. The inquiry revealed what the official fraud order characterizes as "illegal and unconscionable" expense charges of more than a quarter million dollars placed, against the tire company by its president, Bidwell. It also shows that money was obtained from jobbers through a contract sold to them which purported to enable them to obtain from Bidwell standard tires at manufacturers' prices, but which actually bound Bidwell to furnish such tires only when obtainable. These contracts, it is shown, were sold to jobbers for prices varying from $100 to $1,000.

In addition to the action against him taken by the postal authorities, Bidwell has been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury, at Rochester, N. Y., charged with using the mails to further a scheme to defraud and by the Grand Jury of Fayette County, Pennsylvania, with two of his agents, on a charge of conspiracy to defraud.

Vigilance Committee Congratulates.

Merle Sidener, of Indianapolis, chairman of the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which requested the investigation, today sent the Solicitor General the following telegram:

"In the name of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and honest business I want to thank you and your associates for the incalculable service which the Post Office Department has rendered the public in closing the mails to the International Automobile League, of Buffalo. The Advertising Clubs look upon the Post Office Department as their strongest and most agressive ally in their determined campaign for truth in Advertising and honesty in selling."

SUFFRAGE NOTES AND NEWS

President Wilson has accepted "tentatively" an invitation to address the forty-eighth annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association which will assemble at Atlantic City on September 6.

* * *

The rapid progress of the votes for women movement is indicated not only by the fact that this is the first presidential election in which woman suffrage planks have formed a part of the party platforms, but by the fact that it is the first presidential election in which all the candidates have even believed in the principle of political equality for women.

* * *

In California Congressman Kent plans to take off his coat to elect Wilson and Mrs. Kent plans to take the stump to defeat him. In New Jersey former state chairman for the Progressive Party, J. A. Hopkins, is supporting Wilson and his wife is the present state chairman for the Congressional Union which is in the field to defeat him. This divergence of political interests is said to be causing no ripple on the smooth sea of domesticity in either instance.

* * *

The latest feminine drive in the field of activities supposedly for men only has been made by Mrs. Waldo Peiree, who has passed all the tests set for her at the Wright Aviation school and is preparing to qualify for a military license so that she can become the first woman aviator in the United States service. If she can fly for her country, why can't she vote in it? ask the suffragists.

* * *

In England early this month, Mr. Asquith in discussing the question of general enfranchisement in Parliament said; "General enfranchisement has been brought face to face with another problem: What are we going to do with the women?" and this erstwhile arch enemy of the suffrage cause in his country went on to admit that the representatives of the women had presented to him a perfectly unanswerable case.

* * *

It is not only Mr. Asquith whose opposition to woman suffrage has been snuffed out by the war, but a recent press report declares that prominent men of all parties have ceased opposing votes for women; that the willingness to help in the national cause displayed by the women during the war is recognized as removing the last obstacle to their receiving political justice.

There is an almost unbroken regularity in the laying out of the city streets in Mexico, but according to an old Spanish custom the name of the same street frequently changes from block to block.

GRADE SCHOOLS WILL NOT OPEN

OFFICIALS THINK IT DESIRABLE TO DELAY OPENING OF THE LOWER ROOMS.

A joint session of the Board of Health and the Board of Education was held last night at the Fourth street school. The purpose of the meeting was to determine the date of opening the local public schools. Inasmuch as this territory has been effected by the scare of infantile paralysis the officials deemed it advisable to delay opening the graded rooms and allow the children the freedom of the streets for two additional weeks.

It was decided that the regular high school departments including the pre-academic and training classes would open at the usual time, September 5th. The grades will open September 18th.

THE FUTURE.

Why make yourself sick with worry about the future when that worry cannot possibly help matters? Anxiety is the poison of human life, the parent of many sins and of more miseries. Can your solicitude alter the cause or unravel the intricacy of human events? To provide against every important danger by the employment of the most promising means is the office of wisdom, but at this point wisdom stops.—Blair.

WARRANT ISSUED FOR DR. QUINLAN

SEVERAL FULTON PARTIES WILL BE PLEASED TO HEAR THAT FAKERS WILL BE ROUNDED UP.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 26—With warrants charging grand larceny issued by the Syracuse police it is believed that a net is being drawn around the fake doctors who swindled foreigners in Syracuse, Oswego, Fulton, Schenectady, Fredonia, Utica and other cities out of thousands of dollars during the past few weeks.

The local police have received a clue to the whereabouts of the men and it is believed that they will be rounded up. They refuse to divulge the nature of the clue.

Several more complaints have come in to the local authorities as to the operations of the men and it is possible that the swindlers got away with more money in Central New York than was first estimated. It was believed that they secured about $25,-000 but this figure may grow.

The party of five, two of them representing themselves as doctors came here several weeks ago, opened offices in South Salina street and advertised in Polish and Italian papers that they could cure four diseases. Their office was swamped with patients. They accepted only foreigners turning all others away.

After four weeks the patients found the office closed and later some of them reported the matter to the police who broke in and found the place empty.

The police here will publish in all Polish and Italian newspapers in this section details of the expose of the swindle and it is believed in this way that the names of more of the victims will be brought to their attention.

The grand larceny warrant which has been issued bears only the name of "Dr. Quinlan,' as further investigation by the police lead them to believe that he and the "Dr. Hahn" are one and the same person.

The warrant was sworn out by a Pole who asserts that he paid the swindlers $115 for treatment for a chronic illness. He was given two bottles of medicine, one of which he was to take one week and one another. At the end of that time he had been ordered to return for the final "cure." He came back and found the place closed up.

BEING A FEW KIND WORDS FOR SISLER AND HORNSBY OF THE CARDINALS.

By Hamilton
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, August 26—St. Louis, besides being the alleged hottest place in the world where they play baseball, can claim one more distinction. Included in the ranks of her two major league baseball clubs are two of the game's most brilliant and versatile performers.

With George Sisler outclassing all rivals as a utility man in the American League, his fellow citizen, Roger Hornsby of the Cardinals leads all opposition in the National organization.

Hornsby, who is playing his first year as a big leaguer, has played all four positions in the infield and has done mighty well at it. Of late he has been prancing around first base, but he has done most of his playing at third base and shortstop. He is said to be some shucks as a catcher, too, but so far there has been no need for him to don wind-pad and mask.

Sisler, besides being a star performer at first base, is a great outfielder, and can pitch a bangup game. His fork-hand style of throwing the ball handicaps him some as an infielder, but a short time ago he went to third when Jimmy Austin was laid up and turned in a perfect fielding day. Sisler, a collegeproduct , never played a minor league game. He is spending his second season in the big show.

Each of these stars is a batting phenom of no mean ability. Hornsby, since the start of the season, has not fallen below the .300 mark, while Sisler is tracking the ball right close to that and probably will go over it before the close of the season.

There isn't a man in either league who can compare with these two marvels as a utility man. Probably Clarence Mitchell, of the Reds or Charley Mullen of the Yankee, comes nearest.

Mitchell is a star outfielder and can play first base satisfactorily. Likewise, he is a good pitcher.

Mullen is a flashy first sacker and can play the outfield or second base. Lee Magee, of the Yanks is an excellent infielder as well as an outfielder.

Joe Tinker, manager of the Cubs, is about through looking for shortstops. Tinker declared a few days ago he is thinking seriously of getting back into the game himself. This is about the third similar announcement Tinker has made this season.

* * *

"Bill" Donocan has accomplished wonders with the Yankees. He is certain to be retained for next year.

* * *

James C. Dunn, president of the Cleveland Club, says he will pay $50,000 for another ball player next winter.

* * *

White Sox fans see little hope for Ted Jourdan, first baseman purchased from the St. Joseph Western League Club. Jack Ness and Jacques Fournier have been doing great work for the Comiskey clan.

* * *

There will be two boxing clubs in the field this winter in Milwaukee. This Cream City Club, headed by Tom Andrews, will have the auditorium again, but a place to stage the shows on the National Club, operated by the Mulkern-Steinel Organization, has not been picked.

* * *

Earl Yingling, a former left hand hurler with Brooklyn, will have a chance in the American League. The Senators have taken him from Minneapolis. He is quite a hitter as well as a heady, dependable pitcher.

ARTIST BLAKELOCK DRIVEN INSANE BY WANT SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

(By United Press)

Middletown, N. Y., August 26—Ralph Albert Blakelock, the famous artist who has been confined in the state asylum here ever since he went insane over the poverty of his family seventeen years ago, is gone today to a private sanitarium at Lynnwood Lodge, N. J., where his returning faculties are expected to become completely normal.

It was not until many years after he came to the asylum here that Blakelock was elected to membership in the National Academy. When he lost his mind he had been selling what he could of his now world famous and extremely valuable moonlight scenes for scarce enough to buy food for a few days.

About a year ago Blakelock showed signs of returning sanity and unmistakable evidences of the return of clouded genius. His fellow American artists started a fund to provide for him at a private sanitarium, with a cottage in which he will paint the picture marking his election to the Academy. Blakelock's family will not be with him.

FOUR REAL FINDS IN FIVE YEARS

So Says Veteran Baseball Player In Talking of Men.

HORNSBY SURPASSES ALL.

Old Timer Declares St. Louis Nationals' Star Diamond Performer Is Best of Lot—Robertson, Sisler and Kauff Other Great Performers.

A pitcher who has been in the major leagues for thirteen years, who is still able to hold his own and who declines the use of his name for reasons that are obvious declares that the four valuable players of the last five years—new ones, he means—are Davy Robertson, George Sisler, Benny Kauff and Hornsby.

Having seen this old bird pitch his first game, his last and most of those in between, his observations must be considered seriously.

"Benny Kauff is a much better ball player than the fans of the National league appear to believe," he said, "and when I say that I don't mind telling you that I was prejudiced against him at the start. He is a corking ball player, and he'll be better next year than this."

"Why not this time?" I asked.

"Simply because he's too anxious to make good. Next year he will settle down and pick out only the best that the pitchers have to offer. Already he is a great base runner, and all he needs to hit as well as any of them is patience.

DAVY ROBERTSON, NEW YORK GIANTS' STERLING OUTFIELDER.

"The pitchers have got on to Kauff, and every man in the league knows that all he's got to do is pitch bad balls to Benny and he will fall for them. He will hit at anything."

"But as to Robertson?"

"Well, I'll tell you," said the old timer. "Davy Robertson is one of the greatest ball players that ever lived. He also swings wildly; but, remember, Robertson has long arms and can reach bad balls that Kauff cannot touch. He is a vicious swinger, and once he gets hold of one it's 'good night.' He also has the advantage of beating out 'fluke' bounders. Davy, you know, is the fastest man in the world going to first base. Cobb or anybody else is not in his class.

"Hornsby," said the veteran, "I consider the greatest find of the last ten years. He can hit anything, but when a pitcher tries to feed him what he doesn't want he'll curl up and wait. Hornsby is a much better waiter than either Kauff or Robertson. He is as cold as ice.

"I know that young fellow well, and we often have a lot of fun out of him. He comes from Fort Worth, Tex., and has an accent that is a bird.

" 'You can certainly hit that old pill,' one of the boys said to him the other day after he had made four straight safeties.

" 'I know,' he said, 'but I simply cain't he'p it.'

"And that's a pretty good tipoff on his ability as a walloper.

"Sisler is of immense value because he can play in any position, but he is not better in any one of those positions than either of the players I have mentioned.

While this veteran pitcher would not permit the use of his name in criticism of other players, it can be said that he has pitched regularly in the major league since 1903.

He has seen them all come and go, and when he declares Kauff, Robertson, Hornsby and Sisler to be the best it is almost a good betting proposition.

U. S. HAS TORPEDO CATCHER.

Connecticut Man's Invention to Be Tested at Newport.

A new "torpedo catcher" to be tested officially by the United States authorities arrived in New London, Conn., from Bridgeport and was towed to the torpedo station at Newport.

The torpedo catcher was invented by Fred Lapan of Milford, Conn., and is reported to be the only successful one of its kind. Its use by the United States government seems assured. The inventor asserts it will absolutely protect ships from damage by torpedoes. It will be used also for saving torpedoes during practice.

The catcher is an arrangement of half inch wire cables in net form on an L shaped sliding steel frame and is hung from the ship's sides about twenty-five feet away, from the water line down. While thirty pounds' pressure is required to explode the warhead of a torpedo, less than a pound pressure trips this net, which is "fool proof" and works from any angle.

As the torpedo hits the net its head is held, and the striking releases hydraulic pressure, which raises the lower frame of the catcher and the rear end of the torpedo above water.

Mr. Long left a large tract of farming land in Lebanon county and a good sized personal estate in New York. He left $1,000 to the Reformed Lutheran church of Newmanstown.

HUGHES ANXIOUS TO ATTEND FAIR

Hopes Eastern Speaking Tour Will Include Syracuse.

STARTED PERMANENT PLANT

As Governor of New York Hughes Did More Than Any Other Man to Put State Fair In Class With Great Exhibitions of the Country—Signed Appropriations For First Permanent Buildings After Harmonious Plan.

While withholding a definite answer to the invitation from the New York State Fair Commission to attend this year's exhibition to be held at Syracuse, September 11-16th, Charles Evans Hughes has, in a letter to Lieutenant Governor Edward Schoeneck, reiterated his deep interest in the Fair and expressed the hope that his eastern speaking tour would be arranged to include Syracuse.

Assurances have been offered by the Lieutenant Governor, as head of the State Fair Commission, that pending the formulation of Justice Hughes' itinerary for September, nothing will be done toward the completion of the State Fair program and the Commission will be prepared to welcome Justice Hughes on any day of the Fair.

The State Fair got its first real start under the administration of Charles Evans Hughes as Governor of New York. That it now ranks with the leading agricultural exhibitions of the country, rendering valuable service annually in the promotion of agriculture and commercial interests, is attributed to the foresight and business sense of Governor Hughes.

While the management of the fair had been under a State Commission for eight years, the future of the exhibition was more or less uncertain until Hughes became Governor. He found time from the other big problems confronting him as the State's Chief Executive to diagnose the State Fair's ailment. He decided that the fair, to win the respect and support of the big exhibitors, should have a permanent plant of a character in keeping with the rich interests it sought to represent. He was opposed to any outlay for new buildings until a comprehensive, harmonious plan for a permanent plant had been adopted. Such a plan was secured as the result of a special competition between architects, and it was subsequently accepted by the Legislature. The wisdom of this course is seen in the excellent arrangement of the buildings thus far completed under the plan.

With the permanent plan settled, Governor Hughes signed the first appropriations for new buildings of brick and concrete and the magnificent Manufacturers and Liberal Arts building—pronounced the most imposing fair building in the country—represents the cornerstone of the Hughes plant. During Governor Hughes' second term the State Grange, Dairy and State Institutions buildings, of light gray brick and connected by towering white colonnades, and the fireproof stalls for race and show horses were erected. Later administrations added the Cattle and Poultry buildings.

These fair buildings are unequaled in this country. They have awakened the interest of exhibitors not alone in New York, but in distant states, and stirred the pride of the citizens of New York. When the race track has been changed to open a large unused section of the grounds, the sum of $100,000, having been appropriated for this work at the last session of the Legislature, and the remaining buildings, called for in the permanent plan, including a large horticultural hall, are erected, the plant will be in keeping with the Empire State's position in the nation and more truly typify the State's rich agricultural and commercial interests.

Governor Hughes took the initiative and started the fair in the right direction. No wonder the Commission wants him to return and enjoy the fruits of his work. It is promised that his reception at the Fair will furnish satisfying evidence that his work for the exhibition is appreciated by the people of the State of New York.

SPECIAL PRIZES FOR DOG SHOWS

The fact that there are 408 classes for all breeds of dogs exhibited at the bench shows of this country gives an idea of the size and importance of the fourth annual Dog Show at the New York State Fair.

The special prizes offered by the leading Kennel Clubs of America and individual fanciers reaches the record number of 237, which is bound to bring a large entry and to stimulate competition.

Among the breeds of dogs to be exhibited are Great Danes, Russian wolf hounds, greyhounds, foxhounds, pointers, setters, spaniels, collies, sheepdogs, bulldogs, Airedale terriers, French bulldogs, Dalmatians and Chow Chows.

BIG POULTRY SHOW.

Record Entry at State Fair Expected to Be Passed This Year.

The eyes of the poultry world are now turned toward Syracuse. The exhibition at the State Fair last year had a total of over 9300 birds, which was a record for the Fair, and the number this year is epected to exceed 10,000.

Syracuse today is the leader of fall shows in the United States, and a winning there is recognized the country over. Also the opportunity for sales at the State Fair is excellent, as it is the best class of farmers and fanciers throughout the east that make up the attendance each day. Also more people will view an exhibit in one day at the State Fair than in a whole week at a large winter show.

The Syracuse show has gained in popularity and prestige because each and every exhibitor is treated and cared for in the best possible manner and because the Commission offers very liberal regular and special prizes.

State Fairs to Profit by the Displays Made at Panama Exposition.

LANTERN SLIDES A FEATURE.

Educational Department Has Impressive Exhibit, Showing Extent of School System — Hospital Commission Will Show Its Grand Prize Exhibit—Big Display of Native Fish.

Elaborate preparations are being made for an attractive and comprehensive exhibit of the work of the various State departments and institutions at the State Fair, which is to be held in Syracuse September 11th to 16th. The interior of the spacious building set apart for institution exhibits on the Fair grounds has been remodelled and presents a very attractive appearance. The lack of harmony in the booths heretofore evident in this building has been eliminated by the introduction of a uniform architectural plan and color scheme. Moreover, the various booths are especially arranged to meet the needs of the several departments.

Because of the return of the splendid exhibits from the Panama-Pacific Exposition, the State departments will present this year displays costing many times the usual State appropriation for this purpose.

The State Education Department will install its complete Panama-Pacific Exposition exhibit, which cost approximately $30,000. One big feature of this exhibit is the topographical map of the State, 27 by 36 feet in size, on which are placed 13,000 electric bulbs. These electric lights are in several colors, each of which designates a separate class of schools. The lights flash in succession continuously, fascinating the spectators and giving them a lasting impression of the magnitude and variety of the educational work of the State. Besides the big map, the Education Department will show a large architectural model of the Educational Building, and a splendid collection of lantern slides, illustrating the work carried on in the various schools of the State.

The State Hospital Commission will display the beautiful exhibit of the care and treatment of the insane that won the grand prize at the Exposition. One of the special attractions of this exhibit is a composite model of State hospital for the insane, which sets forth many of the best features now found in the thirteen state hospitals. The grounds of this model hospital cover a plat 2000 feet wide by 3200 feet long, constituting an area of 150 acres. The buildings on the plat are copies of some of the most serviceable buildings now in use, in the several State hospitals, and are arranged on the model so as to form ONE comprehensive efficient institution. This model was considered one of the best of its kind shown at the Exposition. Smaller models will show the reception building at the Hudson River State Hospital, and the tuberculosis pavilion at the Binghamton State Hospital. Large wall paintings and charts will show the treatment according to patients in the State hospitals, and the scientific work carried on by the Bureau of Statistics and the Psychiatric Institute.

The State Prison Department will demonstrate its wonderful finger print and Bertillon systems of identification, and will set forth some of the newer ideas in prison management.

The Conservation Commission is rebuilding its aquarium and will give visitors to the Fair an opportunity to see a large variety of native fish in conditions resembling their natural habitat.

The State Engineer's Department will demonstrate by working models the construction and operation of the barge canal, with its great locks and terminals.

The State Health Department will show, by a series of carefully worked out models and charts, the effective work now being conducted in the State for the conservation of health. This exhibit, which has been carefully designed and prepared by experts, should prove one of the most valuable features of the whole Fair.

Taken all in all, the exhibits of the State departments will far outrank anything of the kind previously attemped in this State.

A SPELLING BEE.

State Education Department to Conduct Competition at Fair.

An old fashioned Spelling Bee, but on an elaborate scale, with all sections of the state represented by candidates, will be conducted by the State Education department at the State Fair.

Dr. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, will be in personal charge of the contest, which will begin at 10 a. m. Tuesday, Sept. 12.

To the four winners of this contest prizes in gold will be awarded, and each contestant who represents his county in the competition will be presented with a certificate of proficiency bearing the seal of New York State.

PLANNING THE BIG "KARNIVAL"

Patriotism the Keynote of Mammoth Spectacle at Syracuse During Fair.

ELABORATE AUTO PARADES.

Many Costly Floats Now In Course of Construction — Military Units Remaining In State to Take Part—All Professional Performances to Be Given Free In Streets of Syracuse.

Patriotism is to be the keynote of the 1916 Ka-Noo-No Karnival in the streets of Syracuse each night during the week of the State Fair.

In these days of war, strife and movements for preparedness no more impressive subject could have been chosen for this great annual festival provided by the citizens of Syracuse for the entertainment of State Fair visitors.

All of the popular night parades will smack of militarism. The float parade, which in the past has been one of the most elaborate and popular, will this year carry the story of American independence and patriotism. Historical figures that are familiar to every school child as well as the grown-ups will live again in the flesh as they are drawn through the brilliantly lighted streets by gaily caparisoned horses. Scenes that have been identified with the history of this country and events that will live forever in the minds of the American public will be portrayed in this mammoth pageant that requires hours in passing a given spot.

Plans for the automobile parade, as formulated so far, point to the largest and most elaborate that has yet been held. It is in this parade that the real novelties in float building are seen. Ranging from comedy floats to mammoth structures costing hundred of dollars to build, this pageant represents an enormous expenditure.

The amateur spectacle which in the past has been a feature of the karnival will this year make way for an all-professional performance to be given each night in Clinton Square.

An entire circus employing hundreds of performers will be transported to Syracuse for the week, and the Karnival Committee in charge of the annual festival has striven to secure the highest class acts now in this country.

It is estimated that the Karnival costs the people of Syracuse over $50,000 when the expense of decorations is included. It has long attracted attention as the "Mardi Gras of the North" and has done much to advertise Syracuse and to draw attention to the hospitality of her people.

FARM GIRLS' CAMP.

Representatives of the State Department of Agriculture are planning for the instruction and entertainment along educational lines of the fifty young women who will compose the first Farm Girls' Camp in connection with the New York State Fair.

While on the grounds the girls will lodge in the upper part of the Woman's Building, which has been transformed into a dormitory.

Of the assistants appointed to make the initial Farm Girls' Camp a success, are Miss Grace Cheesman of the State Agricultural Department of Alfred University, who will give instruction along textile work lines and Mrs. Ora Phelps, former institute lecturer in connection with the State Agricultural Department at Canton, who will demonstrate nature study topics.

THE HIGH JUMPING CONTESTS, WHICH GENERALLY PROVIDE A SPECIAL SATURDAY FEATURE AT THE STATE FAIR, NEVER FAIL TO ATTRACT INTEREST. ABOVE IS SHOWN ONE OF THE CONTESTANTS LAST YEAR CLEARING THE BARS AT EIGHT FEET. SOME OF THE BEST JUMPERS IN THE COUNTRY ARE ENTERED AT THE FAIR THIS YEAR.

THE MOUNTED POLICE AT THE STATE FAIR

New York's Expert Horsemen to Give Interesting Exhibition at Syracuse.

One of the most spectacular and interesting exhibitions at the New York State Fair will be contributed by the traffic squad of New York's Mounted Police.

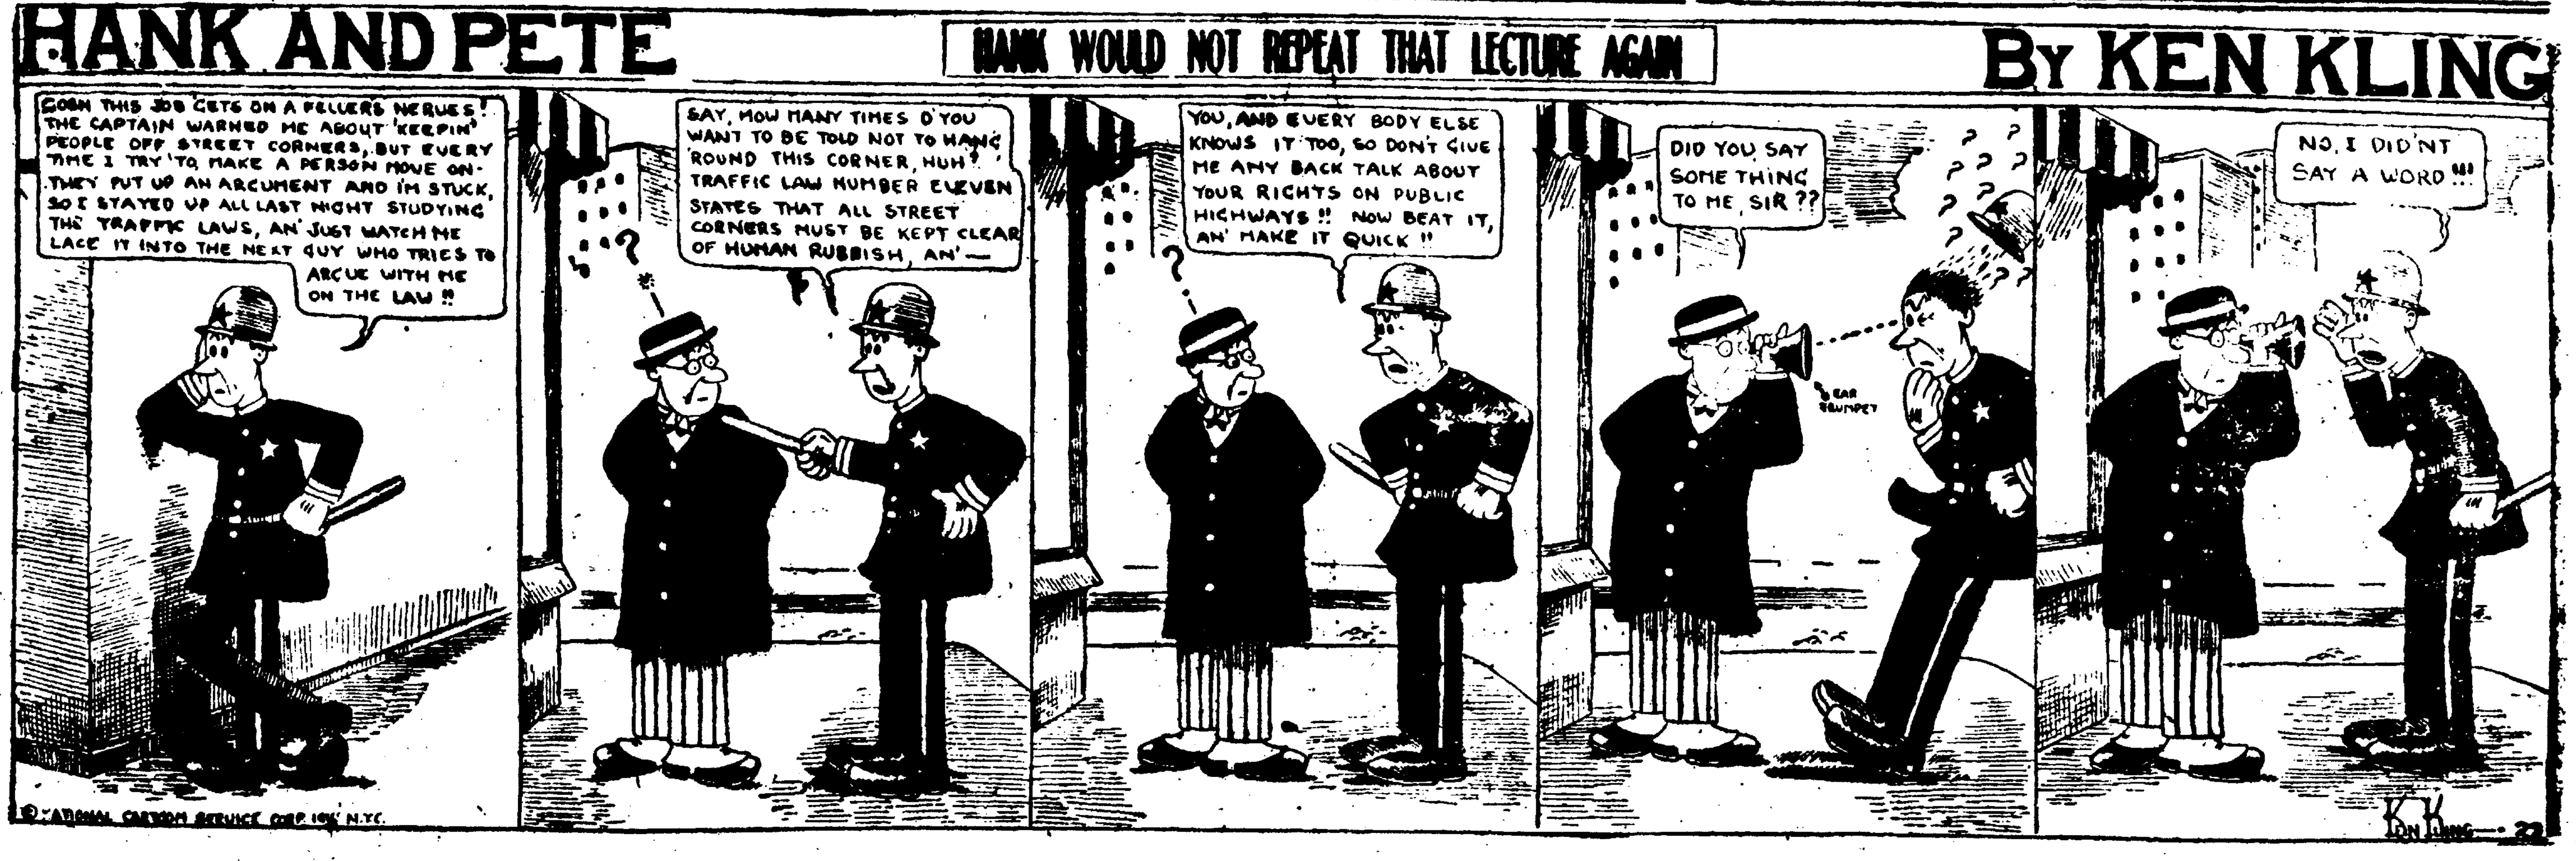
These men who are entrusted with the handling of the great traffic problems of the metropolis are rated as the most skillful horsemen in the world and they are mounted on horses superior to the horses of any army of the world. They will appear in the infield of the mile track daily in exhibition drills and perform thrilling feats on the track, as rescuing a woman from the back of a runaway horse. Also they will give practical demonstrations in the handling of crowds.

Police Commissioner Arthur Woods of New York is expected to be the guest of the State Fair Commission. He is glad to have his department render the service to the state, that comes from the exhibitions by this fine body of men who are pointed to as an example that might help to elevate the standard in police departments of up-state cities.

It is planned to have the men leave the fair grounds on some afternoon and do police duty in the rural districts, spending the night in various barns in the farming district. This, it is thought, will give the people an idea of how rural police work is done.

Grangers Resting at the Fair

THE LARGE, AIRY ASSEMBLY HALL OF THE GRANGE BUILDING AT THE STATE FAIR IS ALWAYS A POPULAR RESTING PLACE FOR FAMILIES OF THE GRANGERS. TUESDAY, SEPT. 12, OF THE FAIR HAS BEEN DESIGNATED AS GRANGE DAY, AND SPECIAL EXCURSION TRAINS WILL BE OPERATED FROM DISTANT PARTS OF THE STATE ON THIS DAY FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE GRANGERS.



PLEADS FOR BLIND

Calls Upon American Women to Help War Victims.

PLANS TO TEACH TRADES.

With Her Unceasing Zest For Good Deeds, Mrs. Whitney Makes a Special Plea to Help Alleviate Suffering In European Countries.

One of the latest steps taken by the sympathizers of the allies is an appeal issued by the B. F. B. (British, French, Belgian) Permanent Blind Relief fund, with headquarters in New York, over the names of Lady Arthur Paget of the fund's executive committee and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, one of the honorary secretaries, calling upon the women of America for aid. The appeal says in part:

"Unless you act these thousands of women will be condemned for the rest of their lives to an existence of hopeless drudgery and hardship.

"For humanity's sake help these European women. They are your sisters, even though you have never seen them.

"Six months' training will educate the blind men dependent on them in trades not requiring sight. Even your single donation alone will go far toward enabling one of these sightless men to support himself and partly support his family for the rest of his life.

"These women stretch appealing hands to you from across the ocean. Make at least one of them permanently happy and her husband, father or son particularly useful by sending us a contribution.

"The sooner you act the sooner one brave, good, faithful woman will be rescued from an existence of despair and crushing slavery and the sooner the man who is tragically anxious to support her will be saved from a life of uselessness and hopelessness."

Mrs. Whitney is also a sculptor of rare achievement, and frequently her beautiful studio becomes the setting of some charity benefit. She lately voiced one of her own art axioms in these words:

"Beauty without intelligence is the beauty of an unlighted lamp. There must be brain to direct the expression of beauty."

FOR THE SEWING ROOM.

Hints For Women Who Do Their Own Family Sewing.

A chiffonier or bureau in the sewing room will be found indispensable. One drawer is used for the stock room, and the small wares are kept therein; one is for patterns, one for pieces to use for patching and mending and one for clothing to be mended or fixed over.

An old iron [illegible] in a two pound sugar bag is just the thing to hold your work while sewing. It takes the place of the old fashioned bird that is seen sometimes.

If the pins are kept in a deep saucer one can pick them up or throw them down easily when fitting a dress.

Take a board of the desired length and width and drive a number of nails through two inches apart. These will hold the spools of thread. The numbers can be quickly seen, and there will be no tangling with the scissors.

Cream jars are excellent for buttons, as they can be classified and easily distinguished therein.

An old sheet spread on the floor will catch all threads and can be easily shaken, leaving the room tidy with no exertion.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

A Skirt Both Fashionable And Practical

6894

A two-piece skirt of fine serge gathered under a narrow belt at the back and closing at the left side. It has inserted pockets.

For women to whom the draped skirt does not appeal this model is recommended. It is one of the advance Autumn designs cut in two pieces, with inserted pockets. The top is gathered at the back under a narrow belt—all of the ultra fashionable belts are narrow—and closes at the left side seam. In medium size the model requires 2⅝ yards 44-inch material, with ⅞ yard belting two inches wide for the stay. The pocket also requires ½ yard of lining 27 inches wide.

The home dressmaker will not find it at all difficult to follow today's directions for cutting the skirt, because the rules are illustrated by a cutting guide. Note how the back gore is laid on the lengthwise fold of material so that a seam may be avoided. Next to this is placed the front gore, on the lengthwise fold also. Above the front gore is the piecing for the side of the back gore, the pocket and the belt, each laid on a lengthwise thread of material.

Serge is a very desirable material for this skirt. There is no question of its being the most practical for a design for general wear. Gabardine and velvet, however, are to be used for many of the ultra-exclusive separate skirts of early Fall. In all probability many of the skirts will be longer, although the shoe-top length prevails at present. Even conservative women agree that there is something graceful as well as sanitary about the short skirt. Exaggeration has caused many calumnies to be uttered against the design, but hung at a proper length the short skirt fulfils its mission in life far more competently than does its lengthier rival.

One need not go far afield in search of inspiration. The summer has brought out a host of pretty skirts conservative enough to be fairly sure of holding their desirability even after the new fashions of the autumn are in evidence.

Fish Out of Water.

When a living fish is taken out of the water it kicks vigorously, erects its fins, gasps convulsively, and in a short time, fifteen to thirty minutes, it becomes motionless. But the muscles still possess what physiologists term "irritability," which may continue for several hours, in some fish lasting from ten to fifteen hours. In such fish as the salmon it lasts longer than in cod or haddock, owing to the smaller amount of contained water in the muscles of the former.—All Outdoors.

Veracity of the Cormorant.

Fishing with cormorants used to be an English royal sport. The bird's voracity is such that some have wished to spell its name "corvorant," though the true derivation is "corvus marinus," sea cow. The contrast between the cormorant when darting after its prey, as one sees it at the zoo, and when standing, the picture of dull lethargy, must have been present to Milton when he described Satan sitting in the tree of life "like a cormorant."—London Chronicle.

FOOD THAT FEEDS

Why Do We Eat, Anyway, In Summer Time?

WHAT IS A GOOD MENU?

Most Housewives Don't Know Food Values to the Extent of Giving a Family, Especially Growing Children the Proper Proportions of Protein.

One of the most important things that every housewife should know about food is its value as nourishment for the body. We must in fact have foods that feed. There are several kinds of values that all human bodies need in the food they eat and without which they cannot be healthy and well nourished. These are:

Material to build the body and repair waste.

Material to give heat and strength.

Material to enrich and cleanse the blood.

Material to form bone.

Let us take them in order.

It may be said of the body building material that, in a sense, it is the most important of all, because we cannot live without it, while we might go on living for some time without most of the others (though we could not long remain healthy). Cheese, lentils, haricot beans, split peas, meat, fish, oatmeal, eggs, nuts and, to a somewhat less extent, good bread, all have much body building material.

Fats of all kinds, such as butter, cream, suet, dripping, margarine and nut butter, give warmth and energy, strength and power to work. Sugar, molasses and golden sirup are also heat giving, and so are starchy foods, such as potatoes, rice and cornstarch. These foods, however, contain very little body building material.

Vegetables and fruit (other than peas, beans and lentils) contain scarcely any of the body building materials, but they give the body what no other foods give—that is, certain juices which purify and enrich the blood and without which no one can be healthy. It is these precious juices which are thrown away when vegetables are boiled in water and the water poured down the sink. If these juices were taken by people every day in properly cooked vegetables there would not be nearly so much money spent at the drug store, as they are the best possible form of natural medicine.

The bone forming materials are to be found principally in milk and cheese, good bread, oatmeal and in onions and many green vegetables. They are absolutely necessary for growing children. The result of children not getting enough of them is only too often to be seen in bad teeth and stunted growth.

Grape Juice Pudding.

One cupful of grape juice, one cupful of water, one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of tapioca, the juice of one lemon, a pinch of salt and stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Soak the tapioca for fifteen minutes in a cup of water; place in saucepan, add the sugar; when hot add the grape juice. Cook until the tapioca is transparent, then add the lemon juice and salt. Lastly fold in the beaten whites of the eggs.

Hen Raises Quails.

Bedford, Ind.—A son of Eliza Smith when working in a wheat field found a quail's nest containing thirteen eggs. He took the eggs to his home and put them under a setting hen. The hen hatched them out. Since then Biddy has raised them with her other chicks and seems as proud of them as though they were her own kin. She looks after them the same as the others, feeding them tiny grasshoppers, etc. The little quails run to her when she calls them and hover under her at night the same as her own chicks.

Too Much.

"I don't get rested at night. Have harrowing dreams."

"Me too. I don't mind these one reel dreams, but the five reelers break up your rest like thunder."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Victor Hugo's Double.

Victor Hugo had a real double in flesh and blood, who exploited his physical resemblance to the man of genius. He cut his beard like Hugo's, copied the master's dress in its smallest details and so for eighteen years divided with the master the admiration of the public. His especial delight was to pose in a poetical attitude in front of a Punch and Judy show. He did this at a particular spot every Thursday afternoon for years, thoroughly enjoying the murmurs of curiosity and applause proceeding from the gaping crowd which he deceived. FEEDING AN ARMY

Service of Food One of Stupendous Tasks of War.

ALL CAREFULLY PREPARED.

Collection, Dispatch, Distribution and Preparation of Food Is a Colossal Work Which Ordinary Civilian Finds It Difficult to Comprehend.

London.—The mighty work of serving ammunition to the hungry, fast firing guns of the battling armies in Europe is a subject that thrills the vast newspaper reading population of America, but the service of food to the warring troops is one of the stupendous tasks imposed by the war, but, lacking the spectacular element, this subject does not attract as much attention as the service of shell, shrapnel, rifle and machine gun cartridges, trench mortar bombs and hand grenades.

No one knows how many soldiers are in the field in Europe today, but for the sake of illustration, setting that number down as 10,000,000, the daily consumption of food by that number of troops is roughly 12,000 tons. The collection, dispatch, distribution and preparation of this food is a colossal work which the ordinary civilian finds it difficult to comprehend.

Rations are prepared in the field kitchens and served to men, as at the call to mess they file past the kitchen. In all the armies are field ovens for baking bread and portable kitchens for preparing the ration in the form of stews, soups or hash, or in whatever other way appears best for the health, comfort and spirits of the men.

In all the armies is an emergency ration issued to men when they are to be sent on duty which may keep them away from the field kitchen. The men carry this ration in their haversack. A great deal of thought has been expended on these rations, so that a soldier will have the greatest nourishment in food in the least weight and bulk.

A few stories have come over the wires or through the air about hungry soldiers in the European armies, but men conversant with military matters know that these armies, fighting as they are, are well fed and are getting as much, perhaps more, food than called for in the field ration of peace times.

TO AID BELGIAN CHILDREN.

Swiss Refuge For 500 In the Fighting Zone.

The Rockefeller foundation announced that it had received from Warwick Greene, director of its war relief commission, an appeal to the American public for the relief of about 500 Belgian children who were living in the fighting zone. Money from Swiss sources provided for the removal of 760 children who were similarly situated to the canton of Fribourg, in Switzerland, where provisions have been made for their protection, maintenance and education.

The first appeal for the 500 still neglected children was made by the queen of the Belgians, and the Rockefeller foundation took the matter up with the Belgian relief fund in New York and with the New England relief fund in Boston. The cost of maintenance of the 500 children was estimated at $37,000 for the first year, or 40 cents per capita each day. The cost for the second year would be $51,000, or 28 cents per capita each day.

In order that the removal of the children might not be delayed the Rockefeller foundation instructed the director of the war relief commission to authorize the removal of the children to Switzerland. Toward the necessary cost the Belgian relief fund of this city appropriated $25,000.

The New England Belgian committee appropriated $5,000 and undertook to raise $5,000 more and the refugees' relief fund appropriated $1,000 and agreed to furnish $500 a month until further notice. Contributions for this purpose may be sent to the Belgian relief fund, 10 Bridge street, New York, and marked "Belgian children fund."

COMPETENT HELP IS IN DEMAND

NO TROUBLE FOR THOSE SEEKING WORK TO FIND IT

The demand for farm labor in Central New York has somewhat diminished during the past few days according to report of officers at the state employment bureau in Syracuse. During the past few days many of the requests of farmers for additional help have been promptly filled, but previous to that time they were forced to wait some time before help could be secured.

The wages being paid by the farmers this year are the highest that have been known in many years, farm hands receiving anywhere from $2 to $2.75 per day and their board and in some instances as high as $3. Some sections of the state report that even at $3 per day it is extremely hard to secure the necessary amount of help, and that if conditions are not remedied there will be considerable damage to crops.

There are at the present time many applications for skilled laborers on file at the office and from time to time many workmen have been able to secure very lucrative employment through the efforts of the bureau.

The proposition of supplying domestic help is becoming more acute as fall approaches, when many who have been away for the summer return and open their homes and face the problem of securing competent domestics. State officials are busy formulating plans whereby they will cope with the situation as it arises and expect to be able shortly to list a considerable number of this kind of much needed help.

DEMOCRATS EXTRAVAGANT

Washington, D. C., August 26, (Special)—Senator Taggart, of Indiana, the recently elected Democrat who will run for Senator in Indiana again this fall, has taken occasion to lecture the Democratic party for its "gross extravagance", following in the footsteps of Representative Fitzgerald, the Democratic Chairman of the House Appropriations committee. "The power to tax is the power to destroy, and we do not want to destroy the people's earning power by over-taxation." said Mr. Taggart. "Instead of squandering money and passing pork barrel bills would it not be better to cut out these useless expenditures? But if it be the fixed and determined purpose of Congress to go on yearly increasing these appropriations, would it not be better to turn them to things that would help the people instead of pouring money into sink-holes, never to return a cent upon the investment?"

The Senator declared that every Senator and Congressman would go bankrupt were he to manage his own affairs with the extravagance Congress is displaying in spending the people's money. Coming immediately on top of Governor Hughes' denunciation of Democratic extravagance, as well as the signing of the $42,000,000 Rivers and Harbors "Pork" Bill by President Wilson, Senator Taggart's speech has occasioned the utmost indignation at Democratic headquarters and there is talk of leaving the Senator to shift for himself in his efforts to obtain re-election in Indiana.

That the time is rapidly approaching when all lands not suited for agricultural crops will be devoted to growing forests is the belief expressed by James W. Toumey, head of the Yale School of Forestry, in an address given before the summer session at the state college of agriculture.

In view of the long time involved in bringing a forest to the point of cutting, forest management is essentially a question for federal, state and municipal governments. The continued production of timber from a given tract, for an indefinite period, implies permanency of organization. This can best be attained, according to Professor Toumey, in the case of a large tracts through some form of government ownership.

Municipal forests date back to the Tenth century and today about sixty per cent. of the cities and towns of continental Europe have theeir own forests. Last year the municipal forest of Zurich, Switzerland, produced a revenue of $20,000. Because forest crops differ from any agricultural crop in the time required to reach maturity, there is little incentive for private owners to plant timber trees—at least private owners will not plant and care for trees that are to be harvested one hundred years afterwards. Private ownership of forests in the past often resulted in exploitation, while government ownership makes for conservation, according to observers who have studied the history of forests in all countries. Professor Toumey thinks that our woodland parks should be handled as forests, thus serving three distinct purposes: (1) recreation places; (2) protection of water supply and prevention of floods; (3) producers of revenue. "Any city, town, school, or organization that will plant and maintain a forest will leave an inheritance to the coming generations of incalculable value."

Many cities and towns in the United States are taking up the question of municipal forestry; at least one half million of communal forests have already been established in the United States. Professor Toumey looks forward to the time when large areas will be managed as communal forests. According to him "administrative efficiency is not incompatible with public ownership of the forests."

Residents of New York state who are interested in the municipal forests will find information concerning them in a publication of the New York state college of agriculture entitled: "County, Town and Village application to the college at Ithaca, Forests," which will be mailed upon N. Y.

GEOMETRY ON THE BROILER.

As a Study It Is Pretty Well Roasted by This Caustic Critic.

Euclid is a gentleman from whom credentials ought to be required. He has long held a prominent place in education as a matter of tradition. "Just why should John and Sally study plane geometry, and indeed how does it come about that they are studying it?" That is a question which cannot be put too plainly to teachers of mathematics.

I shall consider for a moment two possible answers: Geometry is useful, you may be told, or geometry affords excellent mental discipline. Geometry is useful. Well, how useful and in what ways? Professor David E. Smith, professor of the teaching of mathematics in Teachers' college, tells us, "Not more than 25 per cent of the propositions (in geometry) have any genuine applications outside of geometry." And a distinguished physicist has assured me that the 75 per cent of propositions that are of no use are not even needed to prove the 25 per cent that are of some use. The teachers of plane geometry have therefore a very considerable task if they are going to justify the time spent on geometry on the ground that geometry is useful.

Nor is their task easier if they take the other horn of the dilemma. Suppose one did get "mental discipline" from geometry. Is it the sort of mental discipline that life calls for and gives?

Geometry as taught is a deductive science. That is, from certain assumptions called axioms and postulates a long series of propositions is developed. If the study of geometry really developed that kind of thinking, whom would it help but lawyers? For practical life calls for a very different type of thinking.

In actual life people observe, or they should observe, and on this basis make a limited inference which leads to action. If the action taken fails, they observe further, construct other hypotheses and act again. It is the method of trial on error.

If there is to be any mental discipline, ought it not to be of the type represented by science rather than the type represented by the conventional treatment of geometry? — Abraham Flexner in Atlantic Monthly.

Evelyn and the Simplon Pass.

The Simplon pass was a famous highway of travel long before Napoleon constructed the highroad. Milton came home that way from his grand tour, and so did John Evelyn. The latter traveler went in fear of his life, not only expecting avalanches to fall on him, but being apprehensive lest bears and wolves should assail him. The only actual harm which happened, however, was that his companion's dog killed a goat belonging to one of the peasants and that heavy compensation had to be paid—"a pistole," says the diary, "for the goat and ten more for attempting to ride away."

Compulsory Sport.

"So you've joined a golf club?"

"Had to do it," replied Mr. Growcher. "The only chance of seeing some of the men I have to do business with is to meet 'em on the golf links."—Washington Star.

Hughes Covering Much Territory

(By United Press)

New York, August 28—Charles E. Hughes intends to lose no opportunity to speak in as many states as possible before the presidential campaign is over. National Chairman Willcox announced today that Hughes will speak in New Hampshire on his Maine trip in September. On Thursday, September 7th, he will go from Portsmouth, N. H., to Hampton Beach and speak at a carnival. Leaving Maine Hughes will go to Boston where he will spend Sunday. From there he will go to Syracuse and be at the state fair on Monday, September 11th. His itinerary after that date has not been completed.

WILL NOT BE SUED FOR HUNTER BROS. CHECKS

(Special from A. D. Theobald)

Syracuse, N. Y., August 28—With hearings into the affairs of the Hunter Brothers, relating to the alleged use of $114,000 to pay personal debts, concluded in Fulton, Watertown, Clayton and Philadelphia, N. Y. The investigating committee headed by special master MacNaught, is considering today where the next hearing will be held.

It has been decided as a result of the hearings already held that the three Syracuse banks who received checks drawn on the Hunter Arms Company by the Hunter brothers, before the failure of the Fulton concern will not be sued for the return of the money. It has been proved conclusively that the money paid the Hunters in this way was to take up their own notes which had been given for the benefit of the company.

Loans were secured at three Syracuse banks at first on notes of the Hunter Arms Company. When these debts became large the banks were inclined to shut down on the credit of the company. Later the Hunter brothers secured loans from local banks turning in the proceeds of their personal notes to the funds of the company.

When these checks were found by the trustees it was believed that the money had been paid to the banks to pay personal obligations of the Hunters and the creditors opened up the procedure for its return. Although the transactions were actually individual on the part of the Hunters all the money went into the company.

Roumania At War With Austria

Paris, August 28—It was officially announced that Roumania has declared war on the Central Powers.

ITALY IS EXCITED WAR ON GERMANY

(By United Press)

Rome, August 28—Italy declared war on Germany because Germany sent both land and sea forces to the aid of Austria, enabling her to concentrate her maximum effort against Italy, said an official statement received here today. A similar statement was forwarded to Germany for the war office through the Swiss government, setting forth th dec[illegible]tion of war yesterday.

With the exception of the capture of Doritz, no event, for several months has so stirred the Italian public as the news of Italy's challenge to the Kaiser. Great processions paraded through the streets shouting, "Down with Germany," and "Long live the Allies." Until midnight the crowds were in the streets singing the national [illegible]rs.

NO INDIANS AT STATE FAIR

HAVE REFUSED TO FILL THEIR ENGAGEMENT

Syracuse, N. Y., August 28—Head Chief Frank Logan, of the Onondaga tribe of Indians has his own ideas as to the duties of a real protector of his people. Frank is afraid of infantile paralysis, and because he does not want the malady to spread to the reservation he has refused to let his subjects appear in exhibitions at the state fair as promised. He has turned a deaf ear to all entreaties.

"Frank him heap much afraid," he says. "He say much white man's papooses he die all the time. Some big white man, he die, too. We send many brave, and squaw and papoose and he too catch sickness, and him die too. We want no sickness."

Several officers of the fair association have pleaded with the chief in vain. He refuses to change his attitude.

And that attitude is not alone confined to the head chief. All the less important chiefs and most of the reservation population feel the same way about the situation and unless the officials are able convincers it is probable they will not be able to change the mind of the red men.

The state fair officials had planned an Indian village. They were going to have the Indians build along house or a building made of limbs and twigs, covered with bark. This would be of historical significance for the Long House is the old Indian council chamber, and has played an important part in the fight the Indians made many years ago to resist the invasion of the white man.

It was proposed that a band of half a hundred Indians were to remain on the fair grounds for the entire week and entertain visitors with dances. Bead, willow and tapestry work, the result of Indian toil, was also to be shown, but unless the officials are able to convince the Indians that there is no fear of catching the disease all these things must be set aside because of the desire of Head Chief Grank Logan to protect his people from the White Man's plague.

ALL SCHOOLS TO REMAIN CLOSED

HIGH SCHOOL AND ALL OTHER SCHOOLS WILL NOT OPEN UNTIL SEPTEMBER 18.

At a joint meeting of the Boards of Health and Education held last Saturday night it was decided to postpone the opening of all schools until September 18th. This action was according to the recommendations from the state health department.

The superintendent of Public Schools and Rev. John L. Lindsman, superintendent of the parochial school were notified to require of each teacher and pupil to furnish a certificate of health for entrance, or a certificate showing two weeks' residence within the city prior to the opening date. This was taken as a prevention against infantile paralysis.

Dr. Hall was given permission to attend the meeting at the Willard Parker hospital at New York.

The Board authorized Dr. A. L. Hall to fumigate and place in a thoroughly sanitary condition the rooms in the Falley Seminary which are used for school purposes. The recent case of infantile paralysis occurred in this building and resulted in the death of Esther Fredinburg.

DENTISTS MUST BE REGISTERED

NEW LAW THAT GOES INTO EFFECT FRIDAY IS STRINGENT.

It is not believed the new law prohibiting dentists from doing business under other names than those men directly connected with the firm will have any great effect on members of that profession in this city when the new statute goes into effect on September 1.

Dentists generally believe that the new measure is aimed at alleged dentists who are not registered, nor who have ever taken a college course in dentistry. Some believe the law will put out of [illegible] a large number of dentists [illegible] the state, and will prevent [illegible] methods of advertising now be[illegible].

Under the new law the dentists are placed under the jurisdiction of the State Board of Regents of the State Educational System and advertising will be subject to the rules laid down by the board. It is said that heavy advertising will be done away with and only business cards will be permitted.

After September 1st the dental parlors must be run under the names of the men who operate them and signs bearing their names must be placed outside their places of business. If there is more than one chair in a dental parlor the name of the dentist who controls it must be placed over the chair. Unlicensed or unregistered dentists will not be allowed to practice, but they may be hired to do mercantile work. A fine of $50 is imposed upon any person practicing who operates without a license. Subsequent violations will be dealt with by a fine of $100.

A fine of $250 or imprisonment for six months or both is provided for a violation of the section which demands that each dentist operate under his own name and not under an incorporated name. The law reads that those concerns which have existed previous to January 1st may continue under the old names provided they comply with the law. This is the provision over which many are stumbling as they do not know which way to turn, saying that the law is liable of interpretation in more than one way.

SHIRT FACTORY IS NOW ASSURED

WILL BE LOCATED IN THE SPANSWICK FACTORY

It will be gratifying news to the citizens of Fulton to learn that the new shirt factory for our city is now an assured fact. The company has completed arrangements for a lease of space in the Spanswick factory building and the work of remodelling the plant preparatory to installing machinery was commenced today. The works will be in operation before October first and there will be fifty hands employed at the start. At least 200 more will be taken on as rapidly as they can be instructed and machinery installed for their work.

OFFICIALS THINK MISS PAYNE WAS NOT DRUGGED

Syracuse officials are prone to believe that the Miss Pearl Payne, who was injured in an automobile accident near Phoenix late Friday night or early Saturday morning was drugged before the accident.

The young woman is now at the Women's and Children's Hospital in a critical condotion suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and concussion of the brain. Physicians at the hospital give little credence to the report from Phoenix that she was under the influence of drugs.

Three other people in the car were not seriously injured.

Bulgarians Are Advancing Into Greece

(By United Press)

Athens, August 28—The Bulgarians continued their advance into Greek territory and the occupying of Greek forts at the port of Kavala. This has brought the Greeks appreciably nearer the war. No new decision was reached by the government.

The Pro-Allies demanded an immediate declaration of war against the Bulgarians and the Germans while the Pro-Germans remained silent.

The Pro-Ally meetings held throughout Greece yesterday were centered at Athens where ex-Premier Venizelos, leader of the Greek War Party, addressed 50,000 cheering adherents. He charged that King Constantin had been victimized by the Germans violating the constitution and thwarting the popular will and that committees from the leading Greek cities call upon the King and demand that he show the most benevolent neutrality to the Allies. And at the same time prepare an army for war.

WHEAT TAKES A SUDDEN DROP

(By United Press)

Chicago, August 28—The sensational drop from seven to eight cents in the wheat price on the local grain market today threw the trade into frenzy. The news that Roumania had declared war on Austria and less fascinating news in regard to the strike situation were said by the trade to be responsible. At noon today September wheat was down to eight cents below the close on Saturday.

THE EVENING TIMES

It pays to advertise in the Times from a strictly business standpoint. Some of our merchants may have carried space in this paper at a previous time through a disposition of charity, but we are not seeking or accepting business along any of those lines, nor have we done so at any time since taking possession of the paper. The merchants are now recognizing the fact that the people of Fulton are interested in the Evening Times. That they want a daily home paper. That they patronize it, subscribe for it and read it. Building up a newspaper is slow work but we have made substantial progress during the past few months and now have a paper that we know is giving good results.

Our people in the past have had to resort to weeklies, posters, out of town papers, etc., to gain publicity, but now that day is past. The Times is now a daily visitor to a large percent of the homes in Fulton and the surrounding small towns and adjacent territory, and there is no necessity for adopting or using any other means than the columns of this paper to place yourself in touch with the entire community.

And now a word regarding our news columns. The Evening Times endeavors to maintain an open forum for its readers within the limitation of permissable statements and discussion but we reserve at all times the use of our editorial columns to speak frankly upon matters of public interest. A newspaper's duties and responsibilities are many sided. It reflects life, all kinds of life, the good and the bad, with the emphasis invariably on the good, in which it glories, and as a rule subordinating the bad, which it condemns. We invite just criticism at any time and hope to feel that our citizens realize that although everything that appears in the paper is not strictly in accord with their views that in the main we are endeavoring to give them a clean, home local publication for the upbuilding of the town.

HEALTH LEGISLATION

Members of the medical profession who are busy attempting to foster and impose legislation in nearly every state in the Union whereby they can gain revenue from undesirable compulsory examinations and treatments are becoming quite numerous. Such graduates of medical schools should not be classed with the regular physician who has completed his course in college and is enjoying a remunerative practice that he is receiving from willing patients who are going to him for advice and treatment.

Representative Jerome's bill creating thirty health districts in the state of Michigan and providing for an inspector in each district at a salary of $3,500 per annum was killed by the house committee on public health in that state, and thereby saves the taxpayers an annual outlay of over $100,000, which was intended to make lucrative positions for a large number of diploma holders who are now attempt to eke out an existence.

House bill No. 244 in Ohio would if passed have created a state department of public health and medical registration which would perform the duties of the state board of health and the state medical board and would be an initial step in playing into the hands of the favored few at the expense of the many.

Vehement protests were heard from automobilists against a bill introduced by Senator Henry Wasbers in New York, which provides no person shall be licensed to operate a motor vehicle unless he has passed an examination for physical fitness. The measure provided that such examinations shall be made by a licensed medical practitioner. It is estimated that the fees for the doctors would amount to $1,250,000 annually.

The Philadelphia Ledger states that remarkable results of the latest steps in vaccination, which confer immunity against cold in the head and also cure ringworm of the scalp has been announced and it need not be surprising to hear of more legislation for compulsory vaccination along that line.

The M. D.'s who are organized as a political body to force the receiving of their attention, examinations and treatments upon the public at a large and unreasonable expense to the taxpayers are getting so numerous that our legislators should look carefully for the "nigger in the wood pile" when considering so called "health" and "physical fitness" legislation.

GOOD FOR FIVE YEARS

Business is bound to be good in this country for five or six years more, according to a prominent officer of the steel corporation. The basis for the statement is the number of orders on hand—about as reliable indication as could be imagined. But the beauty of it is that these orders are not dependent upon the continuance of the war. The corporation has many war orders, and in the event of the termination of the war some of these orders would be canceled. But it also has enough orders on hand, outside of the war orders to insure great activity for five or six years.

The steel industry is called the barometer of trade. The country is prosperous when the steel concerns are prosperous—or the steel concerns are prosperous when the country is prosperous, either way you want to state it. So business men have come to study the steel situation as an indication of what is to be expected in other lines.

But there is still another evidence that prosperity will be with us for a time at least. That is the prosperity of the farming community. The United States is still an agricultural nation, to a large extent. When the farmers are enjoying "good times," everybody else is doing so; with plenty of money in the country there is plenty of trade.

While the wheat crop is a little smaller this year than it was last year, there was still a tremendous crop raised, only a little less than a billion bushels. The corn crop is a big one, and all other crops are large. Stock upon the farm is bringing unprecedented prices—everything the farmer has to sell is commanding fancy figures, in fact, and that means prosperity for the farmer. So we can accept it as a fact that prosperity will be with us for a year at least, basing the prediction upon the present standing of the farmer, and we will lose nothing by believing that times are going to be good for five or six years more, basing our belief upon the statement of the steel magnate.

—The many compliments that are being handed the Evening Times are very gratifying but the substantial support in the way of new subscribers that are coming in is what isgoing to make the paper the success that all good citizens of Fulton want to see.

—The stringent rules laid down by state ad local health officers is causing considerable discomfort and as the authorities have been able to learn so little about infantile paralysis there is a wide range of opinions as to the proper methods to persue.

—In case of a railroad strike, there are a lot of people who would be glad to walk or ride in a wheelbarrow, if it could be settled once for all that this country is not owned either by the labor unions or the corporations.

—The candidates who are unsuccessful at the September primary can attribute it to the intensely hot weather we have had this summer; it will be as good excuse as any other.

—This from the Thomasville (Ga.) Times: "If you see an editor who pleases everybody, there will be a glass plate over his face and he will not be standing up."

—The rain yesterday was not nearly as pleasant for the church goer as it was for the farmer.

OUR VARIED MONEY

No Two Classes Have Exactly the Same Quality or Value.

A GOLD AND SILVER COMEDY

Tribulations of a More or Less Honest Citizen Who Was Stuck With Six Trade Dollars and Who Wanted to Exchange Them For a Gold Coin.

When a new treasurer of the United States takes office his predecessor hands over to him assets to the value of billions. But it is a varied lot of securities that come into his possession—bonds, securities of all kinds, gold bars and silver coin, base metals, gold notes, silver notes, gold in the reserve fund, governmental legal tender notes, national bank notes, fractional currency and subsidiary coin.

No two classes have the same qualities, no two exactly the same value, intrinsic or otherwise. Yet people are so eager to get anything with the stamp of Uncle Sam that they accept it anywhere at its face value unless it is required for some purpose which calls for the peculiar quality of a certain kind of money.

It is a mark of confidence in Uncle Sam that his beautiful silver certificates are taken at their face value, when in reality they bear about the same relation to gold dollars as adulterated food does to pure food—only, like the adulterated foods, a certain artificial value must be given to them.

When the food adulterater turns out his product, the government, in just horror, says it is wrong to tamper with food, and the person who does it must go to jail. When Uncle Sam sends out a silver disk stamped with his mark he has made a very good business stroke, for he has placed in circulation as a dollar 56 cents' worth of silver and put 44 cents' worth of bullion into his treasurer's charge and, like the adulterated food dealer, has made a good transaction.

A poor wreck of humanity with a grateful streak in his heart not long since found himself in possession of six trade dollars. His first inclination after the shock was to buy a whole lot of bait and go away off on a fishing trip, but remembrance of his mother came over him, and, like a good fellow, he resolved to send her a five dollar gold piece.

His first surprise came when he found that his trade dollars, which contained more silver than do the silver dollars, were valued only as bullion and his whole $6 was worth only $3.36. He had overlooked the fact that when those dollars were issued, back in 1873, Uncle Sam had omitted to indorse them or to give them any monetary value other than their silver content.

So he did with his $6 what his Uncle Samuel had done—he went through a little transaction in high finance which makes one blush for him. He mixed his dollars up with some "standard" silver dollars and persuaded a small storekeeper to give him bills for them. It happened that these bills were silver certificates.

He tried to induce the treasury department to take them in exchange for the gold piece intended for his mother, but the treasury department politely told him that, while the law provided that the secretary of the treasury should maintain gold and silver on a parity, the section had been construed to mean that silver certificates could not produce gold coin.

Thereupon wild thoughts of the bait and the fishing trip rushed upon him again, but his blood was now up, and he determined somehow to secure that gold piece for the mother, who was becoming momentarily dearer. He succeeded after a time in exchanging his silver certificates for a legal tender note for $5, and, although such notes are protected by a gold reserve equal to only about a third of the issue, the department without hesitation gave him the gold coin.

The narrator of the tale could not remember whether the gold piece ever reached the mother or was spent to celebrate the modern method of the transmutation of metals.—Washington Post.

Testing Ideas.

I say wisdom is gathered on foot, along country roads. Collect your ideas where you can, alley, boulevard, office, lecture hall, theater, dinner table, library, wharf, picture gallery, street car, opera house, curbstone or courtroom, but test them on the road. A Good Excuse.

MYSTERY OF MERCURY.

An Unknown Factor That Causes the Planet's Erratic Motion.

The planet of Mercury is the smallest of the major planets and the nearest to the sun, which it circles in a little less than three months. It reaches its greatest distance from the sun at periods about sixty days apart. During the year Mercury is morning star three times and evening star three times. Owing to its nearness to the sun it is never visible for more than a period of about two hours after sunset or the same length of time before sunrise.

The eccentricity of its orbit is greater than that of any other major planet; its greatest and its least distance from the sun differ by nearly fifteen million miles. According to A. W. McCurdy of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada, the most remarkable characteristic in the motion of Mercury is that when it is nearest to the sun it travels faster than it should if it moved only by the attraction of the known bodies of the solar system.

Astronomers have long sought an explanation of the accelerated motion. Some believe that there are other planets at present unknown between Mercury and the sun—bodies that although numerous are too small to be seen. The movements of Mercury indicate an influence that might be accounted for by the presence of another planet revolving within its orbit. If such a planet really exists, there should come a time when it will appear as a dark spot moving across the face of the sun.

Another way to detect the presence of new planets in the vicinity of the sun is to take observations during a total eclipse. If there are no clouds at such a time the stars become visible as the sun disappears. During the total eclipse of the sun in 1878 one observer saw an object that he thought might be the long sought planet, but no other astronomer has been able to confirm the discovery, and many now believe that the hidden source of the unusual movement of Mercury must be looked for elsewhere than in the orbit of the planet.

LIFE OF THE GUNS.

It Depends Upon How Long the Linings Can Resist Erosion.

The life of a gun depends upon the progress of erosion, which sooner or later is certain to impair the accuracy of fire. Erosion is caused by the action of the explosive gases at high temperature and pressure.

According to the Iron Age, the hot gases cause a thin film of steel to absorb heat. The film expands and becomes set. Upon the release of the pressure it contracts, which causes minute cracks that grow larger with every discharge. As they increase in size they form passageways for more hot gas, and that tends to enlarge them still further. The inner surface thus becomes roughened and the bands begin to corrode. Finally the bore becomes so enlarged that it allows the gases to escape. The shell does not then acquire its proper rotation, and its flight becomes erratic.

All guns except small ones are now constructed with linings in the tube which, when the bore is worn out, are removed and replaced by new ones. The cost of relining a gun is approximately 30 per cent of the cost of the gun. There appears to be no limit to the number of times that a gun can be relined.

The small arms used in this country are considered to be worn out after 5,000 to 7,500 rounds have been fired. Small naval guns can be fired about 1,000 times before they are regarded as worn out. Large twelve inch and fourteen inch naval guns are considered to have a life on one lining of from 150 to 200 rounds.

Low velocity guns, such as howitzers and mortars, have correspondingly longer lives than high velocity guns of the same caliber, because the pressures they develop, and hence the temperatures, are lower.

Use of "a" and "an."

Do most educated people say "a unique example" or "an unique example?" In deference to the rule they probably write "an," but if you notice their pronounciation, when they are talking naturally and not thinking of how they pronounce, they will almost invariably say "a." And this is quite natural, for "unique" begins with a consonant. It is pronounced "yuneek." Similarly most people say both "a history" and "a historical fact," unless they drop the consonant "h" and say "an 'istorical fact."—London Chronicle.

Unforeseen.

Helen was attending her first party. When refreshments were served she refused a second helping to ice cream with a polite "No, thank you," although her look was wistful.

"Oh, do have some more ice cream, dear," her hostess urged.

"Mother told me I must say "No, thank you," exclaimed the little girl, "but I don't believe she knew the dishes were going to be so small."—New York Post.

She Floats, My Lady Floats.

I lie back and laugh and let the green-white water, the sun flawed, beryl water, flow over me.—Amy Lowell in Boston Globe.

We used to lie back and laugh and let the green-white water, the sun flowed, beryl water, flow over us, just the way Miss Amy Lowell of Boston does, but since our wife made us get that horsehair bath mitt, the earnest use of which, as she saw in the paper, will stave off and utterly foil old age, the blighting knowledge of what's coming after we get out of the tub has taken all the poetry out of the experience.—Ohio State Journal.

We also used to lie back and laugh and let the green-white and so forth kind of water flow over us, but since we have grown so plump the water seems to fear us, and when we get in the bathtub (which we do with the aid of a shoe horn) the water promptly gets out. We envy Amy her Saturday night giggle, but what can we do?—Houston Post.

Be Happy.

She Went.

There is a man living in Cleveland who has to go to New York a good deal and would like to have his wife go with him, but she feels she can't leave home.

"Some day," she says, "I'll go with you."

At last he got an idea. After the last trip, when she said this for the fortieth time, he replied:

"I don't think you would have a good time, dear, and I won't urge you again."

"Why not?" she said.

"Well," he replied cautiously, "you are a little jealous, you know."

Did she go with him the next time? She did.

What Not to Do With a Wheelbarrow.

If you have occasion to use a wheelbarrow leave it when you are through with it in front of the house with the handles toward the door. A wheelbarrow is the most complicated thing to fall over on the face of the earth. A man will fall over one when he would never think of falling over anything else. He never knows when he has got through falling over it, either, for it will tangle his legs and his arms, turn over with him and rear up in front of him, and just as he pauses in his profanity to congratulate himself it takes a new turn and scoops more skin off of him, and he commences to evolute anew and bump himself on fresh places. A man never ceases to fall over a wheelbarrow until it turns completely on its back or brings up against something it cannot upset. It is the most inoffensive looking object there is, but it is more dangerous than a locomotive, and no man is secure with one unless he has a tight hold of its handles and is sitting down on something. A wheelbarrow has its uses without doubt, but in its leisure moments it is the great blighting curse on true dignity.—Bennett Chapple in National Magazine.

Playing Her Purse.

A member of a Bohemian house party, having lost heavily at bridge, wrote to her husband asking him to send her some money, as she had lost her purse.

Playing once more, she won enough to cover her losses, and she wired: "Purse found. Need not send money."

But at her third venture she was again unfortunate, so she telegraphed: "Send money as first requested. Purse found, but nothing in it!"

Two Are Company.

Afer saying his prayers at night the seven-year-old son of parents in Larchmont announced that he was so tired of the kind of life he was compelled to lead that he believed there was nothing for it but for him to run away. The father considered the matter thoughtfully and then said:

"George, if that is the way you feel, there is money in my purse here. You may take it all."

The boy packed his grip, got to the front door, came back on the ground of having forgotten his toothbrush, and went downstairs again. The parents were much disturbed to know what he would do. He opened the front door, went out on the veranda, and all was silence. The father and mother looked at each other, but thought the course they had adopted the best, and hence did not make a move.

After fifteen minutes of intense anxiety the door opened and a boy's voice called out, "Say, dad, if I'm going away alone I'd better take mother along, don't you think?"—New York Times.

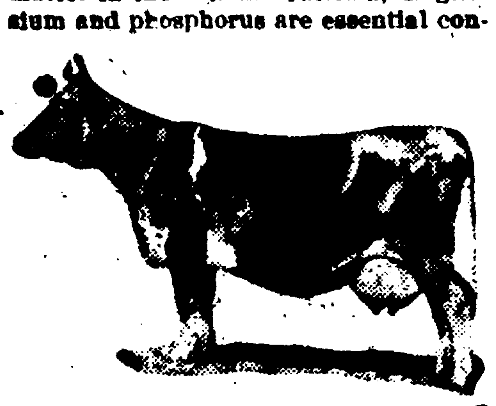
DAIRY and CREAMERY

SOME COW REQUIREMENTS.

Feeds Rich In Mineral Matter Necessary to Milk Production.

A cow cannot give a large flow of milk without having plenty of mineral matter in the ration. Calcium, magnesium and phosphorus are essential con-



The Guernsey breed of dairy cattle is growing in popularity every day, and justly so. The reasons are that they are docile, healthy and pleasant to handle, have good udders, good teats, are large, persistent milkers and give high colored, rich milk. A very small proportion of them prove to be inferior ones. The cow shown is a Guernsey.

stituents of milk and unless the ration supplies these minerals in abundance there cannot be be a heavy flow, says the Kansas Farmer. Experiments have been conducted that show conclusively that mineral matter has a most important place in milk production. It is possible also that failure to breed may at times result from a lack of minerals in the feed.

The Kansas dairyman is especially fortunate because alfalfa supplies plenty of ash material, and cows fed alfalfa will seldom lack for mineral matter in their ration.

Very heavy producing cows, however, cannot digest enough mineral matter to keep up the maximum milk flow, so in order to get a full flow of milk from cows of such large capacity it is necessary that a reserve be stored. It is possible for the animal to do this just as it is possible to lay up a store of fat to be used later. A heavy producing cow will actually transfer mineral matter from the bones of her body to be used in making milk. It is thus highly important that milk cows be fed such feed during the dry period as will build up the mineral part of the body.

Nearly all grains are deficient in lime and other minerals. Feeds richest in mineral are the legumes—alfalfa, clover or cowpeas. We habitually think of these as important sources of protein, but they are none the less important sources of mineral matter, and this can be accumulated and stored in the body. Protein cannot be so stored. Any in excess of immediate requirements is wasted.

The important point is that the dry cow of large capacity must not be fed too cheap a ration. Corn fodder, silage, straw and other cheap feeds commonly used in maintenance rations cannot build up the animal's reserve of mineral matter during the resting period. For this reason cows of large capacity should be fed rations that will supply them plenty of mineral matter during the dry period. Unless some reserve is stored they may not produce up to their maximum capacity when they freshen.

CORN FOR THE SILO.

Best Time For Cutting Is When Lower Kernels Are Fully Dented.

Silage crops should be allowed to become thoroughly matured if possible because of the food nutrients which develop during the last growing period of the crop. Corn does not increase greatly in bulk after it tassels out; but, due to the storage of protein and starch in the stalk and ear between the time it tassels out and the time it is thoroughly dented, it increases from eight to ten times its original feeding value.

In case a crop becomes too dry before it is placed in the silo the condition may be remedied by adding sufficient moisture to cause the silage to pack well. This can be done by pouring buckets of water on the silage, but where water pressure is available simply turn the hose into the blowpipe.

The right time for making silage from corn is when the kernels are thoroughly dented and the lower blades have begun to burn. Sorghum should be cut for silage when two-thirds of the heads are thoroughly ripened. It is necessary to get at the corn immediately when dry winds begin to burn it up. Sorghum, feterita, Kaffir or milo will wait several days for cutting without serious damage.

Bound to Disagree.

"You don't get along very well with your mother-in-law, I hear," said a friend to a young husband.

"No, I don't," answered the bridegroom. "Nobody can. Even the food she eats doesn't agree with her. When she comes into the room everybody shuts up. The other day she got into a folding bed, and the bed shut up."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

REV. BALCH'S SUNDAY SERMON

AT THE FREE METHODIST CHURCH LAST EVENING.

The following is an extract of the sermon preached by Rev. C. A. Balch last evening on the subject, "Are we Justified from Sin by keeping the Law or by Faith in Jesus Christ?" The text was Gal. 2:16. "A man is not justified by the works of the law, but by faith of Jesus Christ."

"It is reported that certain of our esteemed brethren have recently said, in enunciating the doctrine of their church, 'If you will keep Saturday, everything else will come right.' We turn to the epistle to the Galatians and there find that events happened nearly equivalent to what is happening now in our city. Paul had gained converts in Galatia raising them up from idolatry and sin. He preached to them 'Christ crucified.' 3:1. They had christ born within. 4:19. A divine witness was given them that they were God's children. 4:6. They had heavenly joys. 4:15. Their self-life became dead, and all carnal desires crucified. 2:20.

"After Paul left Galatia certain men came there from Jerusalem, not to get men converted from sin, but to seek to turn these young converts to another church—to Judaism. So they preached to them that they must keep the ceremonies of the Jewish law in order to be saved. The converts were young and inexperienced and readily accepted their teaching. Among other things they began to keep Saturday for Sunday. The proof of this is found in Gal. 4:10. 'Ye observe days, and months, and times and years.' The 'days' included the septenary Jewish Sabbaths. 'Times' is interpreted to mean the seventh day Sabbath by Seventh Day Adventists. Dan. 7:25. 'He shall think to change times and laws,' means to them the change of the seventh day Sabbath.

"But no sooner had the Galatians done this than the faith which had united them to the living vine died. Christ became of no effect to them, they came into spiritual bondage, their heavenly joys departed, and they fell from grace. 5:4. It was under these circumstances that Paul wrote his letter to them, and happily they turned back again from the 'weak and beggarly elements.'

"Now will 'everything else come right, if one keeps Saturday? Does not that doctrine necessarily put Saturday above Christ? Will not it be sure to exclude Christ and cause those who accept it to cease their utter dependence upon Christ for salvation and cause them to trust in keeping the law. Those who seek to be saved by faith make Christ their all and self nothing, but this doctrine makes the law and the self who keeps it all and Christ nothing. Yea, it exalts the least point in the law, the particular day of the Sabbath above the keeping holy of the day, and above the other points of the law which are weightier, faith, love, judgment, mercy, truth, holiness of heart, without which no day can be kept holy unto the Lord. It is as if one should stick for a particular mode of baptism, raising the mode above the great thing for which baptism stands—death to sin, and new life in Jesus Christ.

"We ask again. Will 'all be right, if one begins to keep Saturday?' Will all be right for time and eternity? Will that bring the witness of the Spirit? Will that fill with the Holy Spirit? Will that take away the carnal nature and remove the unholy appetites and sanctify the soul to God? We respect brother Holden and his party. We believe him sincere. But as a minister of Christ we warn all who love the life and power of religion not to trust in the works of the law for salvation, but by a hearty repentance from all sin, turn to Christ who alone can save."

PAYS TO BUY REAL ESTATE IN FULTON AND FARMS IN OSWEGO CO.

In a talk with a representative of the well known real estate and insurance firm of Whitaker & Bogardus he advanced many good reasons why NOW is the time to invest in real estate in Fulton. He also stated that farm property is equally desirable in this immediate locality at the present time.

Farm products are bringing high prices and the facilities for shipping to close markets are exceedingly good. City lots and farm properties that are selling for a low figure today will be bringing large returns on the investment in another five years.

Fulton is on the verge of an era of prosperify that must necessarily increase the population and as the city grows the value of realty will increase.

GOOD MORNING JUDGE.

WAS GOING TO CUT UP MR. ALDERMAN

John Suri was arraigned in city court this morning on a complaint entered by Isadore Alderman.

Alderman claimed that Suri was found loitering in the junk yards, located near the Delaware & Lackawanna yards and upon being told to leave the yards, Suri drew a knife.

John is of Polish descent and naturally quick tempered, consequently the police headquarters were notified and he was placed in jail.

It was found that Suri has a police record and is now on probation, having recently served a sentence at Randall's Island. It is probable that he will be returned.

FARMERS WILL GET INCREASE

COMMITTEE WILL INVESTIGATE MILK PRICES

The Wicks investigating committee will hold three hearings in Central New York the first week of September. The first of these will be held in Auburn September 5, the second September 6th at the Geneva Experimental station and in Rochester, September 7th and 8th.

So far hearings have been held in sixteen counties and a mass of valuable information has been gathered showing dairying conditions in different localities and the difficulties besetting the farmers in many instances in marketing their products. The State Department of Agriculture as well as farm bureaus, granges and similar organizations are working with the committee in order that the investigation may be as thorough as possible.

Complaints have been heard from hundreds of farmers, which backed up by actual figures reveal that dairymen in many instances are getting little or no return for their herd at prevailing prices paid for milk. In some cases the farmers would have been better off had they disposed of their cows. The committee is also inquiring into the advisability of supplanting cows with sheep as being more profitable to the farmer.

The investigation so far has served to bring to light sharp practices that are often worked in squeezing out the co-operative dairy. In some places instances have been revealed of illegitimate skimming of milk, although this practice has so far been found to be confined to smaller concerns.

Members of the committee do not believe that there will be any occasion for a milk strike, such as occurred in Chicago last spring. There is already evidence to warrant the assumption that with the next six months contracts higher prices will be offered the farmer for his milk.

WHY HE QUIT THE FARM

Our prominent attorney, Claude E. Guile, delights in giving accounts of his experiences "on the farm." In fact he says the best farmer in Oswego county was put out of business when he began the study of law. But, Claude certainly was up against a proposition that would tax his law capacity when he was tilling the soil several years ago. He had occasion to discharge an Irishman that was working for him who was, as is customary, named Pat. In order to save discussion he mailed him his discharge in an envelope. As Mr. Guile is very methodical in all matters and was very progressive he had the usual form of printed envelope that is now being used by up-to-date farmers. The next day after receiving his letter Pat was missing, but less than a week later he was back on the job one morning.

Approaching him Claude asked him if he had received his letter.

"Yiss, sure Oi did," said he.

When asked if he had read it, he said:

"Sure, sir; Oi read inside and Oi read it outside. On the inside yez said Oi was fired, an' on the outside yez said 'Return to Claude E. Guile in foive days,' an' here I be bejabbers."

Pat remained on the farm and Claude came to the city.

INDIANA WARDEN TRIES TO LEASE PRISON FARM

Laporte, Ind., August 28—Edward J. Fogarty, "Bill Bill," warden of the state prison at Michigan city, is tired of seeing "his boys" cooped up within prison walls working in a binder twine plant or breaking stone. He wants to give them a chance to get out in the open, where sunlight and more freedom will be theirs. The state has no money to buy a prison farm, but Fogarty is negotiating for the lease of 2,500 acres of land near Michigan city for farm purposes. He proposes to make it a model farm with experts directing the work of the convicts.

ANOTHER SERIOUS ACCIDENT NARROWLY AVERTED

A party of joy riders in a large touring car struck the carriage of George Culyer of this city last night, on the West River road, north.

With Mr. Culyer were his wife and two children, who were on their way home from a drive when an approaching car from the south, was noticed. Mr. Culyer took particular pains about keeping his place in the road and as the pass was about to be made, a huge car coming from the north shot between the two vehicles and struck Mr. Culyer's outfit. The occupants were all thrown to the ground, but fortunately no one was hurt.

The wagon was badly demolished and will have to undergo much repair. The occupants of the auto are known.

PRINTED STATIONERY FOR FARMERS

Every farmer who owns his farm ought to have printed stationery with his name and the name of his post-office properly given. The printed heading might also give the names of whatever crops he specializes in, or his specialties in stock. Neatly printed stationery gives you a personality and a standing with any person or firm to whom you write and insures the proper reading of your name and address.

If you wish to write to your congressman or member of the legislature, or if you have a request to make of your county superintendent of schools, or if you wish information from any business house, in any case your letter will have increased weight and receive more and quicker attention if you use printed stationery.

Get the habit. Come into The Times office and have us print you 500 sheets of good paper with envelopes to match.

BARNES SUIT AGAINST THE COLONEL WILL BE PUSHED.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 28—Just because William Barnes and Theodore have apparently 'hooked up" politicaly, that is n reason to believe that Mr. Barnes' appeal from the adverse verdict in his $50,00 libel suit against the Colonel will be allowed to drop. The suit is to be pushed according to word received by his local counsel.

Since Roosevelt announced that he would go on the stump for Hughes there has been considerable talk regarding the effect of that decision upon his relations with Barnes. Political forecasters in New York and elsewhere have said they expected the hatchet to be buried. Such is not the case.

The last word that local counsel on both sides have received from their clients was as to the presentations of the appeal. Everything is ready for the argument at Rochester before the Appellate Division, Fourth Department, and is expected to be heard during the latter part of September.

Rochester believes that the appeal will never be argued in that city; but local men say that it will. The real issue, they say is personal and not political feelings.

Just Three Things.

In the American Magazine a Chicago business man tells how he regained his health after a nervous breakdown when he was forty-eight. He says:

"Just three things are absolute necessities for the smooth running and longevity of these human machines of ours. They are pure air, pure water and plain food. Food alone has a price. Both air and water are God's free gifts. And yet not one person in ten thousand breathes enough pure air, not one in a thousand drinks enough pure water, and nearly all of us eat too much."

Long Journeys Made by Whales.

The whales that swim about the islands which lie off the coast of Norway and Finland in March and April travel immense distances. In May they turn up at the Azores or even at the Bermudas and sometimes pay a visit to the Antilles. They swim fast, for in June they are back again off Norway. Some of these whales have been known to bring back evidences of where they have been, for harpoons of the peculiar kind used off the coast of South America have been found stuck in them.—St. James' Gazette.

Albinos.

The human species offers frequent examples of individuals attacked by albinism. It is found oftenest among men of the black race. White albinos have skin of a peculiar paleness, blond hair, white or colorless beard, pink iris and red pupils. The negro albino has skin of variable aspect. In some cases it is white as milk and in others it is like wax or, rather, resembles the hue of a corpse.

BLACKSMITH'S QUEER WIFE.

Strange Thing That Happened to Her Neighbors When They Refused to Be Sociable—Some Things of Interest to Little People—Girl on the Beach.

Now, kiddies, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell—

A DANISH LEGEND.

Once upon a time the daughter of one of the underground people, the Bergmen, was married to a smith who lived in Mors.

Kirstin was a good and most patient wife, although her husband, the smith, was cross and surly and sometimes even beat her when he was in an ill temper.

Kirstin did not like this at all, and one day when he had taken up a stick intending to strike her she seized a great horseshoe which was lying on the anvil and broke it in two without any difficulty.

The smith was astonished. "Are you that strong?" he asked. "Then why have you never resisted when I struck you?"

"Because I love you," said Kirstin.

"I'll strike you no more!" said the smith, and he kept his word.

The people of Mors, however, were not friendly to the Bergman's daughter and in spite of her desire to be on pleasant terms with them avoided her and would scarcely even nod to her when they met.

One day, as she and all the people were standing in the churchyard, waiting for the arrival of the minister, Kirstin said to her husband:

"Listen to me—my father is coming to see me, but he is angry."

As she thus warned her husband the Bergman appeared, and a most awe inspiring person he was! Indeed, he was so terrible to look at that the people would have liked to creep into the earth to avoid him.

"My dear daughter," said the Bergman, "I hear the people here will have naught to do with you, so I have come to remedy that!"

"Yes, father," replied Kirstin. "I'll toss them up in the air a bit," said he. "Will you pitch or catch?"

"I'll catch," said Kirstin, for she feared the Bergman would handle the people very roughly.

Then began a merry game. The Bergman stood on one side of the church, Kirstin, his daughter, on the other, and the Bergman tossed all the people in turn over the roof of the church to Kirstin, who deftly caught them.

No one was injured, but every one was badly scared. But the plan worked to a charm, for so long as Kirstin lived she was treated with the greatest respect and consideration.

Size of the Ark.

In Genesis vi, 15, we have the measure of the ark to be as follows: "The length of the ark shall be 300 cubits, the breadth of it 50 cubits and the height of it 30 cubits." We find that authorities differ somewhat as to the exact length of a cubit. It may be from eighteen inches to twenty-one inches. If we take twenty inches as the length of a cubit the ark would measure 500 feet by 83 1-3 feet by 50 feet. A slight variation, one way or the other, will make no material difference in the final measure.

THE PETITIONS ARE DEFECTIVE

MANY CANDIDATES HAVE BEEN CARELESS IN SECURING SIGNERS

More than one half of the designating petitions filed by candidates for nomination throughout the state in practically all parties are defective and would be thrown out by the courts if contested, according to the statement of a man thoroughly conversant with the procedure under the direct primary law and the usual lax methods followed by men who circulate petitions for candidates.

The law, he says, provides two methods for securing signatures. One is to have the petition signed before a notary public, or a commissioner of deeds who makes an acknowledgement that the various signers whose names he fills in on the back of the petition appeared before him and duly executed the petition. The other plan and one generally followed by the candidates in this election is to have the signers affix their names in the presence of a witness and have the witness make the acknowledgment.

Hundreds of the sheets of names of the petitions that have been filed throughout the state, this man says, have the name of the witness written in opposite that of the first signers and nowhere else. Unquestionably this is a fatal defect and if a court proceeding was started all such petitions would be thrown out because the voter must sign in the presence of a witness and must see the witness sign.

However, there is not any general desire on the part of either of the leading parties to contest designating petitions on any ground except that of insufficient signers. The election commissioners are everywhere checking up the petitions to see if they carry enough signers. Should protests be lodged these will have to be tried before a justice of the supreme court in case the commissioners decline to admit the justness of the protests.

ALL DOGS MUST BE TAGGED

A new dog pound has been opened by Official Dog Catcher Rexford Mitchell. Mr. Mitchell has been busy for the past month securing names of families who own or harbor unlicensed canines and tags must immediately be secured for the same or they will be taken up and placed in the pound where they will be kept for forty-eight hours and if not called for will be killed as provided for by law.

Owners of dogs can secure a tag upon the payment of one dollar.

REV. JOHN L. LINDSMANN ATTENDED FUNERAL.

Several Oswego county priests were among the hundred prelates who attended and took part at the funeral services for the late Rev. Nicholas J. Quinn, at St. Patrick's church, Utica last Saturday. Bishop Grimes, was celebrant at the pontifical high mass of requiem; the Rev. James P. McGraw, was master of ceremonies, the Rev. J. F. Mullany, of Syracuse, and the Rev. James P. McGee, of the same place, were deacons of honor; the Rev. Michael Clune, of Syracuse was arch priest.

The Rev. Joseph H. Hopkins, of Oswego; the Rev. John A. McGraw, of Baldwinsville; the Rev. John L. Lindsmann, of Fulton, and the Rev. T. F. Howard, of Oswego, were seated in the chancel.

If Governor Johnson becomes the next United States Senator from California, he has declared his intention of boosting the Susan B. Anthony amendment. He is a candidate for both the Republican and Progressive nominations.

SUFFRAGE NOTES AND NEWS

In Finnland, according to a dispatch from Petrograd, twenty-four women have been elected to the Finnish Diet, making every eighth member a woman. Finnland is said to be an exceedingly orderly and well governed country.

* * *

It may have been that the heat made them careless, but the members of the Georgia House of Representatives where a bill to let women practice law has been stoutly resisted since, as one member said, "the time man's mind runneth not to the contrary," let it slip through with a vote of 151 to 36.

* * *

Thirty-four United States Senators are to be elected this fall. In the last Congress the Senate voted thirty-five to thirty-four in favor of the Susan B. Anthony amendment. Among the Senators whose terms expire is found sixteen of the "noes" and eight who did not vote on the suffrage amendment. The suffragists are feeling very confident that the next Congress will have in the Senate the necessary two-thirds vote to pass the amendment.

* * *

If the suffragists were given to betting on electon they would put their money up on South Dakota. Because, so they say, the suffrage planks in all the political platforms have given woman suffrage a tremendous drive, and because a large majority of the state, elected or to be elected, officials are enthusiastic in their support of suffrage for South Dakota women.

"OSCAR," OF WALDORF TO BE GENTLEMAN FARMER

New York, August 28—In just two years more the famous Oscar, of the Waldorf Astoria, will cease ornamenting the big hotel and retire to the life of gentleman farmer on his fine 600-acre estate at New Paltz, N. Y.

The genial hotel man, who is wealthier than the average guest at the Waldorf, will son have completed a quarter century of service for George W. Boldt. These have been profitable years for him and now he thinks he has done about enough towards making his fellow man and woman comfortable and will spend the remainder of his life making himself comfortable.

Oscar's estate boasts a private lake. He lives in a chaeau, to reach which you have to cross a drawbridge—and if Oscar don't like your looks when he sees you coming he can draw up the bridge and leave you blowing your horn in vain on the other side.

TRAPS ARE BEING SET.

Lettuce growers are complaining about numerous small animals including muskrats, woodchucks and skunks that are playing havoc with their crops. Many of them are setting large numbers of traps to catch the invaders, so it behooves the hunter with a dog to be on the lookout for them.

A valuable bird dog was caught in one of the traps last week. It had its leg broken and had to be shot.

INDIANA CHAPLAIN NOW ON BORDER EXPLAINS HIS NUMEROUS DUTIES

Called Up to Do Many Things Besides Looking After the Spiritual Interests of His Regiment.

Some of the Men Who Seldom Attended Church at Home Are Most Impressed at the Camp Services.

One of the popular men in the Third Indiana regiment, stationed at Mercedes, Tex., is the Rev. Fred Thornburg, who is the regimental chaplain and the pastor of the First M. E. church of Decatur. Chaplain Thornburg's tent has a library, a desk and a whole lot of things crowded into a small space. But he is so busy that he does not have much time to enjoy its comforts.

"The primary duties of a chaplain are, of course, looking after the spiritual interests in his regiment," said Chaplain Thornburg. "There are other duties, however, that are placed upon him. He is the regimental postmaster and hence has a varied experience along lines that only a postmaster can have. I think a few observations regarding the mail would not be amiss to our friends back home.

"Letters to a soldier should be addressed clearly to his company and regiment, not forgetting the state from which the regiment comes—thus, 'John Brown, Llano Grande, Texas, Company A, Third Indiana Infantry.' There are the First, Second and Third Indiana regiments, the First, Second and Third Minnesota regiments, the Third Texas and the Fourth and Fifth Nebraska regiments in this camp, so that unless mail is distinctly addressed there is sometimes great difficulty in locating the soldier for whom it is intended.

Always Buy a Money Order.

"We also have the field hospital, the signal corps, ambulance companies No. 1 and 2 and Batteries A, B and C. All of these should bear the distinct designation 'Indiana,' not 'Ind.' or 'I.,' to be absolutely sure of delivery. Never put money in a letter. Buy a postoffice money order, an express order, a bank draft, or send a check. There are chances of mail getting lost, and money cannot always be traced. Care in this matter may not only save money, but save from disappointment, homesickness and anxiety at both ends of the line.

"The Third regiment also gives the exchange into the care of the regimental chaplain. The outdoor services on the Sabbath and at other times are full of inspiration. Last Sunday we had a regimental service at 7:30 o'clock in the morning. Holy impressions are made by the Spirit under these conditions when he would not get the attention of many of these men and boys in their own towns. The consciousness that at the time we meet here there are all over the dear old Hoosier State thousands who lift hands of prayer for the boys on the border has a wonderful uplift in it for us.

"Every Saturday evening I distribute Sunday school leaflets for the lesson of the day following, and it is a joy to note the eagerness with which the boys receive these leaflets.

Power In Associations.

"There is a power in these associations on the camp grounds which amounts almost to a hypnotic influence, and many are led into habits of speech and practice which would not perhaps appeal to the boys under other circumstances. To direct the thoughts of these boys along other and holier lines is the great task of the chaplain, and how his heart is exercised that this may be accomplished under the leadership of the Holy Spirit! Last Sunday night the union service was a great event. Chaplain Elijah P. Arthur of the Second Indiana led in prayer, Chaplain Will Emory of the Third Minnesota read the Scripture, Chaplain Clemens of the Second Minnesota delivered the address, which was an impressive one, and I, as chaplain of the Third Indiana, sang 'The Old Flag Never Touched the Ground,' the great congregation, made up of men and youths from all parts of the country, joining in the chorus and the band of the Fifth Nebraska furnishing music. The evening hour, the olive drab atmosphere, the city of tents, the interested faces, the pulsations of human spirits, joined to make an unforgetable impression."

Describes a Hike.

Our correspondent at Selma, Tex., writes:

"Through a land of cotton the First brigade, Illinois infantry, is tramping along today. On an arching road between great fields tipped with white as if by flakes of snow the Chicago infantrymen are hiking and singing. They are on their way to Landa's park, thirty-three miles from Camp Wilson, a region of lakes and woodland which forms the Texas notion of fairyland. This afternoon and tonight the First, Second and Third regiments will pitch pup tents at Selma, and early tomorrow the long eighteen mile hike to the land o' Landa will be completed.

"'Dixie' is the marching song, the whistling song today. Here is the real southland, breathed by the winds which sweep over fields of cotton. It is a different landscape from the rocky, near mountainous, almost tropical region on the road to Leon Springs. There is no thought of dropping at the roadside today, although the sun is beating down fiercely and the road is reflecting heat like the main floor of a bake oven.

"The start was made in solid column early today, with the Second infantry in the lead. A detail from each regiment was left behind at Camp Wilson, and these will be set to work building screened 'banquet halls' for every company. When the regiment returns within a fortnight Camp Wilson will be for all purposes a permanent soldier city, with wooden mess halls, brick kitchen incinerators, fine gravel roads, even an elevated railroad.

"The Seventh infantry is rolling in wealth today, although not in luxurious automobiles. It is marching 1,800 strong and $36,000 rich. Officers and men were paid before the departure from Camp Wilson. While the regiment goes to Landa's park, more than $25,000 of its government pay is going home. The Rev. Father O'Hearn is directing this financial detail."

Apache Scouts Hate Peace.

Indian scouts with Pershing in Mexico are becoming restless in their inactivity. The score of Apaches have been placed in a camp by themselves. There war dances and disputes over the number of notches each is entitled to cut in his pistol stock disturb the peace of the entire base camp. The old scouts who hounded Chief Geronimo thirty years ago have united against the younger element. One of the chief trouble makers, Jesus Valesquez, who laid claim to nine "kills," has gone. Rumor says his departure was due to official invitation.

It also requires close watching to keep beverages with more than 3 per cent alcohol out of the Apache camp. On one occasion Lieutenant Shannon, who is responsible for the good conduct of the Indians, had to call upon his boxing ability to subdue two scouts on a celebration.

War Game on Border.

The game of war is now being played by hundreds of regulars and national guardsmen in the Brownsville district of the Mexican border patrol.

The enactment of one of the most elaborate maneuvers in the solution of war problems since the "red" and "blue" armies' demonstration in New England a few years ago was started simultaneously from Point Isabel, twenty miles from Brownsville, on the gulf coast, and San Benito, twenty miles north of Brownsville. The "invading army," which figuratively has landed in force on the gulf coast, is marching inland to "capture" San Benito. The resisting forces, almost a brigade, which has been stationed at San Benito, have been thrown into the field to protect the town from the invaders. Colonel Robert L. Bullard is in command of the San Benito brigade.

The invaders are the First and Second Virginia infantry, who were sent by motor truck to Point Isabel under command of Colonel William J. Perry. They camped at Point Isabel after executing a maneuver to the coast, where they prevented an imaginary enemy from landing and marching to Brownsville. It is twenty miles on an air line from Point Isabel to San Benito.

All military tactics with the principles of marching and combat are being fully tried out by the commanding officers. Brigadier General James Parker, commanding at Fort Brown, is accompanying the invading army.

Dye the Army Horses.

"Invisible horses" will be an adjunct to the American army if Uncle Sam fights with Mexico or any other country.

They're making them invisible now at Camp Jones, just east of Douglas.

Conspicuous gray horses are treated with a dye that darkens them to such a color they're almost invisible at 300 yards or more on the deserts of Arizona or Mexico.

In the low desert hills you can sometimes see a man sitting on nothing and galloping through the air. You know he's on a horse, of course, but you can't see the horse.

Veterinary Coleman Nockolds of the First cavalry started dyeing horses. They were the first dyed for United States army use.

In 1905 an effort was made to introduce the system in this country, following its successful use by the British army against the Boers in South Africa. But the war department notified the veterinaries, "There are no paints on hand for this purpose," and the plan was dropped.

Nockolds and Veterinary A. L. Mason of the Sixth field artillery have dyed a number of mounts at Camp Jones with good results. Gray horses are colored so they can't be identified in a group of six pulling a gun.

The dye lasts until the horses begin shedding hair, then it must be renewed. But it's a simple operation, and the animal can be dyed and dried in an hour. Generally he gets a second coat to give him a more even color.

INTRODUCED HIMSELF.

The Landlord Didn't Have to Ask the Name of His Guest.

Pat Murphy had the name of being the biggest eater on the Comstock range in Nevada in the early days. He was a very good sort of man and tried his best not to make his appetite conspicuous, but it was a thing that could not be concealed. In order not to be too hard on any one man Murphy was in the habit of changing his boarding place quite frequently.

On one occasion a new restaurant was opened, and nearly every morning the patrons of the place would ask the landlord if Pat Murphy had not yet come to board with him. The landlord would say that he had seen no man of that name.

Finding that the "sports" who were boarding with him continued daily to ask if he had yet seen Murphy, the landlord began to feel that he should like to know something about him. He asked what kind of man Murphy was and how he would be able to recognize him in case he should come to the restaurant.

"Never mind about how he looks," replied the sports. "You will know him when he comes."

One morning a tall, gaunt, middle aged man came edging into the restaurant and meekly took a seat. The landlord rather liked the appearance of the newcomer and at once went to take his order.

"Landlord," said the man, "let me have a porterhouse steak and onions, some liver and bacon on the side, six fried eggs, a bit of ham, a plate of pancakes, some fried pertaties, a cup of coffee and a couple of doughnuts and, if you have them, a couple of waffles."

When the sports came in to breakfast the landlord said:

"I've seen Murphy; he's been here."
—Pearson's Magazine.

Perfect Duties.

Noble disappointment and noble self denial are not to be admired, not even to be pardoned, if they bring bitterness. Gentleness and cheerfulness, these come before all morality. They are the perfect duties.—R. L. S.

An Afterthought.

One of San Francisco's prominent citizens was tearing along a country road not long ago, his machine registering a giddy speed, and as he was still several miles away from the nearest town he was amazed as he approached the crossroads to see a uniformed peace officer step out and block the way.

"WELL, WHAT IS IT?"

Realizing the speed he had been making and fearing he had broken some new county law, he halted and asked, "Well, what is it?" "Sir, I must"— "Look here, constable," interrupted the motorist, "pick this up and keep your mouth shut." And a five dollar gold piece clinked upon the road. The policeman quickly stooped his blue official back, and in a twinkling the motor had bounded on, the driver chuckling with glee at having escaped the law.

Some twenty minutes later that motorist was heard to murmur on recovering consciousness, "I wonder if that officer simply wanted to warn me that a tree had fallen across the road?"—Argonaut.

His First Shad.

Abner Stone had lived "inland" all his days and knew all there was to be known about pork and beef as articles of food. His acquaintance with the products of the sea, on the other hand, was very slight. Once, however, when at the seashore he was introduced to shad and asked how he liked it.

"Well," said the old farmer, with a brave attempt at a smile, "I calc'late I shell when I get kinder wonted to it, mebbe, but it does seem, jest at fust, ye know, consid'able like tryin' to eat a paper o' buttered pins!"

No Place For a Mere Boy.

The business man had advertised for a boy. One likely applicant was accompanied to the interview by his mother.

"You think your son would make a good messenger?" said the business man.

"I do," she replied. "Whatever Jim does he does quickly."

"Very well. I will test him," said the gentleman. "Here, take this letter to the Commercial bank, and be back here in twenty minutes."

The mother laid a detaining hand on the boy's shoulder.

"Come along home, Jimmy," she said. "It ain't a boy they want here, it's an angel."—New York Times.

POULTRY and EGGS

HELPING THE MOLT.

Feed and Treatment to Get Hens In Laying Condition.

One of the difficulties in poultry raising is to get the hens to molt early, so that they will be ready to lay in the fall and winter when eggs are high in price, says the Kansas Farmer. Left to themselves, hens will take a long time to molt and will not finish sometimes till after cold weather has set in. They will not then lay until early spring, and all the profits for the winter months are lost. Some poultrymen advise the starving of the hens till their feathers begin to fall pretty freely, then to feed them all the nourishing feed they will eat till they are full feathered again. One poultryman of long experience gives this method of controlling the molting of hens:

Interior of pen in laying house used at the government poultry farm, Beltsville, Md. Illustration shows roosts, dropping board and nests.

As soon as the hens are through laying turn them on alfalfa and feed them dry bran in addition. Under this treatment they get thin. Then feed them a mixed ration of grains and meat, giving a light feed in the morning and all they will eat at noon and night. Under this treatment they will finish molting quickly, get new feathers and begin laying in September. By October they are in full laying condition and make a profit through the fall and winter. Of course every one has not an alfalfa field whereon to turn his chickens, but the idea is to give them a laxative food to induce them to start to molt. Any kind of green feed would help to do this. A little linseed meal in the bran mash would help toward the same result.

Fowls on full feed are not so apt to shed their feathers so freely as those that are underfed. We do not believe in starving them, but to give them a light diet instead of the usual grain ration. Then, after they have shed their feathers, you can feed them all they will eat of the best food you can supply them.

RAISING GUINEAS.

Young Game Birds Do Best Under Brooding of Common Hens.

Since removing from the city to our country home we have raised a flock of guineas for three successive summers, and they have been a delight to us in more ways than one, writes a correspondent of Farm and Fireside.

These savory little game birds furnish the table when chicken begins to grow wearisome and fresh pork is not in season from the farm.

I find the raising of a hundred guineas not at all difficult, and the guinea babies have a charm and beauty not found in other chicks.

There is usually little success achieved by trying to bring guineas up with their own mothers. The guinea hen is too Spartan a parent and drags her exquisite little folk about through grass too damp for their constitutions to withstand. So place the eggs under motherly old hens, but be prepared to lose some chicks. Not all will escape the foster mother's huge, crushing feet.

The sooner you get them on the ground the better, for the guinea fowl is a semiwild creature and thrives only when in contact with the earth. Have a good sized run carefully wire inclosed in front of your coop and move it to fresh grassy, sunny places every day. Ordinary sized poultry wire will not do, as the chicks can escape through incredibly small cracks and will immediately "freeze" under some leaf where you cannot find them. I have the best success by giving them their freedom after the tenth day when the dew is dried off in the morning.

Small seeds, such as millet, are almost a necessity during their early life, and the tiny stomached creatures must be fed often until they get their grip upon life, which is a firm one when they once get it. My experience is that the guinea chicks do much better when a dash of mustard is added to their daily feed; otherwise they are fed about the same as other chicks, but make sure they have plenty of sharp sand in reach.

Keep Chicks From Old Stock.

Young stock will do better if not compelled to pick their living with the old. There will also be less trouble from lice, and the old ones cannot get all the feed at the expense of the chicks.

HIS CHILLY RECEPTION.

Mark Twain's Visitor When the Humorist Was Absentminded.

Absentmindedness was characteristic of Mark Twain. He lived so much in the world within that to him the material outer world was often vague and shadowy.

Once when he was knocking the balls about in the billiard room George, the colored butler, a favorite and privileged household character, brought up a card. So many canvassers came to sell him one thing and another that Clemens promptly assumed this to be one of them. George insisted mildly, but firmly, that though a stranger the caller was certainly a gentleman, and Clemens grumblingly descended the stairs.

As he entered the parlor the caller rose and extended his hand. Clemens took it rather limply, for he had noticed some water colors and engravings leaning against the furniture as if for exhibition, and he was instantly convinced that the caller was a picture canvasser.

Inquiries by the stranger as to Mrs. Clemens and the children did not change Mark Twain's conclusion. He was polite, but unresponsive, and gradually worked the visitor toward the front door. An inquiry as to the home of Charles Dudley Warner caused the caller to be shown eagerly in that direction.

Clemens, on the way back to the billiard room, heard Mrs. Clemens call him—she was ill that day.

"Youth!"

"Yes, Livy." He went in for a word.

"George brought me Mr. B.'s card. I hope you were nice to him; the B.'s were so nice to us once in Europe while you were gone."

"The B.'s? Why, Livy!"

"Yes, of course, and I asked him to be sure to call when he came to Hartford!"—Albert Bigelow Paine in St. Nicholas.

LET HIM MAKE THE SALAD.

And Let Him Hunt For the Ingredients, Too, Says a Woman.

Newspaper comment to the contrary, there still remain a few accomplishments in which a man may excel a woman, and, oddly enough, one of these is salad making! Indeed, there seems to be in the masculine character, psychologically speaking, it may be supposed, something that makes the concocting of salads a man's special genius in the way of humble skill.

You know the requirements for a good maker of salads—"A miser for vinegar, a spendthrift for oil and a madman to do the mixing."

And there you have it. A woman is too careful, too considerate, too conventional, too much hampered by details. But give a masculine lover of good salads congenial company, full liberty in the use of oil, vinegar and pepper and the freedom of your refrigerator, and you may trust him to produce a masterpiece.

First of all, your salad master enjoys the making of his dish. He puts into it the conviviality of good comradeship and the zest of adventure. He much prefers an exploring expedition in search for his ingredients and some dubious uncertainty as to the result of his efforts to a cut and dried sureness of means and methods. The result is a surprise which, as we all know, is one of the first aids toward good appetite.

Next, a man does not want culinary folderols. He is hungry, and he wants his salad to furnish him something to eat, so he puts into it plenty of oil and good substantial vegetables and green things. He likes to eat; he likes adventure and uncertainty; he likes piquancy and pepper; he likes a vigorous way of doing things. Let him make your salads.—Anne Rankin in Southern Woman's Magazine.

Traveling With a Cello.

Traveling with a cello is as uncomfortable as traveling not only with a baby, but with a donkey. Unless indeed you have an instrument with a convenient hinged door in the back so that you may pack it full of traveling necessities—MSS., and so forth—thus dispensing with a bag, or unless you can cork up its "f" holes and use the instrument as a canoe on occasions a cello is about as inconvenient a traveling companion as the corpse in Stevenson's tale which would insist on getting into the wrong box.—Musical Courier.

He Was Willing to Go.

A certain town was noted for being dead slow. There was no amusement in the place, not even so much as a picture show, and everybody went to bed at 9 o'clock every night because there was no other place to go.

"HAVE A HEART!"

One day a tramp was caught begging in the streets of this town and was promptly arrested.

After hearing the evidence the magistrate put on his sternest look and said:

"It appears from the testimony presented here that you are a vagrant without visible means of support. In order that you may not become a charge upon the taxpayers of a respectable community I sentence you to leave this town in three hours."

"Aw, judge," pleaded the tramp, with a look of abject terror on his face, "have a heart, won't yer? Please don't make me stay in the town all that time. Make it three minutes, judge, can't yer?"

The Brave Heart.

Oh, the stirring and rough and impetuous song,
The song of the heart that dares,
That keeps to its creed and gives no heed
To the faces that fortune wears!
That heart that laughs when the foe is met
And thrives and fires at taunt and threat
And finds no toiling or traveling long
For the sake of the good it bears.
—Sweeney.

Fine Makeup.

At a dinner given recently by the Twilight club to Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the English actor, one of the speakers, an associate of the guest of honor, told a story illustrative of the gently satirical wit of Sir Herbert.

He said that once upon a time a self sufficient young actor joined Sir Herbert's company, then playing in London, and was assigned a small part in a new play. As the day for dress rehearsal drew near, the head of the company was moved to ask the young man how he expected to make up for the character.

The young actor, being flattered by this attention, pulled a serious face.

"Sir Herbert," he said, "I have been giving the matter considerable study. I shall make up the part as a man about forty-one years old or possibly forty-two."

"Admirable!" said Sir Herbert. "Admirable!" And then, as the young man turned away highly pleased, "But—pardon the suggestion—if I were you I should make him up as exactly forty-three!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Maintaining Discipline.

"Discipline," said a government official at a dinner in Washington, "naval discipline must be maintained at all costs.

"They tell a story to illustrate this.

"A naval officer said to a seaman:

"'What idiot told you to dump that pile of dunnage there?'

"'It was the captain, sir,' the sailor answered.

"'Humph!' said the officer. 'Let it remain there, then, and take twelve hours in irons, my man, for calling the captain an idiot.'"

After They Got Going.

Hilda Jensen rushed up to Officer Cohen.

"Officer, that man is following me!"

"Faith, then I'll folley th' man an' see why he's folleying ye!" spoke Officer Cohen, who had been a member of the force for some time.

A crowd of small boys, seeing a policeman following a man, started in pursuit and followed the policeman.

At that a crowd of men, seeing a crowd of boys, followed the crowd of boys.

The rest of the city, observing all these people following one another, took the procession for a parade and soon had the sidewalks roped off and themselves lined in dense banks behind the ropes to enjoy the spectacle.

The board of education, hearing of a parade, declared a holiday and thousands of children ran trooping out of the schools. Catching the infection, banks closed and general jubilation reigned.

When Officer Cohen caught up to the strange follower of Hilda Jensen it developed that he had only been endeavoring to return her handkerchief, which she had dropped, but by this time it had once again been demonstrated that all an idea needs in this dear old country of ours is a good start.—Puck.

Getting Down to Business.

An old lady called at a farmhouse one day just as the family were sitting down to tea. She was invited to take off her bonnet and join them.

"Nay," she said, "I have no time, but I don't mind hevin' a cup o' tea an' a bit o' cake."

She was supplied with this and, finishing the cake before the tea, took another piece, "Just to get the tea daan."

This performance was repeated until she had been helped to seven cups of tea and eight pieces of cake. Then, looking round complacently, she said:

"Well, I think, after all, I'll tak' me bonnet off an' get me tea reight."—London Mail.

Port Caddies.

Harry Vardon, the famous English golf player, says in the Golfers' Magazine that American caddies are as a class more independent than their English cousins. He instances the case of a boy in Florida who, coming to him eagerly in the middle of a round, exclaimed, "Here, hold these clubs for a minute and I'll go and kill that snake for you."

This story is fairly matched, however, by that of a Scotch caddy who on Mr. Vardon's dissenting from his judgment as to a certain shot exclaimed indignantly: "All right. You can have your own way now till the finish. Don't ask me anything else."

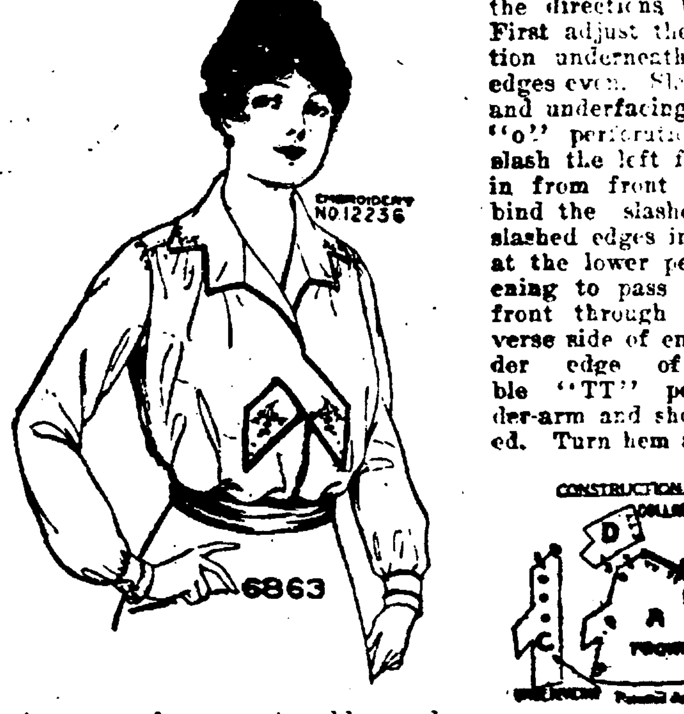
Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

An Original Waist In Crepe



An unusual separate blouse developed in that most usual and ever-fashionable material, silk crepe de chine. It is trimmed with hand embroidery in self-color.

The usual thing about this waist is that it is fashioned of silk crepe. Unusual, however, is the way that the front laps and overlaps itself into the foreranks of fashion, embroidery aiding and abetting the scheme. To be ultra-fashionable the embroidery should be done in self color. The back of the blouse extends over the shoulders forming a yoke effect. The collar is convertible, another sign of advance Autumn modes. In medium size the design requires 2½ yards 36-inch material.

It is exceedingly simple to make, the directions being easy to follow. First adjust the underfacing to position underneath front, corresponding edges even. Slash through right front and underfacing along line of 3 small "o" perforations in front section; slash the left front and underfacing, in from front edge to center-front; bind the slashed edges. Tack the slashed edges in right front together, at the lower perforation, leaving opening to pass the extension of left front through as illustrated on reverse side of envelope. Gather shoulder edge of front betwee double "TT" perforations. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Turn hem at lower edge of waist on small 'o' perforations; insert elastic or drawstring. Center-front indicated by line of large 'O' perforations. Line the collar and sew to neck edge, then take up the sleeve. Before closing the seam, bind the slashed edges. With these two things done proceed to gather the entire lower edge of the sleeve. Line cuff and roll lower part back on large "O" perforations. Sew to sleeve as notched, small "o" perforation at seam of sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole, notches and small "o" perforations even easing in any fulness.

The flaps of the front of the waist look particularly well bound with taffeta or satin.

STYLE TIPS.

One Is Rows of Silk Stitching Used as Trimming.

Just one whisper today about the new modes for fall. Paris openings are over, and the autumn styles are pretty well settled—the Paris styles, that is. American women do not always abide by these styles.

They look over the new modes and select those that appeal to them most, discarding others, and presently the selected modes appear with miraculous swiftness in the shops for everybody to buy. But there are two or three salient features in the Paris styles that cannot be disregarded, even thus early, for their repetition by one couturier after another foretells their sure importance as winter style features.

One of these is silk stitching used as a trimming. The Paris frocks and coats are fitted by many seams and darts, all stitched conspicuously in more or less fanciful effect. Pocket flaps, cuffs, revers—they are all garnished with silk stitching, and skirts and tunics have often a score or more of rows of this stitchery, done on the machine in effective chain stitch.

Alpaca is a surprise for the coming season. Both alpaca and mohair are being used by some of the couturiers in tailored frocks for day wear. Some of these models are appealingly chic, as, for instance, a sample frock of black twilled alpaca with a full overskirt pressed into little box plaits and falling almost to the edge of a plain foundation skirt. This frock has a button in back bodice with long, close sleeves and one of the enormous Japanese collars that are to be the rage without doubt. The bodice is loose, flat at back and front and plaited into the waist at the sides. It is attached with a stitched seam to the box plaited overskirt, little tabs in the bodice extending down over the plaits to emphasize the long waisted effect. Under this moyen age bodice is a foundation fitted to the waist line and stiffened to insure trimness, though the outer button in back bodice is loose rather than close fitting.

Silks for formal frocks and evening frocks, of course, and Paris whispers that satins and satin surfaced silks will be most in favor. Of these a new silk called soiree is exquisitely beautiful in its lights and shades of color, a most enchanting silk for evening gowns of distinction. Worth and Jenny have brought out stunning gowns in velvet, the Jenny model a slip over the head affair distinctly novel, with bands of Belgian hare for trimming. Very distinguished is an afternoon gown by Premet made of navy blue charmeuse, with a good deal of black chantilly lace draped airily in the bodice and a big Japanese collar of navy blue mousseline draped around throat and shoulders. The combination of navy satin and black lace is particularly elegant and refined, and this gown of Premet is sure to make a decided hit with women of conservative taste. As brilliant as the Premet gown is, quiet and elegant is a Klein dance frock of gold colored silk voile and cream lace, with an underslip of flesh pink silk. The skirt is yards and yards wide, and at the back an odd sash forms a pannier bustle and then trails to the floor, the frock itself being short enough to reveal the feet and ankles.

Fatigue Injures Temper.

More than half of the ill temper and irritability displayed by women are due to fatigue, not only of the body, but of the nerves. Every woman should learn how advisable it is to rest daily and to rest in the proper way. After a tiring day, whether it be housework, looking after the children, shopping or paying calls, half an hour's rest will work wonders.

Take off your shoes, put on soft slippers and slip into a loose gown. Pull down the blind; then either lie down or sit in a comfortable easy chair, say, for twenty minutes. Even if you don't sleep you will rest. After bathing, rearranging the hair and getting into fresh clothes you will feel like a totally different woman and equal to any work that may be necessary.

Iced Coffee.

Pour two quarts of boiling water over one-half pound of best coffee and let stand one-half hour; then strain off the clear liquor through cloth, add one quart of milk and one-quarter pound of sugar. Pour into freezer and pack well around with ice and salt. Let it stand an hour before using, then serve in small coffee cups.

SHEEP ON THE FARM.

Flock of Lambs Will Do Good Work In Clearing Cornfield of Weeds.

August is the time of the year when the man with the small farm flock can begin to use the lambs to harvest the weeds and grass in the cornfield. The Romney sheep were developed on the drained marshes of Kent, in England, where they are sometimes left out unfed all winter to graze. They are the range sheep of southern Britain. They are of great hardiness, and their lambs are strong and vigorous at birth. They are grazing sheep, able to resist inclement weather and times of short feed. The ram shown is a Romney.

early lambs should be weaned now, and the cornfield makes a convenient place to turn them. Some care must be exercised in getting them used to the new feed, and it would be better to turn them in only an hour or so at a time at first, lengthening the time until there is no further danger.

A Shawnee county farmer having a small flock told us last summer that his cornfields that season were the wonder of passersby, says the Kansas Farmer. They could not understand how he had kept his corn so clean in so wet a year. His lambs did the work, and they not only kept the fields clean of grass and weeds, but made some splendid gains.

One should not get the idea that sheep are never to be fed anything but weeds. If they are considered only as scavengers they probably will not be as successfully kept as if they are given a fair chance with other farm animals. No other animals, however, will eat so many different kinds of weeds, and lambs are the only animals that can be turned into a cornfield without doing damage to the crop. Lambs can also be used to harvest the waste in stubble fields and along roadsides.

There is no more convenient source of fresh meat on the farm in the summer season than the lamb. They furnish two crops—both wool and meat. Some think sheep are subject to numerous diseases, but packing house statistics show that the percentage of sheep condemned is less than that of any other animals.

Thirty or forty ewes can easily be kept on the average farm without having to reduce the other stock. We know of such a flock where this year's wool brought $131. The owner of the flock insists that his sheep have never cost a cent. Everything they have produced has been clear profit.

WOUNDS ON ANIMALS.

Surgical Treatment For Barbed Wire and Other Cuts.

All barb wire cuts deserve immediate attention and should be carefully cared for until healed, according to R. R. Dykstra, professor of veterinary surgery in the Kansas State Agricultural college.

The first thing to do after an animal is cut by a barb wire is to control the bleeding. If the cut is on a limb a bandage should be tightly applied between the wound and the heart so as to check the outflow of the blood. If the wound is only slight a layer of cotton should be applied and held firmly against it by a bandage.

After the bleeding has been checked the next thing to do is to carefully cleanse the wound with some antiseptic, such as a 2 per cent solution of carbolic acid and water. If there are any loose shreds of tissue or skin they should be cut off with scissors.

If the wound is small and superficial it should be dusted with a veterinary dusting powder and a layer of cotton applied and held firmly against the wound with a bandage, points out Professor Dykstra. This treatment should be repeated at least once a day until the wound is healed enough so that it can be left exposed to the air without danger of being contaminated or easily broken open.

If it is a larger or deeper wound, in addition to the foregoing treatments, the edges of the wound should be drawn together by stitching. In stitching the lower part of the wound should be left open so that the wound secretions and pus will find a ready exit.

If the wound is a deep one or in the vicinity of a joint it is serious, and a reliable graduate veterinarian should immediately be consulted.

Curious Superstition.

The ancients believed that the marrow contained in the human backbone often transformed itself into a serpent.

Pliny ("Natural History," volume 10, page 66) says that the marrow of a man's backbone will breed to a snake. The Chinese (Worde's "Eastern Travels") burned the backbone to "destroy serpents that might hatch therefrom."

"That animal doesn't belong to any period," commented the grammarian. "It belongs to an exclamation point."—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

Smith—Yes; I am considered very good. Why?

Jones—Well, here is a little problem for you: There was a man named Little, in Dublin, who had a daughter. Now, then, what time was it?

STRIKE IS IMMINENT

CONFERENCES HAVE FAILED

Walkout on Labor Day Now Looked For

(By United Press)

Washington, August 29—The Four Brotherhood chiefs and twenty-four members of the executive committee today agreed to reject the proposal to the railroad presidents as made to President Wilson yesterday. No formal announcement was made known of the the action taken at the morning meeting. A report was given by the four leaders on the conference with the President last night at which he told them his final purpose so they did not report on the railroad presidents' proposition.

Military operations of the railroads of the United States with the present train crew operating the trains under military draft is a definite proposition before the country if the strike set for Monday by the Railroad Brotherhood takes place.

That is the course President Wilson has in mind it became known today. President Wilson quoted today as declaring his purpose last night to the four heads of the Brotherhood in the session last night at the White House. "I intend to get through the measure," he is credited with having said, "Empowering me to draft service men for military operations of the road and you will be the first one I will draft." If the President plans to halt the strike through a law similar to the Canadian dispute act he must get at it before Monday. Otherwise the Brotherhood will go ahead with their plans and walk out on Labor Day.

As a dramatic climax to his unprecedented negotiations to avert the most disastrous labor war that ever threatened the United States, President Wilson this afternoon appeared before a joint session of Congress and urged the legislation to safeguard the life and interests of the nation. He said he urged the legislation not to be in haste as a means of meeting the emergency, but to make necessary additions to the law. He suggested indeed, circumstances that he had hoped never to see, but compared as well as just if such emergencies are to be prevented in the future. He recommended immediate provisions for the enlargement and administering the reorganization of the interstate commerce commission enabling the commission to deal with duties now developed upon it with thoroughness. To establish an eight hour day on a legal basis alike of work and wages in the employment of all railroad employees operating trains in the interstate transportation. The time set for instituting the law was not determined by Congress. There were several other important declarations.

Of course, the mighty men who rule the ribbons of steel, as well as the paper ribbons that run through the stock tickers, are doing a lot of strenuous objecting, but their resistance to the President's plan for an eight hour day is regarded as mere sparring for compensating concessions. On the final show-down the transportation magnates are altogether likely to yield, for they not only fear a strike, but they shiver in apprehension of the spectre that stalks back of the unions—the shadow cast before by coming events, the increasing popular demand for public ownership of public utilities.

One striking feature of the railroad crisis is the frantic defense of the railroad managers by many of the great daily newspapers. Their point of view is so singularly coincident, their arguments so similar, that the public is quite justified in discerning acceleraton of newspaper opnion by railroad interests. But happily the reins of control held by a few strong hands in Wall Street do not stretch out to the great independent newspaper press of the country. Subserviency to corporation influences is largely a local condition, infecting and impairing some big and powerful daily newspapers, but not prevailing to any great extent outside the metropolitan area.

MUCH BUSINESS TRANSACTED

AT BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS MEETING LAST NIGHT

Three bids were received last night by the Board of Public Works for the construction of a drainage sewer in the eastern side of the city. The sewer will be constructed from the lower part of the Sixth ward through the Sixth, Fifth and Fourth wards, draining the section of the city which suffers from the heavy rain every spring.

Three bids were received for the sewer construction as follows: C. T. Hookkway Construction Company, of Syracuse, $43,074; James T. Leary, of Rochester, $36,436.23, and Frank Massaro, of Fulton. As Mr. Massaro's bid was not totaled the board decided to defer action on letting the contract for one week, at which time the various bids will be compared.

The question of paving Cayuga street between Fourth and Sixth streets was considered, and City Engineer Hill's estimate of the cost of paving was read, the total cost being $3,392, of which the city's share will be $1,622. The question of paving South Third street between Broadway and State, and South Fifth between Broadway and Pratt, South Sixth between Broadway and Pratt, and State street between Fourth and Sixth streets also was discussed.

The following taxpayers were present to act as a paving board in connection with the paving of these streets: Charles Schaffer, C. C. Draper, for South Third street; Charles Kirby and Cyril Chesbro, for State street; Henry Bryant and Frank Randall, for South Sixth, and W. H. Calkins and James Green, for South Sixth street.

Consideration was also made for the improvement of the foot of Rochester street on First street. This property overlooks the river and at present is in bad condition.

A lengthy opinion from City Attorney William S. Hillick was read in relation to the petition for the cleaning out of the outlet to Neahtawanta Lake in which he said:

"The Commissioners were given the power to assess the expense of this upon the lands as benefited and force collection thereof by sale of the lands.

The outlet was, at that time included within the bounds of the Town of Granby. In 1902, at the incorporation of the City of Fulton, the Creek was brought within the bound of the City of Fulton and is no longer a part of the Town of Granby.

The petitioners ask that the Board of Public Works of the City of Fulton, undertake the duties conferred by the legislature upon the Commissioner (now superintendent) of Highways of the Town of Granby, that is to say, that the City clean and deepen this creek and then assess the cost against the lands benefited. Most of these lands being situated in the Town of Granby and not within the City of Fulton. This is a work entailing considerable expense and should not be undertaken unless the authority of the Board is clear and the power of the Board to assess the lands in Granby and reimburse the City is beyond doubt.

"No power or authority to do this work exists in any public officers except by virtrue of a special act of the legislature. No power exists in the Board of Public Works to assess property in the Town of Granby or to incur this expense, except by direction and authority of the legislature. I am unable to find any act of the legislature expressly giving the City authorities this power, nor can I find from any legislative act any implied transfer of the power from the Superintendent of Highways to the City of Fulton.

"The Charter transfers the duties and obligations of the Village of Oswego Falls to the City of Fulton, but this was not an obligation of that village.

"The Charter does not transfer the duties of the Town of Granby to the City of Fulton, nor the duties of the Commissioner of Highways of Granby, excepting as it gives to the Board of Public Works the powers of Commissioners of Highways generally. The power to regulate this creek and assess and collect the expense is not a power bestowed generally upon Commissioners of Highways of Towns, but is a special power conferred specially upon the Commissioner of Granby. There is no evidence that the legislature intended to vest the powers of the Commissioner of Granby in the City. The lands are in Granby. The tax is on property in Granby. The legislature appointed a special commission to do this special work. It provided and appointed the Commissioner of Highways of Granby its agent to preserve the work. Because the creek is now within the bounds of the City does not, in the absence of special provision so directing, transfer these duties to the City.

"It is my opinion, that the Board of Public Works of the City of Fulton is without authority to undertake this work, that the Board has no funds which it can use for the purpose and that, if the expense were incurred, it would be impossible to force the residents and owners of land in the Town of Granby to pay the tax and reimburse the city."

A CLOSE CALL FOR BICYCLIST

WHEEL RUN OVER BY FREIGHT TRAIN

Raymond Middleton narrowly escaped death last night at the corner of Cayuga and Second streets. Young Middleton was riding down the hill on a bicycle when he was struck in the eye with an apple which was thrown by a boy named Tyrell. There was an Ontario and Western freight train approaching at the time and the boy becoming confused from being hit lost control of his wheel, which was going at a rapid speed. It ran directly onto the railroad track, but Middleton jumped in time to escape the train. The wheel, however, went underneath the cars and was rendered absolutely worthless, only the demolished parts being found.

NARROW ESCAPE ON THE LOWER BRIDGE

What might have been a serious accident was averted this morning at the west side of the lower bridge.

A team of horses driven by Thomas Goss, of the Granby Paper Company was slowly plodding down the Gansevoort street hill when suddenly the reach of the wagon broke, allowing the wagon load of pulp to fall at the feet of the horses.

Owing to the heavy weight of the load the horses were pushed down the hill and into the curb. Fortunately there were no serious results but the escape was nothing short of miraculous.

—There's never so good a time to fish as when the fish are biting.

* * *

We will begin by admitting that business is better with us and hope that the same is true with you. If it is not what you would like, you can make it so by learning a lesson from the good fisherman, who knows that there's never so good a time to fish as when fish are biting.

FIXING PRICES

Very naturally, the people of England are feeling the high prices they have to pay for grain and meat—just as we in this country are feeling it. And, just as naturally, they are laying the blame for the high prices exactly where a lot of people in this country lay the blame, as witness this item from a recent issue of the London, (England) Times:

"Who fixes the price for our bread? The Chicago corn ring. Who determines how much we shall pay for our meat? The Chicago meat trust."

Doesn't that sound familiar? Why, we hear the same thing every day in the week, right here in this good land of peace. In fact, we have heard from time to time that "investigations" were going to be made to find out "how it happened," and from time to time somebody says somebody else is going to be prosecuted for the crime. But the crime goes right on—and the prices continue to rise.

There is no question but the gamblers—otherwise known as speculators—have some influence at times in boosting prices. They corner the foodstuffs occasionally and make all of us pay dear for their "enterprise." But the truth is that there is generally something else back of a rise in prices besides the Chicago gamblers. England herself is back of the present rise, for it is due in some measure to the war, and England is certainly mixed up in the war.

The Chicago gamblers have had nothing to do with the war, which has prevented the people of Europe from raising crops. They have had nothing to do with the drought in this country which shortened pastures. They had nothing to do with the wheat crop falling a few hundred million bushels short. They did not influence the curtailment in the production of farm animals, which has shortened the supply of farm animals.

The gamblers take advantage of all of these combinations of circumstances, and they also promote pessimistic feeling regarding the outlook when they want to put up prices. They ought to be in the penitentiary, every one of them—any man who gambles in the necessaries of life and tries to boost the price thereof in order to make money for himself ought to be in the penitentiary. But our English friends should know that the Chicago gamblers are not wholly responsible for the high price of foodstuffs at this time.

The sudden rise in wheat yesterday was not due to the supply and demand idea. It was due wholly to the speculators. Probably for a scare and the indications are that we will suddenly see a reaction and $2.00 wheat.

A LIFE'S PHILOSOPHY

John Burroughs, the naturalist, when asked if he had any message for the American people, answered that the way to be happy was to keep smiling under all difficulties. He added:

"Keep cheerful and mind your own business." I may say that I have followed that rule myself not unsuccessfully, and in these trying days when there is so much foolish talk and hasty, violent action, it might be worth the while of others to give it a trial."

There is a complete philosophy of life in that short sentence: "Keep cheerful and mind your own business." Every man, woman and child might take it for a motto and by putting it into practice make themselves and the world happier. There is altogether too much gloom in the world. Trials and troubles are bound to come to most of us, but there is no good reason why they should not be borne with resignation. The difficulty is that we are apt to pity ourselves too much, and self-pity makes us a nuisance to ourselves and to those about us. Cheerfulness, on the other hand, is contagious, and one bright, cheery person, like the sunshine of Heaven can transform a room, a house or a community.

THE ROAD HOG

The road hog—the fellow who insists upon using the middle of the road when there is not room enough on either side to pass him—he is a new development in American life, but he is becoming numerous. And he isn't confined to any certain neighborhood nor to any certain station of life. He may drive a Ford or Packard, or a two horse wagon with a load of hay. But he is an aggravating nuisance just the same, and should be suppressed.

It is the rule of the road—moral and legal—to give one half the road to a passing vehicle. When one approaches from behind and gives an alarm by blowing a horn or ringing a bell, it is the duty of the driver of the vehicle ahead to steer to the right of the road. When he fails to do so, he is a road hog of the worst kind. When two vehicle approach each other from opposite directions, there is not so much danger—at least there is as much danger to the one as to the other if either fails to observe the rules of the road. But when one approaches a vehicle from the rear, the advantages are all with the fellow in front, and it is then that the failure to turn out is all the more aggravating.

Contrary to what many believe, the road hog is not a farmer, as a general proposition. Farmers are the most accommodating of people. The road hog is more generally a man from the city; in fact he is encountered right here in the city more frequently than he is in the country. There was some opposition to the automobiles upon the part of the farmers in the early days—when cars were operated largely by city people who paid no attention to the rights of anyone. When it was customary for a driver to see how many chickens and pigs he could kill in a day; when he rejoiced at causing a farmer's team to run away; when he passed the farm house at sixty miles an hour and frightened everything upon the place—in those early days there was very naturally some prejudice against automobile drivers upon the part of farmers. But at this time many farmers have automobiles; stock is no longer frightened with the passing of a car, and drivers are more careful about running over farm animals. So the prejudice has died a natural death, and the road hog does not come from the farm. But he ought to be suppressed, no matter where he comes from.

COULDN'T STAND CRITICISM

A Michigan judge committed suicide because he couldn't stand criticism—drowned himself in a lake when people and papers questioned his motives in rendering a decision. But how a man of so sensitive a nature came to be elected judge in the first place, we do not know.

Americans are a race of critics. We criticise everybody, and question motives with impunity. Especially do we criticise public men or promnent men. But it is seldom the victim of criticism is so sensitive that he takes his life to avoid it, although the Michigan judge is not the first one to do so. But when a man voluntarily enters public life, as judges do, the wonder is that, he is not so hardened against criticism as to pass it over without permitting it to get the better of him.

Criticism has saddened more lives than any other one thing. Men and women in every city go to their graves broken-hearted because of unkind words uttered against them. There are more aching hearts than you might imagine, due to these critics which we have about us. To have your motives questioned when you know that those motives are unselfish, to be suspected when you are doing your level best to help along with the game of life, to be criticised for mistakes of the head when the heart isright—those things are deadening to sensitive natures. But they are common enough.

Fault is some times found with the newspapers for their harsh criticisms. Men of the press are frequently condemned for printing adverse comments upon other people. But the truth is that there is not nearly so much adverse criticism in the newspapers as there is in private conversation. No issue of any newspaper carries as much criticism of people as one can hear in an ordinary conversation. And it generally happens that those who criticise the press for criticising others, are themselves the worst gossip mongers in the neighborhood.

—The theory of the quarrelling labor unions and corporations is that they can make themselves more prosperous by impoverishing the general public on which they depend for their success.

—Push! If you can't push, pull. If you can't pull please get out of the way.

MONSTER BLUE WHALES.

The Most Gigantic Creatures This World Has Ever Known.

It has been said that the first duty of a whale is to be large. The blue whale is then the most successful whale, for it is the largest creature which has ever existed on the earth or in its waters. Even those extinct giant reptiles, the dinosaurs, which splashed along the borders of the inland seas of Wyoming and Montana 3,000,000 years ago, could not approach a blue whale either in length or weight.

In 1903 a blue whale was weighed in sections at Newfoundland. The animal was seventy-eight feet long, thirty-five feet around the shoulders, the head was nineteen feet in length and the tail sixteen feet from tip to tip. The total weight was sixty-three tons. The flesh weighed forty tons, the blubber eight tons, the blood, viscera and baleen seven tons and the bones eight tons.

Exaggerated accounts of the size of blue whales are current even in reputable books on natural history, but the largest specimen which has yet been actually measured and recorded is 187 feet long, stranded a few years ago upon the coast of New Zealand. It must have weighed at least seventy-five tons.

Whales are able to attain such an enormous size because their bodies are supported by the water in which they live. A bird is limited to the weight which its wings can bear up in the air. A land animal if it becomes too large cannot hold its body off the ground or readily move about and is doomed to certain destruction. But a whale has to face none of these problems and can grow without restraint.

Because whales live in a supporting medium their young are of enormous size at birth, in some instances the calf being almost half the length of its mother. I once took a twenty-five foot baby, which weighed about eight tons, from an eighty-five foot blue whale.—Roy Chapman Andrews in New York Independent.

UPRUSH OF THE SAP.

Force It Exerts In Its Mysterious Flow Through the Plants.

Even now the causes which underlie the great upward flow of sap in the spring are not completely understood. That the movement is accompanied by considerable force has been demonstrated in a remarkable manner.

In the spring season, when the sap is rising with great vigor, the stem of a grapevine was cut right across. With as little loss of time as possible a piece of bladder was tied over the surface of the wounded part. As fixed the bladder was in a state of collapse, but it did not remain in this condition long. Within half an hour it was obvious that it contained a good deal of liquid.

As time went on the amount of fluid matter increased so much that the bladder was quite full. Two hours after fixing the bladder was so distended that it was lifted right up. An hour later the pressure had increased to such a degree that the bladder burst, being unable to stand the strain any longer.

In this connection it is interesting to recall the experiment of Dutrochet, also with a grapevine stem. In this case a bent tube containing mercury was affixed to the cut stem in such a manner that any fluid coming from the plant would have to lift the column of quicksilver. In one of his experiments it was shown that the sap raised the column of mercury to the height of thirty inches. Dutrochet calculated that in such a case the force exercised by the sap was five times greater than that of the blood in the crural artery of the horse. It requires no student of anatomy to appreciate the force of this statement.—Baltimore American.

A Habit Stanley Had.

It was remarked of the late Sir H. M Stanley during his last visit to New York that he stood all the time with his back to the wall during receptions instead of standing out where people would pass behind him.

Lady Stanley laughingly explained that this was an old habit contracted in Africa—that Stanley always stood with his back against a tree of a barricade of some sort when brought in contact with the savages, and it had become such a habit with him that he took that position no matter where he was.

HOW AUTOS CAN OBTAIN GREATER MILEAGE TO THE GALLON. —Gasoline is elastic. A gallon will drive a car almost any distance—the record is nearly ninety miles—says a writer in the current number of Motor Print. This is food for thought for those who are worrying over the high price of fuel. By taking a few simple precautions it is possible for every owner to reduce greatly the consumption per mile.

If the car is run too slowly or fast there is fuel waste. Fifteen miles per hour is a good average.

Until now the average motorist has been careless about the amount of fuel he used because it was comparatively cheap and was a small percentage of the total car expense.

Make sure that you are getting all the gasoline that you pay for. Some owners are not. Watch the counter on the pump to see that it registers the correct number of gallons and that the operator does not tamper with it while filling your tank. Furthermore, be certain that you obtain full measure. Some gasoline pumps leak; others have been "fixed" to give a short gallon. It is almost impossible to find the error by examining the pump, so it is necessary to check the amount in your tank by frequent measurement, or, if this is not feasible, it is advisable occasionally to buy a gallon in a can of your own and measure the quantity when you get home.

Most cars can be operated with a leaner mixture without affecting the production of power. Some motorists may even deem it advisable to run with a very lean adjustment, notwithstanding a reduction in hill climbing ability or speed. The exact adjustment must be determined by trial.

An auxiliary device which may be attached to the manifold and operated from the dash should be used. It will be found helpful when running with light load along a smooth, level road or downhill. When the motor is used as a brake the suction on the carburetor is reduced to a minimum by opening the auxiliary air device wide.

The car should run easily. All the bearings should be well greased and free. It should be possible to push the car without difficulty with one hand on a smooth, level surface. The importance of reducing friction to the minimum is shown by the fact that a racing car in good condition may be pushed with one finger.

DRINK A GLASS OF REAL HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who ar accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

CALDER BACKED BY THOUSANDS

Republicans In Every County Want Him For Senator.

STATE WIDE SPEAKING TOUR

Senatorial Candidate Interested In the Farmers and Mechanics and Outspoken For "an All Embracing and All Inclusive Preparedness."

Ten thousand Republicans, representing every county in the state, have volunteered to serve on the committee charged with the direction of the candidacy of William M. Calder for United States senator. The committee, it was said, is not a perfunctory organization, but a live, active and aggressive body determined to see that the Long Island man is made the candidate of his party for a seat in the upper house of the national congress.

Experienced and Able.

One of the most active members of this committee is Francis Hendricks of Syracuse. Mr. Hendricks in a dispatch recently said:

"I believe Calder should be nominated and elected. He is well qualified by experience and ability to serve in the United States senate."

Encouraged and inspired by this whole souled devotion to his cause, Mr. Calder has begun a state wide speaking campaign. The committee is preparing for a mobilization of the forces friendly to Mr. Calder, and according to some of his most active workers aid is coming from sources which were believed formerly to be rather antagonistic to his aspirations.

WILLIAM M. CALDER.

To Visit Rural Districts.

Mr. Calder plans especially to visit the rural districts. In an interview he said that one of the first concerns of a legislator should be to interest himself in the farmer and mechanic of the country. He declared that in his opinion the present administration was incompetent or would be incompetent to handle the complicated situation which would arise at the close of the war. He said the reason for the largely increased price of wheat, corn, oats and other farm products was to be found solely in the fact that Europe, instead of raising corn, was raising war and the competition between the agriculturists of this country and the agriculturists in the old world was completely suspended.

Believes In Preparedness.

"My platform," said Mr. Calder, "is the Republican platform. I believe in complete preparedness. I believe, though, the word preparedness comprehends more than merely getting ready to repel a possible foreign foe. To be fully prepared we should be ready for the readjustments, the realignments, the reconstruction and the rehabilitation which will be found necessary at the close of the present war.

"There is a tragedy of peace as well as a tragedy of war, and no nation is fully prepared which is not ready for both. It is the design of the Republican party to map out a program of general preparedness, an all embracing and all inclusive preparedness. This has my heartiest support.

"I believe in a tariff adjustment which will prepare the American farmer, the American mechanic, the American planter, the American miner, the American storekeeper, the American clerk, against ruinous competition by the underpaid and underfed labor of some sections of Europe.

For "Undiluted Americanism."

"I believe in economic administration, but I don't believe in parsimony. I believe in efficiency, and I know that the Republican party will always be ready to give and vote the means necessary to guarantee the greatest efficiency. I believe in undiluted Americanism, and I so define undiluted Americanism as devotion to America and its institutions and a love of country which will impel our citizens to make sacrifices necessary to assure us against foreign aggression and domestic insurrection. We should be prepared to grapple with enemies at home as well as enemies abroad. True Americanism covets no man's possessions nor seeks anything that is not truly and properly its own."

DR. QUINLAN DENIES CHARGES

SURRENDERED TO AUTHORITIES AND RETURNED TO SYRACUSE.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 29—Dr. J. W. Quinlan, wanted here on charges of having defrauded foreigners of this and surrounding cities by a medical scheme of upwards of $20,000 has surrendered to the authorities and will fight the charges.

Accompanied by a lawyer Quinlan came here from Amsterdam and went into conference with the district attorney. Quinlan claims that he was merely the agent of a company and that he was hired to conduct the campaign in this city. It is understood a similar campaign was operated in Utica and a physician has been indicted there on similar charges as were made in the warrant sworn out here for Dr. Quinlan.

Charles E. Hardies, Dr. Quinlan's attorney denies the charges against his client and says that he is a reputable physician of Amsterdam and has a good practice there. He says his client came here on a salary to work for an association. He denies any knowledge of alleged frauds.

Dr. Quinlan disappeared from this city about two weeks ago after having conducted an office for a month or so, during which time he treated a large number of patients, all foreigners, most of whom were secured through an advertising campaign in foreign papers. A warrant charging grand larceny second degree was issued by officials here.

The conference between Dr. Quinlan, his attorney and the district attorney began at two o'clock yesterday afternoon.

DR. MARY WALKER WANTS RESTRICTION ORDER RESCINDED.

The announcement of the state fair officials that children under the age of sixteen years will not be admitted to the grounds because of the infantile paralysis epidemic has been severely criticized by Dr. Mary Walker, of Oswego, who declares that such an order is "wicked."

She adds that the closing of parks, playgrounds and other gathering places of children as equally senseless, repeating her previous assertation that the disease is not contagious.

"I know of many children," she declares," who are going to be terribly disappointed by not being allowed to attend the fair and surely the young people of the state are going to lose an unusual educational opportunity by this wicked order. I hope you see fit to rescind it before the fair opens," she concludes in a letter to the fair commissioners.

CITY WILL APPEAL.

Notice of appeal was filed in the County Clerk's office yesterday by W. S. Hillick, city attorney of Fulton, in the case of Louisa Hammond, as executrix of the estate of Leon Hammand, against the city of Fulton. Mr. Hammond was a call fireman in the city's employ and was killed while on duty November 30, 1915.

The action was tried before County Judge Henry D. Coville and Mrs. Hammond was awarded a verdict of $2,575, which included costs and interest.

HEALTH OFFICERS' COURSE WILL START FRIDAY

OBITUARY.

The death of Esther, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Fredenburg, occurred Thursday morning, August 17 after only two days' illness. All that loving hands could do was of no avail. The funeral took place the same day at five o'clock. Rev. Mr. Peters officiating. Interment was made at Mt. Adnah Cemetery.

Weep not dear friends for the one who is gone
To the beautiful home in the skies;
Weep not though the hours seem long,
Since the little one closed its eyes.
We miss her happy little voice,
We miss her joyous tread;
We miss the sunshine of her face,
For little Esther is dead.
The dear little one so spotless and pure,
Will never know want or care;
There will be no pain or sorrow to endure,
For all will be happy there.
It was only God's hands that took her home,
That carried her up above;
To fill a vacant spot, he prepared for one he loved.
She is beckoning there for the rest so dear,
She is calling from the home on high;
The little Angel wants all who are here,
To meet her there when we die.

We desire to most heartily thank all our friends and neighbors for the beautiful flowers sent and the kindness shown us in our recent bereavement, and the pastor for his kind and loving words spoken at the funeral services of our darling little Esther.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Fredenburg.

HIS SANITARY PRECAUTIONS

LOST LICENSE BECAUSE HE STRAINED HIS MILK

Syracuse, N. Y., August 29—M. (not Monsieur) Lishak, a milk peddler started out from home the other morning with a load of his product and reached the city limits before he happened to think he had not strained his milk.

He could not turn back because he did not have the time, but the milk had to be strained. He hunted through his pockets for a handkerchief, but they were empty.

Then John B. Kolb, a barber, of 126 Van Rennselaer street hove in sight, extracted a bunch of keys from his pocket, opened his shop, grabbed a broom and began to sweep out.

Lishak hastened across the road and asked if he might borrow a towel, a clean one preferred, but anyway a towel.

Taking one from the rail Kolb watched the peddler unload two milk cans from his wagon, strain the milk through the towel from one to the other, climb aboard and start on his route dispensing pints and quarts through the neighborhood.

In some manner the occurrence reached the ears of chief milk inspector Hanchett, who in the following letter notified Lishak that perhaps the city's health would be considerably improved if he was deprived of his license.

"Owing to the fact that you borrowed a towel from a barber shop," wrote the inspector, "and admitted that you strained the milk which you had on your wagon through the towel and sold it to your customers, after it had been strained through the towel we deem that you have shown yourself completely unfit in knowledge and practice of handling milk to further continue to peddle milk in the city of Syracuse. Your license, is therefore revoked, and should you sell any more milk in the streets of Syracuse you will be liable to the penalty which is inflicted on men selling milk without a license."

DELAY IN TRANSFER OF TIMBER LANDS

Unexpected legal delays will hold up the taking of possession of the Canadian timber holdings of the Battle Island Paper Company by the bondholders' committee of the defunct concern according to statements of S. Guy Davey, of Syracuse, representative of the committee on his return from Canada.

It is believed that several more trips to Canada will be necessary to straighten out the latest difficulties before the property is turned over.

Political Jottings

Mr. McCormick follows the same method in claiming credit for legislation he does in his predictions. He includes several acts of the Taft Administration.

The Democratic press is convinced that it is the duty of Mr. Hughes to say something that will hurt his chance of being elected.

President Wilson in his acceptance speech may reply to Mr. Hughes' charges, but he will not answer them. That is an entirely different matter.

It is reported from Washington that the Administration will ignore most of Mr. Hughes' charges. That is very much the easiest way for it to answer them.

Governor Hughes announces in one of his speeches that he is a constructionist. But we are willing to admit that so far as Democratic policies are concerned he is a destructionist.

Tammany leader Charles F. Murphy announces that he will retire after the campaign. It is believed that many other more or less distinguished Democrats will follow his example.

Grover Cleveland was the last Democratic President. He was also the last President to issue bonds to secure money to defray the running expenses of the government. But Wilson will tie him in this.

President Wilson will be notified of the Democratic nomination at Shadow Lawn. This seems a most appropriate place for letting him know that he will shortly have to give up his place in the sun.

President Wilson will not make any speaking dates, we are told, but only separate engagements for addresses, considering a "speaking tour" undignified. "Too proud to fight."

SEEK PROGRESSIVE AND LABOR VOTES ON FALSE CLAIMS

Democrats Posing as the Enactors of Legislation Which the Indisputable Facts Show to Be of Republican Origin.

AUTHORITY ON SOUND SOCIAL LAW CITES 11 GLARING CASES

Organized Labor Resents This Deception and Running True to Form Will in November as at Many Previous Elections Indignantly Smite Those Who Without Justice Lay Claim to its Gratitude—Even the Much-Touted Federal Reserve Law Is Based Entirely on the Statistical Research of a Republican Administration.

That "No class is more instant than labor to condemn and punish those who without foundation lay claim to its gratitude" is the assertion of John Williams, ex-Commissioner of Labor, apropos of certain false claims set forth by Vance McCormick, Democratic National Chairman, in behalf of his party.

Chairman McCormick caused to be published in the New York Times, on July 31, an appeal for Progressive and Labor support, based on "twenty measures enacted by Congress while President Wilson has been in the White House," and for which he claims credit for the Wilson administration and asks Progressive approbation. Commenting on this statement, the former Commissioner of Labor says:

"Students and promoters of sound social legislation will do well to examine this list for it contains a number of items of unusual interest.

"We may well believe that it was with a great deal of pride that Mr. McCormick contemplated the record of his party and that he drew a vivid mental picture of Progressives flocking to the support of Mr. Wilson because of the things claimed on behalf of this administration.

"It is a pity that in the interest of truth, which knows neither Democrat, Progressive nor Republican, we must mar this remarkable statement. Nevertheless, it is our duty to call attention to the fact that in his effort to induce support for Mr. Wilson the Chairman of the Democratic National Committee has fallen into a glaring error. We have no desire to disparage the achievements of the Wilson Administration, but we must enter emphatic protest against any attempt to pad the Record.

"Mr. McCormick claims 'twenty measures enacted by Congress while President Wilson has been in the White House.' This claim we dispute. More than one-half are measures enacted under a Republican Administration and were approved by Ex-President Taft, and for others the Democratic Administration deserves no credit.

"Lest anyone think that this is a groundless assertion we herewith furnish the record which can easily be verified:

From among the twenty pieces of legislation cited by Chairman McCormick, I select the following:

(1) Eight hour law on government work. In effect March 1, 1913. Signed by Mr. Taft.

(2) Eight hour provision for post office clerks. In effect generally August 24, 1912.

(3) Eight hour provision applicable to the manufacture of ordnance for the government. In effect January 1, 1913. Signed by Mr. Taft.

(4) Children's Bureau. In effect April 9, 1912. Signed by Mr. Taft.

(5) Industrial Commission Law to investigate industrial relations. In effect August 23, 1912. Signed by Mr. Taft.

(6) The phosphorous match law. Enacted in 1912 effective as to the importation of white phosphorous matches January 1, 1913, and as to the manufacture of such matches July 1, 1913. Signed by Mr. Taft.

(7) The Department of Labor Law creating a department with a secretary who shall be a member of the President's Cabinet. In effect March 4, 1913. Signed by Mr. Taft.

(8) The Parcel Post Law. In effect January 1, 1913. Signed by Mr. Taft.

(9) The Federal Reserve law which, while passed during this Administration, is based entirely on the vast work of investigation and compilation done by the Monetary Commission, during the Taft Administration, and closely follows, except in certain details, the legislation recommended by that commission."

(10) The eight-hour law for the District of Columbia, was fathered and put through by a Republican, Senator La Follette.

The anti-trust law antedates the Cleveland Administration — although President Cleveland never enforced it. From time to time, as with all great legislative acts, it has been necessary to amend or add to it, and the anti-trust law of the Wilson Administration was merely such an amendment, a logical development of the original act.

(11) The Commerce Court was actually abolished during the Taft Administration, although it has not been demonstrated that its abolition was a wise step.

"Any statement hereafter emanating from Mr. McCormick will be subjected to the closest scrutiny. The errors in his first effort are inexcusable and can only arouse resentment among labor men and social workers. No class is more instant than labor to condemn and punish those who without foundation lay claim to its gratitude.

"Will Mr. McCormick explain his padding of the Record?"

(Signed) JOHN WILLIAMS,
Ex-Commissioner of Labor, New York State.

THE INCONSIDERATE BEHAVIOR OF A CANDIDATE.

Why does Mr. Hughes insist upon talking about that old-fashioned, not to say "iniquitous," doctrine, the protective tariff? For nearly the whole period of its industrial existence, the United States struggled along under protection. The Democratic party in 1913 came to the relief of an afflicted and burdened people.

The Republican Administration (not on account of the tariff, it is true) was overthrown. Before taking over the reins of government, and for many years prior to that time, countless Democratic statesmen had vainly tried to persuade the American people that the protective tariff was an iniquity, a veritable contrivance of devils. It fostered the trusts, and it was an elevator of prices even to the thirty-seventh story and the tower. They promised relief. The poor should be no longer oppressed; the cost of living should be reduced—must be, as the sure result of a tariff for revenue—protective only in spots, such as the Louisiana sugar mills and the Carolina cotton factories.

Doesn't Mr. Hughes know what the Administration did which he is now attacking? He ought to know. The Democrats, under the leadership of Mr. Wilson and Mr. Underwood, repealed that iniquity and abomination, the Payne-Aldrich tariff law—that foster mother of trusts and high prices—and enacted in its place the present law. Mr. Hughes knows, of course, as every head of a family in America knows, that the trusts have not yet been dissolved and that the cost of living is higher than ever,—that the price of everything has reached an unheard-of height—but what of it?

What of it, indeed? While it is true that a protective tariff never failed, under any circumstances, to protect American industry and American labor, it is to be considered that the war in Europe has upset the plans of the present low-tariff administration considerably. Also it forms an excellent foundation for an alibi. It is a very unusual condition.

Now, the obvious thing for Mr. Hughes to do is to give the Democrats a chance to get their tariff on straight. Never mind the patient; let the doctor experiment. That time won't come, of course, until the war is over—according to the Democratic version. In other words the tariff-for-revenue doctrine doesn't fit the conditions; the conditions must be made to fit the tariff. So why this disturbance, Mr. Hughes?

Besides, when you discuss a little thing like the tariff, do you not know that Son-in-Law McAdoo and the other statesmen of the Democratic family are likely to repeat their accusation that you are "pettifogging"?—Charleston, W. Va., Mail.

UNITED STATES' HONOR

Hughes' Criticism of Foreign Policy Approved in West.

(Portland, Ore., Telegram.)

The Republican party has selected a standard-bearer whose utterances from day to day justify the people who chose him. Not only does he bring before the country the shortcomings of the Administration that owes its existence to a divided Republicanism, but his criticism is everywhere constructive.

He tells what must be done and will be done by the party he represents to prevent wastefulness and extravagance in the governmental expenditures and to put a stop to the vacillating policy that has caused other nations to believe that the United States has no intention of backing up its demands made in the interests of justice and humanity.

Most vulnerable of all points in the Democratic armor is its foreign policy. Primarily this is because of the spoils system by which men trained in the consular and diplomatic service through long years, have been displaced to make room for politicians and friends of politicians, whose sole claim to preferment was their services to the Democratic party.

"If I am elected president of the United States," said Mr. Hughes last night, "I propose that every man I put in charge of an important department shall be a man eminently fit to discharge the duties of that department."

The denuding of the diplomatic service of men of experience in order to supply political jobs, as has been done by Mr. Wilson, or with his consent, Mr. Hughes denounces as "a capital offense—trading in the good name of the United States and damaging its honor." "Nobody," he adds, "has a right to pay political debts with the good name and honor of the United States."

Which is clear proof that Mr. Hughes has not been unmindful of the high principles of government which must be maintained in order that this republic shall maintain its place as a shining example to all nations.

Stories of the Gravediggers.

Grimly humorous is the tale of the Scottish gravedigger who complained that he did not get constant work.

"But, George," said the minister, "if you were to be constantly employed in the duties of the office you would soon bury the whole parish."

"That micht be, sir, but hoo am I to keep a wife and family unless I get regular work? 'Deed, sir, I havena buried a leevin' soul for the last six weeks."

Harder still was the case of another gravedigger who was asked to reduce his fee for digging a grave because, "mind ye, James, she was an auld woman and was sair spent."

Short Cuts

To Drain Silver.—Perforate the bottom of a pound baking powder can with many holes. When washing knives, forks and spoons have one or more of such cans in the rinsing pan and place each article upright in it as it is washed. Pour boiling water over all, remove to another pan or dish for a moment, then place on the stove shelf to finish drying. No wiping is required.

To Repair Wall Paper.—To cover a soiled or torn spot on wall paper which has become at all faded, take a piece of new paper of the same pattern and expose it to sunlight until it is faded to the same degree as that on the walls. The patch will then be practically invisible.

A Great Convenience.—Separate the leaves of a newspaper and cut in halves, pierce the pad of leaves near one end and hang them over a nail as near as possible to the kitchen table or cabinet. Use them to slip under kettles or anything which would soil the table. They will be handy also for other uses too numerous to mention.

The Children's Play Corner

What Time Is It?

It requires two players who understand this game, a leader and his accomplice. The accomplice leaves the room, while the leader and the rest of the party remain inside. The leader asks the players what hour they will choose for the accomplice to guess. Suppose some one says, "Four o'clock." The assistant is called in, and he questions the leader, saying, "Well, what time is it?" The leader answers thus: "Don't you know?" and then, "Doubtless dancing time." The assistant immediately says, "Four o'clock," to the general mystification of the company.

The key is that each hour from 1 to 12 o'clock has been named according to the letters of the alphabet in rotation, from A to K. The leader in answering must be very careful to begin each answer with the letter indicating the chosen hour; thus in the above the assistant noticed that each answer began with "D," and D being the fourth letter of the alphabet indicated that 4 o'clock was the time chosen.

Kelleher had a trial with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1912, but was turned back to the Springfield club and went to Indianapolis in 1914. Last season he was with Denver.

"Cap" Anson Got Jolt.

Cap Anson was once called as a witness in a baseball suit, in the course of which he got the rudest jolt of his career, says F. G. Menke in the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Cap, just then the most talked of player in the United States, took his place in the witness chair with the air of a matinee idol on review, and the judge said:

"Name, please."

"I am Cap Anson," returned the diamond star, with a show of pride.

"I want your full name, sir," commanded the judge.

"Adrian Anson—Captain A. C. Anson of the Chicago team, the ball player, you know. Of course you've heard of me," answered Anson in a tone of rebuke to the judge for his seeming ignorance.

"The name in nowise is familiar to me. I have never heard of you," icily returned the judge, whereupon kind and loving friends of Cap Anson rushed forward with smelling salts, pure ammonia and other preparations designed to rescue humans from a state of collapse.

Jimmy Archer Slipping.

It looks as if Jim Archer had run his course as a Cub. It is reported on reliable authority that Tinker plans to hand him his release in the near future. Jim is a veteran now, and a very brittle one. He has been injured so much this season that he has been of little real worth to the club. Moreover, it is said that he pays a great deal of attention to his injuries, and magnifies them to such an extent that his mates have quit sympathizing with him. If Archer is let out, it will mark the passing of the last active member of the old crowd commanded by Frank Chance in Chicago's pennant winning days. Tinker was a member of that crew, of course, but he is no longer rated as a player. He has retired from active duty.

Tinker to Stay With Cubs.

Joe Tinker will continue as manager of the Cubs despite stories to the contrary. Owner Charles Weeghman of the Bruins nailed a yarn that Tinker was slated for the block with a statement that "it is absolutely untrue."

"It's the first I heard of it," he said. "Joe is not to blame for the failure of the Cubs to show pennant form. The players are. Tinker will remain as manager, and we'll do all we can to bolster up the team."

Light as Chaff

Ascent and Descent.

Paddy, the hod man, was a new arrival on the job. Having gone to the top of the building and failed to return, the foreman shouted up:

"Come on, Paddy; what's keeping ye?"

"Sure," cried Paddy, "I can't find my way down."

"Well, come down the way ye went up!" shouts the foreman.

"Faith, an' I won't," says Paddy, "for I came up head first."

A Wise Father.

A Kansas family, so relates former Senator J. L. Bristow of that state, moved to town, and when the boy presented himself at school he was asked by the principal, among other things, as to his favorite poem.

"'The Village Blacksmith,'" was the response. "I recite it every time we have company."

"Does your father ask you to do it?"

"Yes, ma'am," said the boy. "He says he thinks it keeps us from having much company."

Scottish Pride.

To the true Scot there is no place like his land and no people like his people. Not that he doesn't get away from both as soon as he can. But the pride is still there.

When the Royal Scots Greys were honored by having the czar appointed as their honorary colonel, an officer in the regiment told the news to his servant.

"Donald," said he, "the czar of Russia has been appointed colonel of our regiment."

"Indeed, sir, an' is that so?" exclaimed Donald. "It's a verra fine thing fur him." Then a puzzled expression stole over his face, and he scratched his head thoughtfully. "Beg par-r-r-don, sir," he added, "bit wull he be able to keep baith jobs?"

Not In the Way.

"Come, all yo', and be baptized!" the colored evangelist was pleading to his congregation.

"But Ah's been baptized by the Presbyterians," said Rastus.

"Lo'd!" cried the Baptist minister; "yo' only been dry cleaned."—Country Gentleman.

Courage Is Modest.

As a rule, the man who is brave does not waste much breath in announcing the fact.

ORANGE CUP.

Peel six large tart oranges and remove the seeds. Do the same with two lemons. Put the pulp of both oranges and lemons and the peel of one orange and of half a lemon (cut into strips) in a bowl with a small cupful of granulated sugar and let it stand until the sugar is thoroughly dissolved. Stir all well together, add a heaping tablespoonful of fresh pineapple, minced fine, and then put upon a large piece of ice in a pitcher or a punch bowl. Pour in a quart of charged or of plain water, stir up well, and as soon as the mixture is cold it is ready to serve.

The Biter Bit.

A Scottish farmer was selling wool one day to a carrier, and after weighing it he went into the house to make out an invoice. When he came back he missed a cheese that had been standing on a shelf behind the outer door. Glancing at the bag of wool, he observed that it had suddenly increased in size.

"Man," he said to the carrier, "I hae clean forgot the weight o' that bag. Let's pit it on the scales ance mair."

The carrier could not well refuse. The bag was, of course, found to be heavier by the weight of the cheese inside. A new invoice was made out, and the crestfallen carrier went away.

The farmer's wife at once missed the cheese and, rushing to the yard, told her husband that some thief had stolen it.

"Na, na, Meg," replied the farmer quietly; "I hae just selt the cheese for 2 shillin's the pund."—Tit-Bits.

Music Defined.

Music when combined with a pleasurable idea is poetry. Music without the idea is simply music. The idea without the music is prose from its very definiteness.—Edgar Allan Poe.

The Best Apples.

Down at Simpson's store last winter,
Settin' talkin' with the rest,
Some one said to Silas Quinter,
"Si, which apples is the best?"

Silas sort o' smiled a minute:
"Some folks like the Northern Spy;
Spitzenbergs, some thinks is in it;
Talman Sweets is good to try."

"Here's a bid for Stack's Delicious,"
Pipes up Peters, by the stove.
"I don't want to be officious,
But they sure are fine, by Jove!"

"Give me pippins, mild an' meller,"
Ventures Thompson's hired man;
"Good enough for any feller—
I could eat about a pan."

"Well," says Si, "when I was younger,
Years ago—maybe you guessed—
Ef I had the orchard hunger
Stolen apples tasted best."
—Country Gentleman.

They Wanted Him.

A newspaper man ran across the street the other day to a dairy lunch. He was in a hurry. He leaned against the marble counter and ordered a lamb stew. A man who had been out all night swayed against him several times, and his breath exhaled whisky odors, strong, varied and plentiful.

"ONE STEW! ONE STEW!"

"One stew! One stew!" called the boy behind the counter to the kitchen.

The newspaper man turned to the inebriate. "Pardon me, sir," he said, "but I think they are paging you."—Saturday Evening Post.

More Trouble.

The distracted young man paced wildly across the floor.

"Miss Merrill, that beautiful young lady that I was engaged to, has asked to have her letters returned," he said.

"Oh, well, cheer up. Don't take it so hard," his friend said. "I suppose you have sent them?"

"Ah, no, that is the trouble," said the wild eyed man. "I made a mistake and sent the letters from another girl!"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Color Tones For Whistler.

About the time James McNeill Whistler, the artist, was causing a sensation with the painting which he called "A Harmony In Black and Red," "A Nocturne In Blue" or some such name he had a misunderstanding with his club regarding dues. The secretary finally wrote to Mr. Whistler saying that the club would be glad to receive from him "an arrangement in gold and silver."

The Bonanza Mine.

The great Bonanza mine was purchased for an Indian pony and a quantity of whisky in 1859.

What Housewives Are Glad to Know

Home Cookery

Ripe Tomato Ketchup.

Slice a peck of ripe tomatoes and three large onions. Boil an hour. Strain through colander and add one and one-half cupfuls of cider vinegar, a cupful of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of salt and a tablespoonful each of mustard seed, whole cloves and black pepper and two sticks of cinnamon. Put the spices in a cloth and remove when the ketchup is done. Boil three hours, then add one-third teaspoonful of cayenne pepper. Boil up and bottle.

Green Corn Fritters.

With a sharp knife clip off the grains of six large ears of corn, then scrape. Add an egg, one-half cupful of milk, one-half cupful of flour, and salt and pepper to taste. Drop in hot fat and fry.

Baked Onions.

One-half dozen good sized onions, sliced. Put in a baking dish a layer of onions, then a layer of breadcrumbs, salt, pepper and butter until dish is full. The last layer should be breadcrumbs. Cover with milk and bake.

Escaloped Potatoes.

Pare the potatoes, slice thin, wash and drain. Put in a baking dish alternate layers of potatoes and cracker crumbs, seasoned with butter, salt and pepper. Put a few slices of onion on top, also a good sized piece of butter, cover with milk and bake until tender.

Fried Green Tomatoes.

Slice tomatoes and sprinkle with salt. Let stand a few minutes, then roll in flour, season with pepper and fry in hot butter. Brown on both sides.

Fried Cucumbers.

Large cucumbers too old to pickle are best. Slice, let stand in salt a few moments, roll in flour and fry a nice brown.

Baked Corn.

A quart of sweet corn, a cupful of sweet milk, a tablespoonful of butter and one of sugar, an egg, salt and pepper to taste. Mix all together and bake until brown.

Gooseberry Ketchup.

Eight pounds of ripe or partially ripe fruit, four pounds of brown sugar, a pint of good vinegar, two ounces each of cloves and cinnamon tied in a bag. Boil berries, sugar and vinegar for three hours. Add spice, boil fifteen minutes longer.

Can't Fool a Wise Guy.

The Home Medicine Chest Equipment

The following medicines should be found in every home medicine chest: Alcohol, used externally for strains, sprains and bruises; aromatic spirits of ammonia, a stimulant used in fainting when added to water; castor oil, a mild purge; powdered mustard, one teaspoonful in a glass of lukewarm water to cause vomiting and in a plaster as a counterirritant; sirup of ginger for cramps in the stomach, sirup of ipecac, used to cause vomiting and especially useful in cases of croup; carbolated vaseline, talcum powder, white castile soap, absorbent cotton (one-half pound), six gauze roller bandages, one roll adhesive plaster, collodion for slight injuries of the skin, pair of scissors, teaspoon, two bent glass drinking tubes, fountain syringe with glass points, cold cream or hand lotion for chapped hands, lip salve, equal parts of lanolin and vaseline.

Hourglass Sewing Basket

Two oblong peach baskets, their bottoms fastened together and the whole covered with silk, formed the hourglass sewing or darning basket shown in the sketch, says Popular Mechanics.

MADE OF PEACH BASKETS.

Square plum baskets and other forms trimmed in cretonne, linen or inexpensive goods, depending on the intended use, may also be utilized. Ornamental details may be added to suit the individual taste.

Kitchen Kinks

If a little vaseline is rubbed on the backs of ebony hairbrushes before they are washed, the ammonia in the water will not injure the brushes and the vaseline may be rubbed off afterward.

Olive oil applied to the surface of mahogany furniture and rubbed with a soft cloth makes an excellent polish.

A little glycerin rubbed on windows which have just been washed will give a gloss to the surface and the glass will stay clean longer.

Strong flavored vegetables such as cabbage, onions and turnips should be cooked uncovered.

Painted woodwork must never be scrubbed, only washed at least once a fortnight and rubbed thoroughly dry.

Valuable Facts All Should Know

Breathing.

Breathe through the nose, as this method will warm and moisten and purify the air. Breathing through the mouth will not. Colds, so called, are contracted by mouth breathing.

Food For Fat People.

Don't take fat reducing medicines if you are too stout. Cut down your diet, get out of door exercise, and you will assume normal lines and weight. Avoid sweets, eggs, cream, fat meats and especially potatoes.

For Insomnia.

Drink a generous quantity of water; then half an hour later eat slowly a paprika or red pepper crustless sandwich with butter, half an hour before bedtime. It will draw the blood from the head to the stomach, stimulate the stomach and rest the brain.

Drowning.

Lay the body face downward, face turned to one side so as not to prevent breathing. Extend arms above head. Kneel astride the buttock, place your hands on the short ribs and alternately press down with the weight of your shoulders and release twelve to fifteen times to the minute. Do this for an hour if necessary. When natural breathing is restored rub legs and body toward the heart to stimulate circulation.

Jellied Meat and Vegetables.

Cook a cupful of stock, a cupful of hot water and a little beef extract, with a tablespoonful each of minced onion and parsley, for five minutes. Soften a tablespoonful of gelatin in cold water and pour the hot stock over it. Stir until dissolved, then strain. Place alternating layers of thinly sliced cold chicken or lamb in a plain mold, with cold cooked peas and carrots cut in tiny cubes. Add a sprinkle of lemon juice to each layer of meat and pour the jelly over all. Set on ice or in a cool place until the jelly is firm. Serve, evenly sliced, with lettuce, watercress or parsley.

DON'TS FOR MOTORISTS.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

A Charming Summer Coat.

A girlie coat for summer wear, suitable to development in striped flannel, taffeta, pongee or faille.

Striped flannel or taffeta or plain faille or pongee would make up this summer coat prettily. It is shirred at the waistline, has revers of self material and a collar of white silk. A yoke effect is formed by extending the back of the coat over the shoulders, below which the fronts are gathers. In medium size the design requires 2⅛ yards of 54-inch or 3½ yards 36-inch material.

The first step to take in making the coat is to gather the edge of the shoulders between double "TT" perforations, after which the underarm and shoulder seams are closed. Next, adjust underfacing to position. If it is desired to shirr the coat at the waistline, gather along crossline of small "o" perforations in front and back, making three rows. Adjust stay to position underneath gathers. The belts are next adjusted to position on front and back of the coat, bringing small "o" perforations in belts to corresponding perforations in front and back. Tie the front of the belt as desired.

The collar may now be sewn to the edge of the neck, notches and center-backs even. Roll both collar and front as illustrated. The sleeves come next and if the one-piece design is used, the work will progress more rapidly. Gather along crosslines of small perforations and adjust sleeveband to position over gathers, matching single large and small "o" perforations. Draw gathers to fit and close sleeve seam as notched. Sew in armhole, easing in any fulness.

A pretty idea would be to braid the ends of the sash or else embroider them with a simple motif.

Tough Tissue Paper.

The Chinese manufacture a tissue paper which when oiled is waterproof and extremely tough. It is used extensively by the native manufacturers of liquids, such as wood oil producers, to line the wicker baskets to contain the oil for shipments to the large exporting firms. So efficient is the paper that the oil is often transported several hundred miles. Wine producers use the same paper for conveying wine in wicker baskets from wholesale to retail dealers. Similarly this paper is tied over a bottle or earthen jar to prevent the liquid from being poured out until the container is opened. This native made paper is very efficient and economical.

FUNNY SIGNAL SERVICE.

How Flockton, the Actor, Saved a Lot of Time and Labor.

Once on a time "Flock" (C. P. Flockton of the old Lyceum) lived in a flat in New York with young Alexander Salvini. The flat was at the top of a building. In the street opposite were a number of small shops—a butcher, a baker, a candlestick maker, and so on. I was invited to dine there. I climbed up the stairs, and while waiting for some one to answer the bell I had time to observe this curious list on the outside of the door:

Chops—one boot.
Steak—two boots.
Potatoes—waistcoat.
Cabbage—coat.
Spinach—one pair of trousers.
Coal—white shirt.
Wood—blue shirt.
Flour—socks.

Before I could read more Flock himself opened the door.

"What do you have your wash list on the outside of the door for?" said I.

"That isn't a wash list!" cried Flock; "that's the signal service. You shall see. You are before the dinner time. I'm only just in, and I cook the dinner myself. Come!" Flock went to the window, blew a shrill whistle, once, twice, thrice. "Look out at the other window!" cried Flock. "You see those fellows come out of the shops? Now keep your eyes open!" He took two old boots and put them on the window sill. A man at the butcher shop opposite who was looking our way put a whistle to his lips and blew a blast. "Good!" said Flock.

"Again!" He took a red waistcoat and waved it in the wind three times. "Potatoes for three," said he. The man at the grocer's shop replied with a whistle.

"Shall it be cabbage or spinach?" said Flock.

"Cabbage!" said I.

"Right you are!" A coat was thrown in the air. Came the response instanter from below. Some socks, a pair of trousers and innumerable garments carried the message to the waiting trades folk. Shortly a boy arrived with a basketful of food.

"You see, old man," said Flock, "it saves a lot of trouble. I don't have to go down; they don't have to come up; one boy can do all the work. My own idea. Good, isn't it?"—From "My Remembrances," by E. H. Sothern, in Scribner's.

THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK

AS VIEWED FROM A DEMOCRATIC STANDPOINT.

Both Democratic and Republican leaders throughout the state and nation are making desperate efforts to capture the Progressive vote.

The Moose are still restless and dissatisfied with their newest political bargain and are again talking revolt. The little remnant of loyal Progressives is still full of fight.

Republicans who believed that they had captured this political organization are becoming alarmed by the growing signs of disaffection. Leaders of the new faction formed a few months ago at the split up at the Syracuse convention, are not having a happy time. So serious is the situation considered in this state that New York leaders have sent out a "S. O. S." call for George W. Perkins to return from his vacation and take charge of the situation.

The Democrats, on the other hand are jubilant and are taking advantage of every slip-up of the Republicans. The political managers, however, on both sides are worried. They admit that it is entirely possible that the Progressive vote may swing the presidential election and determine the outcome in many states. And even the most skilled of the leaders admit that they have but a very faint idea as to how the Progressives are going to vote.

Those Progressives who fought the Chicago "agreement" and who have been struggling to hold together the organization see in this situation hope that they may yet succeed in reuniting their forces. Progressives in this state are becoming convinced that the agreement in Chicago was a mistake. Some are climbing back on the fence. Others are urging that a new effort be made to revive their party. The fight in both Democratic and Republican headquarters center on capturing this vote.

It is an open secret in the Republican camp that the Progressives are slipping out. It is the subject of daily conferences between Republican leaders in this state. Some have appealed to Roosevelt to come to the rescue and he has consented to make a few speeches. At first he intended to make but two. Also Mr. Roosevelt will speak early in the campaign. His friends say that the Roosevelt speeches will provide the "punch" to the Republican campaign which up to the present time it has lacked. They are counting on the Colonel as the trump card and some are actually looking to the Colonel to save the day.

Progressive leaders in the Republican camp are saying "We told you so." The Republican managers are fully aware of the situation. They are doing their best everywhere to appease the Progressives, but nevertheless complaints are steadily coming in from all over the state from Progressives that they are "disappointed" at the progress made in the Hughes campaign so far as it has gone.

In reply the Republican leaders say that Mr. Hughes' stumping tour is not a stumping tour in its strictest sense. They say he merely went to the Pacific coast to get acquainted with his party and to get in condition for the real campaign. Hughes' manager Willcox says that the candidates trip is partly a vacation and partly a pleasure tour. Despite this Hughes has stopped off at practically every large city he has passed through and made addresses and has moreover grabbed up every chance to make a "back platform" spiel wherever there was the slightest provocation.

The following statement from a Progressive very prominent in state affairs explains the attitude of those of that political faith plainly:

"Ten days after the Chicago convention adjourned at least eighty per cent. of the Progressives were for Mr. Hughes. It is doubtful whether fifty per cent of the Progressives would vote for Mr. Hughes tomorrow. Maybe Roosevelt can change this. In the state campaign it is about a fifty fifty proposition.

"Tens of thousands of Progressives who started off with Mr. Hughes have grown luke warm. They say they wish we had gone through with our own ticket. They are homesick for the kind of a fight we had four years ago. They may be kept out of the Democratic camp. They may not vote at all."

Four years ago Mr. Roosevelt polled 4,119,507 votes in the nation and 3990,000 in the state. The Progressive vote for governor four years ago in New York state was 45,586 and for Bainbridge Colby for United States Senator 61,977.

There is strong antagonism to Mr. Whitman among the Progressives, the leaders say. Even in the present situation when Republicans believe, their campaign is reaching its lowest point the estimates are that Mr. Hughes will receive a larger vote than Whitman. This feeling has been strengthened within the past few days by the announcement from the New York Tribune, that that paper, heretofore, a strong Republican publication, would not support Whitman. The Tribune has not yet named the man to whom it will lend its support. It has not declared for Seabury, nor for Bennett, governor Whitman's opponent in the primaries.

CORRESPONDENT.

WILL IT PAY TO DO CANNING?

THAT IS THE QUESTION THAT IS CONFRONTING THE HOUSEWIFE.

"To can or not to can; that is the question. Whether with the high price of sugar and the higher price of fruits I shall can as much as I did other years, that is the question."—Housewives' lament.

Housewives are agreed that this is a poor canning season. The reason is obvious. The berry crop which is past and gone was not up to former seasons. The prolonged dry weather interfered with both the quality and quantiy of the crop. As a result the season was much shorter than usual, and beyond the use of berries for the table, few housewives have canned as many as in former years.

Of present interest it may be said that tomatoes which have dropped slightly recently are beginning to figure in the housewives' canning program. The smell of boiling ketchup is abroad in the land. Home made ketchup is ever so much better, says Madam, than the "boughten" kind. Likewise it is considerably cheaper. Cucumbers are not quite so high as they were, and frugal housewives tiring of any further possible reductions in price are buying them and putting them away for winter use.

Not before September 15 commission men declare will peaches be low enough in price to warrant their being canned. Along about that time the Crawford brand will be coming into the market in such quantities and at such prices as to warrant their being purchased for canning purposes.

Many housewives are planning to put up what fruit they can this season without sweetening it. They are of the opinion that granulated sugar which is at present selling around nine cents per pound is too expensive to be used in canning fruit. Further they are not without hope that sugar may take a drop in price once the canning season is over.

"Preparedness" for winter season when father sets up a howl for berry pie when the snow is four feet on the level is a virtue in which many housewives will be found lacking this year. Apparently father will be forced to eat "store pies" and "store desserts" next winter instead of those usually provided by his better half. But then the health experts all say one eats too much, so the season's shortcomings may be more than compensated by the welcome news that father will not have to buy so many soda mint pepsin tablets this winter as of yore.

AN ELABORATE BANQUET

Covers were laid for thirty business men at an opening banquet at the McGinnis Hotel last evening. The new hotel is a fine piece of architectural work and the interior is beautifully finished. The main dining room where the banquet was served was decorated for the occasion and the menu that was served was a most elaborate one. Chicken, clams and all the good things that go to make up a good dinner were prepared and served in a most appetizing manner.

FAMILIES SPLIT ON CAMPAIGN

Wives of Wilson Supporters Will Take Stump For Gov. Hughes.

DIVERTING CAMPAIGN PHASE

Washington.—Families are being divided by the present political issues. Here are a few examples. J. A. H. Hopkins, of New Jersey, is treasurer of the Progressive (genuine) national committee, and has announced that he personally favors the re-election of Wilson. Mrs. Hopkins is a member of the Woman's party and will take the stump and do all she can to prevent the election of Wilson

Gifford Pinchot is for Hughes and all the militarism Hughes and his backing can assure. Amos Pinchot, his brother, is a member of the American Union Against Militarism and will support Wilson as the lesser of two evils. Rep. William Kent, of California, is a wild-eyed enthusiast for Wilson and is heading a Wilson non-partisan league, while Mrs. Kent is a member of the Woman's party and will stump for the defeat of Wilson.

George Middleton has allied himself with the group of writers who have announced themselves for Wilson, while his wife, Fola La Follette, is one of the members of the Congressional union who will hold Wilson responsible for the defeat of the Susan B. Anthony amendment. Meredith Nicholson is a Wilson supporter, but Mrs. Nicholson will write and stump against Wilson on account of his attitude toward the federal suffrage amendment. Mrs. Louis F. Post is a member of the Woman's Peace party and an ardent Tolystoyan pacifist. Louis F. Post, assistant secretary of labor, is for the Administration's "reasonable" program of preparedness.

POPULAR HUGHES CAMPAIGN FUND.

The plan adopted by Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., treasurer of the Republican National Committe, to raise money for the campaign and increase the force of active workers for the election of Charles Evans Hughes to the presidency has peculiar merit. Mr. Bliss asks every one who favors the election of Mr. Hughes and wishes him to have the support of a Republican Senate and House to contribute $10 and become a sustaining member of the Republican party. All such will receive a certificate of membership. That the money will prove a good investment is patent. It will help to secure for the country a more efficient administration of our national affairs, which is necessary if the prosperity and influence of the nation is to continue.

There are at least 8,000,000 Republicans, but how many of them have any evidence they are, beyond the consciousness that they have voted or will vote the Republican ticket? The work is done by a few and the money ordinarily is provided by fewer. Mr. Bliss' plan offers a cure for that condition. Help the cause and get a certificate of membership that will establish your party affiliation. It is not expected that all the 8,000,000 Republicans will give $10 each, but if a goodly number who can afford it do so there will be a great many more able to give much more than $10 next time because Republican success will mean to the country in fullest measure preparedness, protection and permanent prosperity.

Mr. Hughes is seeing how big the West is, and the West is seeing how big Mr. Hughes is. It is a happy arrangement.

Friends of Wilson are still trying to explain what he meant by "too proud to fight." But can they tell us what he meant by "strict accountability?"

"Eminent judges," says Colonel Henry Watterson, "have ever proved disappointing candidates." He is right. Alton B. Parker was a big disappointment to the Democrats. And so is Charles Evans Hughes.—Toledo Blade.

President Wilson appears to have been keenly alive to the expediency of accepting several invitations to make speeches in the West. Nobody knows any better than he that it will take considerable shovelling to fill up the holes that have been dug in that locality by Justice Hughes.

It was John P. St. John of Kansas, one time Prohibitionist candidate for president of the United States, who said that Americans vote as they cheer. If so, there is mighty little consolation for the Democratic party in this campaign, for the Democratic Administration in three years has given us nothing to cheer over. On the contrary, as Mr. Hughes has said, these last three years have been years of humiliation and embarrassment.

Mr. Wilson says his mind is progressive, but those who try to follow its progress can never tell the direction it is taking. It is just as likely to be progressing backward as forward.

At Princeton Mr. Wilson used to confer honors upon D. Ds. He couldn't break the habit when it came to Deserving Democrats.

CAMP LIFE ON THE BORDER

BY GEORGE C. HARDING, A FORMER FULTON BOY

(Mr. Harding who is with the 2nd Ambulance Company, New York, at Pharr, Texas, sent the following interesting letter to his friends in Fulton, through his mother, Mrs. Anson Salsbury, who resides at 704 Emery street.—Ed.)

Possibly it would be interesting to start from Rochester on June 25 and go to Camp Whitman where we were encamped for about two weeks. Our camp was located on a side hill where we had excellent drainage and green grass and large trees, under whose branches we could rest in ease and comfort and not be afraid of being walked on by insects with from two to a thousand legs. Away to the east and overlooking the 69th Regiment from New York, we had a wonderful view of the larger hills of the Berkshires.

The different branches of the service were located together, so with us were the other branches of the Medical Department, namely the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th Field Hospitals, and the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th Ambulance Companies. I am with the 2nd Ambulance Company from Rochester and it is with pride that I say it for we have been praised by high and low officers as being the model sanitary camp on the Border.

Great excitement prevailed among the 17,000 men at Camp Whitman as the different troops received orders to leave for the Border. Our turn came July 13. We broke camp Sunday and loaded our twelve ambulances, three transport wagons and most of the tentage, so Monday, we started off, bright and early for the train, rested, happy, and looking forward to one of the greatest experiences of our lives. Our train consisted of five Pullman coaches, four horse cars, eight flat cars with our wagons, two box cars for our cook detail. We had to stop six hours out of every twenty-four to rest and water the animals. On our way we passed through New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, and Texas. We were just a week and a day on the road and although we had heard many rumors about insects and reptiles, that we might find at our destination, we were anxious to leave the train and make for our new camp.

Pharr, Texas is a small village of about 200 whites and 500 Mexicans, located eight miles from the Rio Grande. There are two very good churches, several stores, and a very fine school house. Of course, the first impression of any thing is not always right. When we found our site, it was nothing less than a desert. Dr. Cadman, who is Chaplin of the 23rd Regiment, and a leading clergyman from Brooklyn, said that he did not think the Lord could make so many different kinds of insects, flies, fleas, spiders, reptiles and other disagreeable animals.

The water was piped on top of the ground, and in the heat of the day when the temperature was 130 degrees in the shade, the water in the pipes would get as hot as 110 degrees—good for washing our clothes but not much good for quenching thirst. But we soon dug ditches and now the water is quite cool.

Our company consists of seventy-nine men and five officers. We have arranged our street in sort of a park, with palms and cactus brought from the underbrush. We often see outsiders taking pictures of it.

Since the troops came, the Field Y. M. C. A. have built two large tabernacles where the boys are always welcome, day or night, to read, write, play games, listen to the Victrola or piano, and have a general good time. On Sunday there are five religious services. It is a great opportunity to hear Dr. Cadman so often. We have concerts nearly every evening. So there are a few things to relieve the monotony of camp life.

Our duty here is to carry the sick at Pharr from the different Regiments, to McAllen to the Field Hospital. There they are examined and the worst cases sent to the Base Hospital at San Antonio. Camp Sanitation in a camp of this size means a lot to the health of the company. Such a decided change though is sure to cause more or less sickness and probably out of a regiment of 1,500, we have an average of five patients each morning, who are too sick to be taken care of at the Regimental Hospital, and a line a quarter of a mile long of others who are ailing.

It is hard to get provisions for our commissary department as everything must come from San Antonio, or farther north. Over at the canteen back of us, they sell ice cream. The other night between 5:30 and 8:45, they sold 110 gallons. There is an eating place near here where we can get a meal for thirty-five cents, but they don't seem to know how to handle a crowd.

When we first came, the natives said it had been thirteen months since they had had any rain—but we have no fault to find on that account for it has rained for nearly three weeks. The disagreeable thing about the rain here is that it will not soak in the alkali clay and has to be drained. After the sun has baked the sand, it is like a cement pavement and can be swept like a street. It is impossible to stick a shovel into it—we use a pick axe.

Up to August 4, we slept on the ground, so you can imagine how glad we were to see a big transport wagon drive up with cots for our company. Now we can sleep where it is dry at least. I expect after I get home, I shall shake out my clothes to see that there are no insects in them for the habit is pretty well formed.

We hear rumors each day of what we are to do next. We are anxious for one of two things—either to cross the Border and do some work or else go home, although our surroundings are so muchr improved that we can stand it.

It is a thrilling sight, when all the soldiers salute the flag at six o'clock each afternoon. While the strains of the Star Spangled Banner float out over the desert, we are filled with a feeling of pride that we are soldiers of the grand old U. S. A.

DR. QUINLAN WAS THE "GOAT"

SAYS HE WAS NOT A PARTY TO CROOKED DEALS

Syracuse, N. Y., August 29—Dr. J. W. Quinlan, of Amsterdam, under arrest here on charges of grand larceny following police investigation of a gigantic medical alleged swindle by which scores of foreigners in this section of the state had been mulcted out of thousands of dollars, has made a statement to the officials here in which he says that the office in this city was but a part of a gigantic scheme, countrywide in scope.

He declares that offices had been planned for twenty cities. It was the custom to place reputable physicians in charge of them and the business was to be run under their names so as to divert suspicion. These physicians were on a salary and as far as they knew had been engaged to treat cases regularly.

Dr. Quinlan says that he recently suffered an accident in his home town of Amsterdam, and was confined to a hospital for several months. When he recovered and resumed practice he found that his clients had dwindled away and that he was in need, having four children to support.

He answered an advertisement for a "middle aged physician of good reputation and high standing" to work for an association. He was given the position, offered a salary of $35 per week and placed in charge of the office in this city. He declares that he became suspicious of the methods used because of the rush of business that met him when he came here and says he found out enough to convince him that he ought not to remain in the employ of the association, but the thoughts of his needy family forced him to stay.

He said that the men for whom he worked promised him $50 per week if he would take permanet charge of the offices in this city. Before this was done, however, he was taken sick and went home going to a farm to recuperate. While there he received the newspaper clippings describing his disappearance and of the search the police were making for him. He returned at once.

He has been released on $500 for a preliminary hearing, September 5th.

No Delivery Labor Day.

The post office department at Washington has made a ruling that hereafter letter carriers shall not make deliveries on legal holidays. There will be no delivery Monday—Labor Day—but the usual night collection will be made. Stamp, inquiry, and general delivery windows at the post office will be open on that day until 10 a. m.

Heretofore it has been the custom for the carriers to make one delivery on holidays, but this is abolished with the new ruling.

DIAGNOSED AS PARALYSIS

PROMINENT YOUNG LADY IS TAKEN AWAY.

Probably one of the most peculiar deaths in the history of the state occurred last night between five and six o'clock. Miss Bertha Wright Palmer aged thirty-six years, passed away at her home at 408 South Fourth street. Death was due according to authentic reports to infantile paralysis.

Miss Palmer was ill but a short time and on last Sunday attended church at the Congregational church on West Broadway. Upon returning home she complained of pain in the neck and throat which gradually increased until Dr. Terpening was called.

He again attended the young lady yesterday morning, at which time the symptoms showed advanced stages. Dr. N. H. Haviland, who has been acting in the capacity of Health Officer during the absence of Dr. A. L. Hall was notified and immediately placed the home under quarantine. Dr. F. W. Sears, of Syracuse, who is State Sanitary Superintendent was called into consultation and diagnosed the case as absolutely infantile paralysis. Miss Palmer's condition grew rapidly worse until death occurred last night.

The deceased was born in the town of Granby, September 10, 1880 and is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred I. Palmer. She was identified in social circles and was a graduate of the local high school. In later years she was a student at Syracuse University in the department of music. Miss Palmer was also a member of the Schumann Club and served in the capacity of assistant organist at the local Congregational Church.

This case will undoubtedly go on record as one of the most peculiar cases in the history of the state, owing to the fact that it has been heretofore been thought by the medical profession of the state that children under he age of sixteen were the only ones susceptible to the disease.

The funeral is being held at the grave side at Mount Adnah Cemetery this afternoon. Rev. Charles Olmstead officiating.

HORSE RUNS AWAY.

Considerable excitement prevailed last night on West Broadway at eight o'clock when the horse belong to Homer Phelps ran away.

The horse was left standing in front at Latrell's blacksmith shop on West Second street, when suddenly it became frightened by a passing automobile and ran madly through the business section and onto the upper bridge. Many narrow escapes from being knocked down during the rampage of the steed were made. It was finally brought to a halt.

—There's never so good a time to fish as when the fish are biting.

* * *

We will begin by admitting that business is better with us and hope that the same is true with you. If it is not what you would like, you can make it so by learning a lesson from the good fisherman, who knows that there's never so good a time to fish as when fish are biting.

THE PEOPLE CONTROL

Before the railroad employes or the railroad corporations take any arbitrary action in the pending controversies they should do a little serious thinking. They should reflect that the position of each of them is very vulnerable.

The average man is getting exasperated to the limit of endurance by the interference with general prosperity caused by labor quarrels. He has no clear idea as to which party is right in these controversies. He is not particularly a partisan of capital nor yet of labor. He merely wants to see some reasonable method of adjusting these disputes.

Labor wars as now conducted are mere anarchy. In order to do a dollar's worth of damage to the other side, ten dollars' worth of suffering is inflicted on the general public.

As soon as the public gets an idea that one side is unreasonable and arbitrary, that side usually loses the case. It can better afford to give up every point at issue rather than incur the public hostility thus created.

In the case of the anthracite coal strike of 1903, it proved difficult for the public to enforce its will. In this case the act of mining coal could not be called interstate commerce. It was thus outside the scope of government regulation. The threatened railroad strike is wholly different, as the warring parties are likely to find out. This industry is specifically placed under the regulation of the federal government by the United States constitution.

Each party of this dispute should therefore have a care. The people of the United States are greater than any labor union, and they are greater than any corporation. If convinced that either side is unreasonable, intolerant and arbitrary, they will hit back and they will hit very hard. Any party to this dispute that is unwilling to submit its case to a fair arbitration is playing with very dangerous explosives.

THE BEST MEN

Says a Western newspaper man who has been making a little investigation of his own concerning the candidates for office in his state, and the probability of their election:

"Only rarely—and I speak carefully—do the best men possible for a given office ever reach it. The best men are never even considered for thousands of state and county and municipal elective offices; they do not offer themselves, either because office-holding is distasteful, or because private business is more lucrative, or because they are aware of no demand for their service on the part of their fellows."

The gentleman might have stated another, and a very serious, reason why many men well-fitted for public service and who could be of value to the community do not seek office. That is because of what seems the ingratitude of the people themselves. A man receives no thanks for having served faithfully and well—at least not while he is living. His re-election does not depend upon the degree of efficiency he has shown; in fact, if he has been an efficient officer he is almost certain to have offended little groups of people, and they seek to "get even" with him when he offers for re-election. He is condemned while in office, and receives no praise from anybody when he retires. That is why many men whom we should have in office refuse to enter public life—the ingratitude of their fellows stops them, when they look about and behold the frequent instances of where it has been displayed with others.

—The only good thing about adversity is that there is always something you can blame it on.

—If the motorist would drive as if he knew his brakes didn't work there wouldn't be many accidents.

A VALUABLE SCRAP HEAP

The United States has the biggest and the most valuable scrap heap in the world. Last year it brought more than a hundred and fourteen million dollars in cash. But it would probably have brought twice as much if we had paid as much attention to it as the scrap heap deserves.

This scrap heap is known as secondary metals received from sweepings, scraps and so on. It is growing every year, because the American people are learning a little each year about economy. But it has not reached the colossal proportions it will reach when we have mastered economics as they have mastered the subject in Europe.

The average American wastes enough to support the average European. Certainly two Europeans can live and do live upon what it takes to support one American. That is about the average. But the American doesn't eat twice as much as the fellow across the ocean; he wastes a great deal of food, as well as a great deal of the metals with which he works. And he throws upon the scrap heap tons of stuff that the European would never allow to get into the scrap heap.

There is a tremendous waste about the average home. There is the paper that is burned up or thrown away, and the tins that are thrown upon the ash heap—too frequently in the alley—and the water that is allowed to run into the sewer and which ought to have been kept in the pipes. Millions of gallons of water are wasted every day—and it costs money to deliver the water to the place of wastage. As for the string, cardboard packages, nails and a hundred and one things that are wasted in the course of a year—well, we ought to have a scrap heap in this country worth half a billion dollars, instead of a measly hundred million.

BELIEF IN SELF

Has disappointment come to you? Have you failed in what you had most set your heart on?

Did you rely upon someone's promise, only to find it broken?

Have you lost faith in those you trusted most?

Well, don't be downcast; don't give up; don't lose faith.

After all, there is but one question which is really vital to you—DO YOU BELIEVE IN YOURSELF?

If you have this belief, strong and steady, it will urge you to your goal just as surely as the magnetic force draws the steel to the magnet.

What if you are now in hard luck? Many a great achievement has been left undone because a man was too rich to keep at it. Poverty is more public than prosperity. [illegible]

Great ideas and great achievements, like the photo negative, must have time in the dark room to develop.

Every step upward in the splendid march to success is based on belief in self.

Don't begrudge your years of poverty and struggle; they are the richest of your life. They are the years in which you give no energy and thought to making a show; and in which the best there is in you is growing stronger than the obstacles in your path, stronger than the limitations that shut you in.

KICKING

In face of the fact that business is increasing, the building trades are lively, the bank clearings are growing, the bank deposits are overflowing, automobiles are filling the land, the show houses are crowded and the dance halls are gay, there is a deal of kicking going on because the times are hard. Of course there is much unemployment; there always was and under our present system of industry, when capital and labor are necessarily organized, there always will be. But kicking makes it worse. Sour faces makes times bad. The only thing to cure kicking is self reliance; the only offset to dependence is independence. We know how hard it is to oppose misfortune and sorrow, and we know that gloom and despondency will not do it. The only remedy is hope and good cheer, to be maintained by doing something, even if it is no more than the task of Sisyphus, which was to roll a stone to the top of a hill, when it slipped and rolled back again. For we must remember that the angel of the Lord comes only to the man who is doing something.

SINECURES ABOLISHED

Present State Administration Has Put Public Business Before Patronage.

AND PARED PUBLIC PAYROLLS

More Work Done For Less Money as a Result of the Abolition of Unnecessary Departments and the Consolidation of Others.

Albany.—During the terms of Governors Dix, Sulzer and Glynn the payroll had the right of way over every other form of public expenditure.

New departments were created on the most trivial pretexts, and old established departments had their working forces amplified to astonishing proportions, chiefly to make jobs.

Important state business that offered no chance of new jobs was pushed to one side, and necessary public expenditures were deferred in order that salaries of purely partisan appointees might be paid.

The procedure was productive of numerous scandals in nearly all departments of the government, and the voters manifested their displeasure with conditions by turning the Democratic party out of power. It was a case of too much payroll.

The present administration has pared payrolls, abolished unnecessary departments and spent money for the transaction of necessary state business.

The state engineer cut $505,000 off the payroll and expenses of his department during his first year in office, and it stayed off.

The department of public works cut the cost of extraordinary repairs to the canal from $150,000 to $66,000. It dropped the unnecessary office of appraiser of canal lands, with a resultant saving of $22,000 a year, and it added $12,000 a year to the state's revenue from rentable lands bordering on the canals.

The new court of claims, which succeeded the dilatory board of claims, has cleared up over 1,600 cases which had been accumulating during the four years of Democratic administration and has thereby saved the state hundreds of thousands of dollars in interest charges.

The state tax commission brought into the state treasury over $125,000 in fees in the first year of its existence and has added $80,000,000 to the assessments on special franchise.

The state excise department has cut the payroll and expenses over $50,000 as compared to the preceding Democratic administration.

The insurance department has dropped twenty superfluous employees added during the previous administration and thereby saved the state over $40,000.

The expensive fire marshal's office, that cost the state $125,000 during the administrations of Dix, Sulzer and Glynn, has been replaced by a small bureau in the industrial commission at a cost of a few thousand.

Over $200,000 was saved in the highway department during the first year of the present state administration by dispensing with expensive advisory boards and abolishing unnecessary and useless positions.

The state industrial commission will save the state this year in its cost of operation $214,862.

The agricultural department cut $70,000 from its payroll by dropping employees whose loss in no way impaired the work of the department.

Since Jan. 1, 1916, the attorney general has collected and turned into the state treasury $600,000, a larger amount than was ever collected before in any year since the office was established.

By reorganization and the abolition of unnecessary positions the office of the state superintendent of elections is costing the state $155,000 less than under the administrations of Dix, Sulzer and Glynn.

By the abolition of the department of efficiency and economy, established under Governor Sulzer, the state is saved an unnecessary expense of about a quarter of a million dollars a year.

The present state administration paid off the legacy of debt left by its predecessors in its first year by the levy of a direct tax, made necessary by the obligations handed to it by the retiring Glynn administration. It has adopted a pay-as-you-go policy, with strict business methods in every department, with the result that there will be no direct tax this year.

WHAT AMERICA MUST FACE.

When 30,000,000 soldiers return from the fields and trench to resume their industrial pursuits they will find many places filled by women doing well the work they formerly did.

Then will come that competition for place which will compel a reduction of wages from the already low standard of Europe. This lowering standard will be augmented by the staggering debt under which Europe is now groaning.

They will cease to buy from us and thus avoid an increase of debt, but they will sell to us to reduce it.

Europe's goods, made by the cheapest paid labor, will flood our markets and will expel our goods, made by the highest paid labor. What we experienced prior to the war will be but an incident to what we must suffer after it ends unless remedial legislation interposes.

In such a crisis this country will never risk the Democratic remedy in the form of tariff for "revenue only" legislation. It will naturally turn to a protective system, which has now been embraced by every country of Europe. It will naturally appeal to the Republican party under the leadership of the country's most distinguished jurist and will place in his hands and in the keeping of those who believe in an American system the constructive work of readjustment, inevitable on the cessation of hostilities and upon which the welfare of a hundred million people will be dependent.

Whatever other issues may differentiate the dominant parties of the country, the paramount issue in this campaign must be whether the free trade party of the country, dominated by the cotton states men, which under their latest legislation, styled the Underwood act, precipitated the country, which up to that time was in the acme of prosperity, into the most disastrous prostration experienced since the last Democratic legislation of twenty years before—whether that party shall be intrusted to power to meet the problems of readjustment.

A party that strangled the business of the country in 1913 will not be trusted in 1916 to rebuild from its own ruins.—Congressman Simeon D. Fess.

Credit Where Credit Is Due.

Facts refute the claim made by President Wilson that the federal reserve act saved this country in 1914 from a ruinous panic when the European war broke out. The federal reserve act was not in force when the war broke out. The Aldrich-Vreeland law was in force, and the secretary of the treasury so stated on July 31, 1914, in a public announcement and added, "Under its provision there are in the treasury, printed and ready for issue, $500,000,000 in currency which the banks can get upon application under the law."

The Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, former secretary of the treasury, points out that before Oct. 31, 1914, over $350,000,000 of currency authorized under the Aldrich-Vreeland law had been issued. That was before the federal reserve banks were open for business. By Dec. 1, 1914, the federal reserve banks had issued less than $3,000,000 in federal reserve notes, and there was still outstanding over $360,000,000 in emergency notes issued under the Aldrich-Vreeland law.

Giving credit where credit is due, it was the Aldrich-Vreeland law enacted by a Republican congress and signed by a Republican president, and not the federal reserve act upon which the country had to rely at the outbreak of the war.

THE REPUBLICAN IDEA.

The Republican idea is to build up and maintain tha home market. That means to bring the agriculturist, the manufacturer, the miner and the exchange man all into close co-operation. It proceeds upon the theory that what will aid the one will not hurt the other. It means to make possible the producer by making possible the consumer. It invests capital in order to employ labor. In this way what helps the consumer will not hurt the producer.—Hon. S. D. Fess.

THE STATE PRESS.

The old familiar Murphy tactics have been used in the Seabury matter. Probably the original inspiration to boom Seabury came from Murphy himself. But there was the customary show of resistance to the radicals. A Tammany favorite was put up as an opposition candidate, who obediently retired when the test came. The counties, led by New York, fell into line for Seabury with a whoop. He is now declared to be the people's choice. If Murphy should succeed in electing Seabury he would find him even more of a lemon than Sulzer. Seabury has brains enough to make real trouble for Murphy. He can shift political allegiances quicker than any politician now before the public. He has made a success of the business of belonging, in succession, to every faction that has been formed since he entered politics.—Buffalo Express.

Undoubtedly Mr. Wilson has earnestly and honestly striven to do well, but it often happens that men tackle jobs which are too big for them. When that occurs, and the opportunity offers, the only thing to do is to get an abler incumbent, and fortunately such a man is available and in all probability will be elected.—Utica Press.

Republicans don't care a whoop on what line this campaign is fought. If the Democrats want the battle waged on the personalities of the candidates there is not a man in the Republican party who will try to evade the issue. If they want the contest to turn upon the tariff policies of the two parties we shall meet them squarely and without any wavering from our old principle of protection to American labor and enterprise. If they prefer to discuss the pitiful record of weakness and vacillation of the diplomatic record we shall be ready to meet them more than halfway.—Daily Saratogian.

The people of the state of New York have a very keen recollection of the reason why they turned the Democratic party out of power two years ago, and not any of them will be so dense as to be led into error in that respect by Democratic juggling of facts and figures. Democracy's punishment is nowhere near complete. For the present year it must include rousing victories for a Republican governor, Republican state officials all along the line, Republican state senators and assemblymen, loyal, vigorous aid toward the overturning of the present Democratic majority in congress and Democratic defeat in the local elections.—Gloversville Leader-Republican.

POLITICAL COMMENT.

Two years ago the Democratic party had an eminently respectable state chairman and a most unsavory record for the maladministration of public business, and the respectability of its chairman failed to protect it from the wrath of the voters on election day. This year it is centering its hopes of success upon the respectability of its candidate for governor and hoping that its record when in power had been forgotten.

The present state administration hasn't been able to keep itself on the front page with a fresh scandal daily as the Dix, Sulzer and Glynn administrations did, but it has attended to the public business and will levy no direct tax this year.

Three years ago this month we had two governors, Sulzer with an office in the southeast corner of the capitol, and Glynn, with an office in the northeast corner. A few weeks later Sulzer was pried loose from his stronghold and Glynn took his place.

In order to make a $7,000 job for a faithful Tammany man the Democratic legislature of 1911 passed and Governor Dix signed a bill creating the office of state fire marshal and saddling the taxpayers with a burden of $125,000 a year to run it. One of the first performances of the present Republican administration was the abolition of this expensive department, and the work is now being done by a small bureau of the industrial commission.

Before Sulzer broke with Tammany he signed a bill creating the department of efficiency and economy and filled it with Tammany Democrats at a cost to the taxpayers of $299,999.99. The Democrats needed the office, but the state didn't, and the present Republican administration promptly abolished it and stopp[ed] unnecessary expenditure.

When the present state administration took office it was discovered that the fraudulent issue of tax stamps was costing thousands of dollars. The stopping of this fraud was one of the first pieces of work of the administration.

In a little more than a year the state department, by a strict enforcement of the tax law that all taxable property shall be assessed at its full value and by the application of a systematic method of assessment, more than $300,000,000 worth of assessable property has been placed upon the assessment rolls. This vast increase in value cannot fail to lower the tax rate in nearly every community in the state and to make lower taxes consequent upon reduced expenditures. Every dollar's worth of property that escapes its just share of taxation throws an added burden upon the property that pays.

A striking illustration of the difference in administrative methods under the present state administration and the three Democratic administrations that preceded it is furnished by the office of the state superintendent of elections. Under the Democratic administrations there were three superintendents; under the present administration there is one. Under the Democratic administrations there were three chief deputies; under the present administration there is one. Under the Democratic administrations there were 175 permanent deputies and 400 per diem deputies, and the department cost the state $349,900 a year; under the present administration, with the idlers eliminated and an efficient system of transacting the business of the office, the cost is only $196,240, which saves the taxpayers approximately $155,000 a year in the running of this one department.

A NATIONAL DUTY.

If a policy looking to the upbuilding of American enterprise should be favored by any one it is the man who toils. What he wants is steady employment at American wages, which cannot be realized by a revenue only policy, simply because it is impossible if he is not protected from the low standards of Europe. The only protection is in the law. We have been able to secure this protection when we maintained protective legislation. This American legislation has been uninterrupted since the days of Lincoln save a bare half dozen years, the two periods marked by the Wilson bill and the Underwood bill—both periods notorious for the universal distress among our people. The Republican contention, backed by our own history, is that it is a national duty to insure our standards against the lower standards of Europe.—Hon. S. D. Fess of Ohio.

A little grain will go a long way in keeping the sheep in profitable shape.

All pigs should be in a pasture with a good shelter and a dry bed. Shade is a necessity for the comfort of the hogs.

A horse should never be allowed to drink his fill after having been deprived of water until he is famished.

Be sure that the sheep are tagged, and watch out for maggots.

Be sure that the master pigs don't get most of the feed. Better separate them and give the smaller ones an even chance.

One of the best cures for sore shoulders is powdered boracic acid dusted on the sore. It is healing and nonirritating.

AN EXPERIMENT IN FEEDING BEEF CALVES

Charles Escher of Botna, Ia., one of the greatest steer feeders and showmen in America, tested out the baby beef proposition as no one else ever did, inasmuch as he fed Angus yearlings and two-year-olds, brothers in blood, for the 1911 International, says a correspondent of the Iowa Homestead. Reason would prompt us to the belief that the two-year-olds would have been better finished than the yearlings, as they more nearly had their growth, and all were fed about thirteen months. But the yearlings were champions over their older brothers and outsold them $2.75 per hundredweight.

Not entirely satisfied with the decision and wishing to test every possible chance of seeing whether the decision was just, Mr. Escher tried the same thing in 1913, and the result was identical, so we know beyond a doubt that where blood lines are identical,

When it comes to raising fine beef the Shorthorn has always been in the van. Shorthorn beef is in demand whenever the best is desired. In dressed carcass competition the Shorthorn is rarely surpassed. The bull pictured is a Shorthorn of beef breeding.

feed and care the same, if the yearlings have enough flesh they will outsell the older cattle.

Here is Mr. Escher's conclusion: O[n] a given amount of feed the yearl[ing] will put on more pounds of gain th[an] the two-year-old. When first put on feed and for the first five months the two-year-old will gain more pounds, but at a higher cost of production. But from the sixth month on up to thirteen months the two-year-old will gain gradually less, while the yearling will make just as much gain in the tenth or eleventh month as he did in the third or fourth month.

But here is the valuable part of this test: After your large steer is ready for the market he should go, no matter what the price is, for he doesn't pay for the feed he eats, and you are only gambling on the future rise in the market, while your yearling, if the market does not meet your hopes at the end of six or eight months, can be fed up to ten or twelve months with a money making gain right up to shipping day.

You get more gain on less feed in twelve months on the yearling than on the older cattle, and the yearling will bring more per pound on the market.

Economic necessity from the standpoint of the stockman, coupled with the present day butcher's demand for a handy weight carcass of the choicest quality, means that the finest product of the feeder's skill—"baby beef"—is the slogan of today's best beef production.

Pull the Pigs' Tusks.

The tusks of small pigs are very sharp, and while fighting over their feed they frequently lacerate each other about the mouth. This would not be so serious if it were not for the "bull nose" infection sometimes found in the pens. Injuries inflicted upon each other by pigs while feeding are a source of considerable loss to the animal husbandry department of the Kansas experiment station. Mr. Gatewood, who has charge of the hogs on the station farm, attempts to avoid the trouble by pulling the tusks of the pigs, but this does not always keep them free from infection. Bull nose is a fatal disease. Once the hogs get it they may as well be killed.

Warming the Eggs.

There was once an old lady in Scotland who kept a few hens. As she lived close to the house in which a church minister lived he asked her to send him two new laid eggs every morning, and he would pay her for them.

So the old lady sent her girl to the minister's house every morning with two eggs, and the ministers' servant always thought the eggs were newly laid because they felt quite warm, as if they had just been taken from the hen's nest.

But one day the eggs were cold, so the servant asked: "Are the eggs fresh today, Janey? They do not seem warm."

The simple girl looked at the maid and then said, "Oh, aye, they're quite fresh, only my mother could not get the cat to sit on them this morning, as it ran away."

SPECIAL MEETING THIS AFTERNOON

APPORTIONMENT FOR PROPERTY OWNERS TO PAY ON NEW PAVEMENT.

At a special meeting of the Board of Public Works held this afternoon at the City Hall at which time the apportionment of the costs of the improvement along the following streets was estimated.

On South Third street between Broadway and State the total cost will be $825.48, of which the property owners will be assessed $550.32 and the city's share will be $217.16. Charles Schaffer and Curtiss Draper were named as members of the paving board of this street.

On South Fifth street between Broadway and Pratt the total cost will be $2,222.91, the taxpayer's share will be $1,287.04; the city's share will be $937.84. James Green and William Calkins will act as members of the paving board on this street.

On State street between Fourth and Sixth street, the total cost will be $1,876.77. The adjoining property owners' share will be $968.51, the city's share will be $908.26. Cyril Chesbro and Charles Kirby will act on the paving board.

On South Sixth street between Broadway and Pratt streets the total cost will be $2,221.89, the adjoining property owners will be assessed $1,284.06: the city's share will be $937.83. Frank Randall and Henry Bryant will act on the paving board for this street.

The cost for the property owners has been assessed at .9197 cents per front foot at which rate the cost for fifty foot frontage for this improvement would be $45.86 to the property owners.

A petition was presented to the Board by Alderman Otto Malone of the Second Ward, for the installment of two lights in that section. The matter was laid on the table in order that the board might ascertain whether there was sufficient funds to do this.

Mr. Johnson states that a business session will be held at the Clark House on Friday night for the purpose of organizing and all last year's men, who participated in any game are urgently invited to attend.

A far better team is expected this fall owing to the many experienced players who have signified their intention of playing. Last year's team was considered one of the best semi-pros in this part of the state and hung up a very good record. Practice will start soon in preparation for an early game.

MANY DELEGATES WILL ATTEND

UP-STATE STRONGLY REPRESENTED AT ATLANTIC CITY SUFFRAGE CONVENTION.

Among the women of the state who are to go as delegates or guests to the Suffrage Emergency Convention at Atlantic City are many well known in this portion of the State, including Mrs. Stevenson, of Hannibal. This is the annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association which is the historic, conservative and non-partisan suffrage organization of nearly fifty years standing.

The Atlantic City convention of September 5 to 10 is its 48th annual meeting. Owing to the unprecedented fact of the endorsement of woman suffrage by five political parties this year, suffrage leaders have called the convention in September, three months earlier than usual in order to discuss what future moves they will make.

A principle feature of the convention is a three-cornered debate between Miss Laura Clay, Kentucky; and Miss Kate Gordon, Louisiana; Mrs. Ida Husted Harper and Mrs. Glendower Evans, Massachusetts; and Mrs. Raymond Brown, New York, and Miss Florence Allen, Ohio. The question debated is whether the National Suffrage forces shall work for State or Federal suffrage amendments, or for both. Three thousand women from all parts of the country are expected to be present.

POLITICIANS DISGRUNTLED

CLAIM CONGRESSMAN MOTT USED FRANKING PRIVILEGE TO CARRY SPEECH.

Supporters of Robert Bacon, Republican candidate for the nomination to the United States Senate against William M. Calder, charge Representative Luther Mott, of Oswego, with getting leave to print in the Congressional Record a speech which was mainly a eulogy of Mr. Calder as a fit candidate for Senator, and having it mailed out under the franking privilege to all the enrolled Republicans of the state, of whom there are nearly 720,000. The expense saved the Calder campaign managers, Bacon's supporters say was nearly $20,000 which the taxpayers have to pay they charge.

Both Mr. Bacon and Mr. Calder are conducting active campaigns up-state now. Job E. Hedges is accompanying Mr. Bacon as campaign manager. Mr. Hedges declares that there is a growing disposition throughout the state to allow the voters themselves to determine whom to vote for, irrespective of whatever pledge the leaders may have given. Mr. Hedges also says that there is a feeling among Republicans that the strength of the Senatorial candidate would have a lot to do with the success of the Hughes ticket up-state.

PRESIDENT RECOMMENDS

Summarized, the President's legislative demands are:

FIRST—Increase of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

SECOND—Establishment of an eight-hour day as the legal basis of work and wages of all train employes.

THIRD—Authorization of a commission to investigate and report, but without recommendations, how the eight-hour day works out.

UNCLE SAM'S BOYS ISSUE A NEWSPAPER.

Entertaining news of the front, vivid descriptions of McAllen, Pharr, Mission and other towns of the 'Magic Valley" now peopled with thousands of Uncle Sam's soldiers and much humorous and light reading, are to be found in the first issue of the Rio Grande "Rattler," the official newspaper of the New York Division, National Guard, published August 23. It is a live sheet of eight pages, with a circulation of 15,000 and the Third New York Infantry receives frequent mention. Copies of the paper have just been received in this section.

The health record of the New York division is shown as constantly improving, the sickness being about one half that of a few weeks before.

"To the credit of the Third, let it be said that not a single man billetted in the town took advantage of the hospitality of the storekeepers who had opened their shops to them for the night," the story says. "Fifty men slept in the candy store, and not one piece of confection was taken from the cases."

There appears to be several good cartoonists among the New York boys who have contributed to the "Rattler." The editorial page is a bright one. One editorial article entitled "The Spirit of the Country" begins as follows:

"Seven years ago the town of McAllen looked like a company street in a typica valley rainstorm. There was one restaurant, one store, one road and just about one family of citizens. Look at McAllen now! Look at Mission—at its new electric light plant, its filtered water! Look at Pharr rebuilding its stores from the ruins." It's a live country boys.

"MILK TRUST" INVESTIGATION

FARMERS GET LOW PRICE AND CONSUMERS PAY HIGH PRICE.

Albany, August 30—An expert accountant, employed by the Wicks Committee started at work this week in an examination of the books and accounts of the Borden Milk Company and similar concerns with headquarters in New York city. No opposition is being shown. While this work is in progress, the committee will continue hearings in various parts of the state in order to check information gained against the figures which the expert is expected to disclose from his work. Hearings will be held in Auburn, Geneva and Rochester the first week in September, followed by similar meetings in Buffalo and other places in the western part of the state. Session will get under way in New York city some weeks hence.

No stone is being left unturned by the committee on its efforts to ascertain if a "Milk Trust" is responsible for the farmer receiving but 3 1-2 cents a quart on the average for his milk. The committee is working to ascertain what becomes of the difference between the 3 1-2 cents and the 9 and 11 cents a quart paid by the consumer. The Borden Company recently published a statement to the effect that it was making about 1-2 cent profit on a quart of milk. If such is so, the Wicks committee intends to find out the source of the $17,000,000 in dividends which the Bordens have paid out during the last eight years.

H. M. Hallock, vice president of the Borden Company, asked last week if an increase of a cent a quart to the consumer will give the producer an increase of a cent a quart, replied that he could not answer the question off hand. He stated that the expense to distributing companies of putting up the milk in bottles and delivering it was not generally appreciated, and that the item of breakage was a heavy one.

"The consumer will pay a deposit on a soda water bottle" he said, "but if a deposit is asked on milk bottles, we would stand a chance of being shot." Nevertheless, one of the New York concerns started this week requiring a three cent deposit on all bottles.

"Unless the milk producers and milk distributors co-operate in finding a way to better conditions, they will kill the goose that laid the golden egg," said Senator Wicks. The farmer controls the milk supply, the customer has to have it. The lack of co operation puts the dairyman at the mercy of the New York buyers.

The home was beautifully decorated with pink and white and a dainty luncheon was served.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts of cut glass and linen. Those present were:

AT THE QUIRK TODAY

Theda Bara believes that in "East Lynne" her role as Isabel will attract the picture fans even more than her previous work in "The Eternal Sapho" and other William Fox films. In this view Mr. Fox and the director, Bertram Bracken, agree. In the cast with Miss Bara in this production are Claire Whitney, William H. Tooker, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Stuart Holmes, Ben Deeley, Joe Burke and others—an all-star production.

Mr. John Willmar, of Maple View, near Mexico, says he cannot see the consistency in allowing children to congregate in alleys and other places about the city when the children in his neighborhood are not allowed outside of their yards.

MISS PAYNE DIES IN HOSPITAL

GIRL, HURT IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT AT PHOENIX, UNCONCIOUS TO END.

Miss Pearl Payne, twenty-seven, of Hinmanville, who was injured in an automobile accident at Phoenix early last Saturday morning, died at 4:50 oclock yesterday afternoon at the Syracuse Hospital for Women and Children, where she was taken after the accident.

She did not regain consciousness from the time she was hurt.

Because of the nature of the accident and the circumstances surrounding the death, the body was removed to the County Morgue at the direction of Coroner S. E. Crane. Coroner Crane later communicated with Coroner E. J. Cusack of Fulton, who directed the body be taken to Phoenix.

Only a Few Details.

Only a few meager details of the accident are known. Miss Payne was visited at the hospital by only a few persons, and none of these was able to give any account of the accident. Authorities at the hospital know only that persons who brought Miss Payne to the institution said she had been in an automobile accident.

Residents of Phoenix told of seeing an automobile occupied by two men and two women go over the curb at Main and Chestnut streets and crash into a pole. All four were thrown out, Miss Payne being hurled through the windshield and striking on her head.

The other occupants of the car were said to be John Bettinger of Baldwinsville, a man named Sherwood and an unknown woman. Miss Payne was found insensible in the street by persons who went to the aid of the motorists.

Daughter of Lewis Payne.

Miss Payne was employed at the Howard House, Phoenix. She was the daughter of Lewis Payne of Hinmanville and in addition to her father, is survived by a brother, Edward Payne, of Phoenix and three sisters, Mrs. Howard Johnson, of Phoenix; Mrs. Ada Lowrie, of Syracuse, and Miss Cora Payne, of Hinmanville.

HE KEPT US OUT OF WHAT WAR?

Disingenuous to Boast That It's Through Any Act of Wilson We Are Out of the European Contest.

RATHER SHOULD BE BLAMED FOR MEXICO BELLIGERENCY

During the Present Administration We Have Seized a Mexican Port and Sent Our Entire Army and Militia to Fight Mexicans While Armed Mexican Forces Have Invaded American Soil and Fought Battles Against Our People.

Sometimes you hear men, sensible men, too, say, "I'm going to vote for Wilson this year because he kept us out of war."

Ask such men a short question. Ask them, "Out of what war?"

Did Mr. Wilson keep us out of the European war? No. He has himself in a formal address to congress spoken of the European war as "a war with which we have nothing to do, a war whose causes do not touch us." How could Mr. Wilson keep us out of a war with which we have nothing to do and whose causes do not touch us?

Did he keep the rest of the western hemisphere out of the European war? No independent nation on this side of the world is involved in it; the only people in it are the colonies of European powers and they had no voice in their fate, for they were automatically at war when their mother governments went to war. Who kept Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru, out of the European war? Did Mr. Wilson?

Did Mr. Wilson keep us out of war with Mexico? No. In his term more Americans have been killed by Mexicans and more American property has been destroyed by Mexicans than by Spaniards during the whole Spanish war. In his term we have seized a Mexican port and have sent our entire regular army and militia to fight Mexicans. In his term Mexican armed forces have invaded American soil and fought battles against our people within our boundaries.

President Taft went through two Mexican revolutions during his term, the revolution against Diaz and the revolution against Madero. American lives were safe in Mexico during that time. No Mexican cities were seized by Americans and no armed Mexicans invaded the United States while Mr. Taft was in the White House. Yet Mr. Taft never thought of asking the American people to vote for him because he kept us out of war with Mexico. He put an embargo on arms so that American weapons would not be sent across the boundary, and he refused to interfere in Mexican affairs. When he left office Mexicans liked Americans and Americans were safe in Mexico. Since he left office Mexicans hate Americans and Americans dare not remain in Mexico. Did Mr. Wilson keep us out of war with Mexico? Not if words mean anything.

Mr. Wilson did not keep us out of the European war and he did not keep us out of war with Mexico.

Out of what war, then?—Detroit Free Press.

HUGHES' LABOR RECORD.

When Mr. Gompers, remembering only that he is a Democrat and forgetting that he is a leader of organized labor, ventured to assert that Mr. Hughes is unfriendly to labor because he concurred in the unanimous decision in the Danbury hatters' case, he ventured on very thin ice. The Chicago Tribune promptly reminds him that an honest judge must apply the law as he thinks it is, not as he thinks it ought to be; and asks him to tell those who look to him for political advice something about the record of Mr. Hughes as Governor. Read what the Legislative Labor News, the official organ of the New York Federation of Labor, said editorially when Mr. Hughes left the Governor's chair at Albany for his place on the supreme court. Here it is:

"Now that Gov. Hughes has retired from politics and ascended to a place on the highest judicial tribunal in the world, the fact can be acknowledged without hurting anybody's political corns that he was the greatest friend of labor laws that ever occupied the Governor's chair at Albany. During his two terms he has signed fifty-six labor laws, including among them the best labor laws ever enacted in this or any state.

"He also urged the enactment of labor laws in his messages to the Legislature, even going so far as to place the demand for a labor law in one of his messages to an extra session of the Legislature.

"Only 162 labor laws have been enacted in this state since its erection in 1777—in 133 years. One-third of these, exceeding in quality all of the others, have been enacted and signed during Gov. Hughes' term of three years and nine months."

Let organized labor take to heart what the Chicago Tribune says on this point: "Mr. Hughes is no demagogue and no visionary. He is a man of courage and conscience, and if labor cannot confide its cause to his rock-bottom Americanism there is something wrong with its cause."—Boston Herald.

NO BACK STAIRS FOR SEABURY

Conduct Public Business In the Open, Says Candidate.

HE RESIGNS FROM THE BENCH

In a Letter to the People He Tells What He Will Do if Chosen Governor—Business Methods to Take the Place of Partisanship and Favoritism. No More Invisible Government.

Samuel Seabury, designated for governor of New York state in the Democratic, Progressive and Independence League primaries, has resigned as associate judge of the court of appeals and has issued the following address explaining his reasons therefor and outlining the platform upon which he will stand if elected governor:

New York, Aug. 28, 1916.

To the People of the State of New York:

Having been designated in the primaries as a candidate for the nomination for governor, I have resigned as associate judge of the court of appeals. In returning to the people the high trust which they reposed in me two years ago and which had still twelve years to run, I think it fitting to say that I have taken the step because careful deliberation has convinced me that as governor I can render greater service than on the bench and employ the inherent but unused power of that great office in the people's service. If nominated I shall discuss fully the present issues. For the moment I shall limit myself to a brief statement of my purposes.

Order and Economy.

If elected I shall restore responsible popular government at Albany.

My purpose shall be to establish order and economy in the state departments. These departments shall cease to be the abiding places of the political rings that now infest and control them. I shall make them agencies for public service. Business methods shall take the place of partisanship and favoritism. Business principles shall supplant personal and partisan politics. The affairs of this state need the application of common honesty and common sense.

Tax Law Reform.

I shall recommend measures for the simplification and amendment of our present tax laws to the end that relief may be had from excessive burdens of state and local taxation.

New York is the commercial center of the world. Its legitimate business must be safeguarded and encouraged in framing laws and administering government. Wanton attacks upon lawful industries injure labor and capital and prejudice the welfare of the whole state.

I shall urge that the department of foods and markets be made an effective instrument for the economical distribution of food products to the end that the farmers of the state and the consumers of food products may be brought into closer touch to the benefit of both.

Conscription and Draft.

I oppose vesting in the governor of the state the power to compel involuntary service in time of peace by conscription and draft.

I shall take the initiative in the work too long deferred of establishing law reform in this state to the end that expense, delay and technicalities shall cease and our courts be unhampered in the administration of justice.

I shall stand firmly against fads and so called panaceas, which are often merely excuses for extravagance.

For Conservation.

I shall support and encourage progressive measures which experience has demonstrated to be sound, to the end that the state shall conserve its natural resources, regulate monopoly privileges, relieve business and industry from the burdens now imposed upon them and promote just relations between employers and employees.

I shall support the principles underlying the workmen's compensation act and recommend amendments where experience has shown that changes are necessary in order to make the law accomplish its beneficent purpose.

No Back Stair Government.

I shall conduct the public business in the open. Back stair government in the interests of those who seek something for nothing shall cease. We have outgrown the era of invisible government.

I shall see to it that vouchers for state moneys expended by public officials for alleged public purposes shall be open to public inspection.

I ask the confidence and support of the citizens of this state. I do not make this appeal on partisan grounds. I appeal for support on the basis of our common citizenship, and I make this appeal to those who are interested in the welfare of our state. I ask them to co-operate with me in the task of ridding the government of this state of the incompetency, extravagance and corruption that now exist in its affairs.

SAMUEL SEABURY.

Samuel Seabury, who resigned today as associate judge of the court of appeals, has opened campaign headquarters at the Hotel Breslin, Broadway and Twenty-ninth street, New York.

POULTRY GOSSIP.

It is far more wise to prevent disease than to attempt to cure it.

Where generous shade is provided there is money in summer hatches.

Keep a watch on the stock, supply their needs, nip trouble in the bud.

The hot sun has a bad effect on the growth of the chick and equally so with the egg crop.

The fact that the pullet is an early layer is not the only reason why she should be held for the breeding pen. Look up the records of her ancestors—she should come from very hardy specimens of excellent producers.

PROPER METHOD OF KILLING POULTRY

The government recommends the following rules for killing fowls: Grasp the chicken when killing by the bony part of the skull. Do not let the fingers touch the neck. Make a small cut with a small, sharp pointed knife on the right side of the roof of the chicken's mouth, just where the bones of the skull end. Brain for dry picking by thrusting the knife through the groove which runs along the middle line of the roof of the mouth until it touches the skull midway between the eyes. Use a knife which is not more than two inches long, a quarter inch wide, with a thin, flat handle, a sharp point and a straight cutting edge.

At least 30 per cent of all the poultry coming into the New York market is incompletely bled. Much of it is so badly bled that it results in a loss of 2 to 5 cents a pound, as compared with the corresponding poultry which is well bled and in good order. Aside from the bad appearance, incompletely bled chickens have very inferior keeping properties. The flesh loses its firmness sooner, its flavor is not so good, the odor of stale flesh and finally of putrefaction comes sooner and in every way the product is more perishable.

A very large proportion of the unsightly poultry in our markets, aside from the rubbing and tearing of the Peking ducks originated in China and were brought to America over forty years ago. Their wonderful vigor, prolificacy and hardiness soon made them favorites over the older breeds then known. The Peking is the breed found on the large commercial duck farms of the country. The duck and drake shown are Pekings.

skins, is caused by an incomplete removal of the blood. This is evidenced by red dots which frequently occur where the feathers have been removed, especially over thighs and wings, or by the small veins which mar the appearance of the neck. Generally it is the neck which shows most plainly the presence of blood in the fowl or that a wrong method has been used in cutting the blood vessels in an attempt to empty them. The neck is the first part to discolor, becoming first red, then bluish red or purple and finally green.

Treatment For Limberneck.

Limberneck is an infliction that is usually caused by fowls eating diseased meat full of maggots. Some say it is also a result of ptomaine poisoning. The remedy is turpentine, and the following is a good treatment: Mix a tablespoonful of turpentine in an equal amount of warm water and pour it into the fowl's crop. Follow by filling the crop with warm water, and then, holding the fowl by the feet, gently work out the entire contents of the crop. When thoroughly cleansed give a teaspoonful of castor oil and allow the fowl to remain quiet by itself until recovered.

Starting the Pullets to Lay.

Many breeds of fowls begin to lay when four and a half or five months old. Parched corn will hurry them, as will fresh cut bone and meat from the butcher's. They need animal diet to do well, and the whole process of feeding is an interesting study. Separate your early pullets from the cockerels, feed them extra well, and you will have fresh eggs before you know it.

Give Hens Air at Night.

Beware of closing up poultry houses tight on cool nights. That is what causes most of the colds and roup and kindred troubles with poultry. Fresh air is better than medicine, and the poultry should not be deprived of it until the thermometer gets below zero, anyway.

Market Old Hens.

When hens are three years old or over they had better be sent to market and pullets substituted for them. After her third season a hen seldom pays for her keep.

HAD TO TRAVEL ON.

And All Because He Happened to Be a Good Marksman.

On his return from a long stay abroad a well known newspaper correspondent took lodgings in a quiet London suburb and "engaged at target practice with an air gun," firing from the balcony of his sitting room at a wafer stuck on the wall over the dressing table in his bedroom.

The neighborhood, however, was too prim and genteel a place of sojourn to tolerate this irrepressible practical joker for any considerable length of time, and he soon had to leave it by reason of his feats with the air gun.

One day he told the story of his somewhat abrupt departure:

That mischievous secretary of mine (he says) pretended that I could not knock the hat off a cabman dozing on his cab in the square opposite to the house. I did, worse luck! One of his mates saw me, and the long and short of it was that I had to compensate cabby, and the landlady called on me and when she had seated herself in a chair began:

THE LANDLADY CALLED.

"I believe you are an explorer, Mr. ——?"

I bowed and murmured that some flattering persons did me the honor of putting me down as something of that sort.

"In that case, sir," she exclaimed, "I would you to start on an exploration for fresh apartments at once. This is not a private madhouse."—London Telegraph.

Ourselves.

No one was ever yet made utterly miserable excepting by himself. We are, if not the masters, at any rate almost the creators of ourselves.—Epictetus.

He Told Them.

A small boy astride of a donkey was taking some supplies to an army camp and got there just as a detachment of soldiers, preceded by a band, was marching past.

The lad dismounted and held the bridle of the donkey tightly in his hand.

"Why are you holding on to your brother so hard?" asked a group of soldiers who were standing near and wanted to tease the country boy.

"I'm afraid he might enlist," said the lad without batting an eyelash.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

It Surprised Her.

Clarke has a weakness for tramping in the country and usually dresses for the part. The result was that one day when he took a seat in a homeward bound train the young lady opposite him mistook him for a farm hand.

But bless her, her soul was so nigh to bursting with beautiful thoughts that she must speak or go off pop! So she turned patronizingly to Clarke.

"Don't you feel an utterly passionful sympathy with nature's most incarnate aspirations," she gushed, with a rapt look in her eyes, "when you are walking on the illimitable sky, touching moors or riding through the dim aisles of the horizon bound woods, my good man?"

The "rough looking person," as she would have described him, promptly replied:

"Yes, that is so, and I am frequently drawn into an exultation of rapt soulfulness and beatific incandescent infinity of abstract contiguity when my foot catches in the burrowed domicile of the lepus cuniculus—otherwise a rabbit hole."

"Indeed!" gasped the young lady, much surprised. "I had no idea that the lower classes felt like that!"

His Was to Come.

In his early days on the stage Robert Loraine, the English actor, was a member of a certain provincial touring company.

It was the custom of the manager of the company, after the first night's show in every fresh town, to line the performers up on the stage and criticise them. The players would stand in a row, the leading lady at the head of it, the least important super at the foot, and the "chief" would walk along it, handing out praise or censure, as the case might be. One night he passed by Robert Loraine without saying a word.

"As you did not say anything about my performance," subsequently commented Loraine, "I take it I was all right?"

"My boy," replied the manager severely and icily, "I did not speak to you because what I have to say will only bear saying in private."

The Scrap Book

What Became of the Trousers.

Of Judge Parry's many stories of the Manchester county court that about the comedy of a man's Sunday trousers is one of the best. In the plaintiff's box was a woman, in the defendant's an elderly collier. The plaintiff stated her case, "I lent yon mon's missis my mon's Sunday trousers to pay 'is rent with, an' I want 'em back."

The defendant at first replied, "There's nowt in it at all." Pressed for a more definite reply, he scowled at the judge and protested, "Why, the 'ole street knows all about them trousers."

But Judge Parry was not the "'ole street," and he patiently encouraged the defendant to talk until he got the explanation. "Why, yon woman an' my missis drank them Sunday trousers."—Westminster Gazette.

Life Is Too Short.

Life is too short for any vain regretting.
Let dead delight bury its dead, I say,
And let us go upon our way forgetting
The joys and sorrows of each yesterday.
Between the swift sun's rising and its setting
We have no time for useless tears or fretting.
Life is too short.

Life is too short for any bitter feeling.
Time is the best avenger if we wait.
The years speed by and on their wings bear healing.
We have no room for anything like hate.
This solemn truth the low mounds seem revealing
That thick and fast about our feet are stealing.
Life is too short.

Life is too short for aught but high endeavor—
Too short for spite, but long enough for love.
And love lives on forever and forever.
It links the worlds that circle on above.
'Tis God's first law, the universe's lever.
In his vast realm the radiant souls sigh never.
Life is too short.

No Use as a Witness.

The lamentable case of John Poor Dog, an Indian accused of stealing hogs, an offense to which he pleaded "Not guilty," is told thus by an Oklahoman: John Poor Dog was arraigned before the judge, who inquired where were his attorney and witnesses. "Got none," John Poor Dog said.

"No witnesses," said the judge, "no one to speak for you who knows anything about this?"

John Poor Dog shook his head sorrowfully. "Only one man knows about this," he said. "He's the one helped me steal the hogs, and he's such a liar he couldn't tell the truth. So I didn't get him."—Exchange.

An Annoying Practice.

Judge Campbell Flournoy, formerly of Kentucky, but now of Washington, was making a horseback tour through the mountains of his state once upon a time when a shaggy hillsman rode down a creek and joined him. As they jogged along side by side the native, after asking the stranger's name and business, volunteered some information touching upon himself.

"I oughter be plowin' my cawn," he said, "but I jest natchelly felt like I had to ride down to the county seat today. Them pesky fellers down thar have fotched up a lawsuit agin me, and I got to go see about it."

"What's the lawsuit about?" inquired the judge.

"Hit's about my father-in-law. They fotched hit up agin me on account of my killin' him with a double barrel shotgun here about two weeks ago. That's the third lawsuit they've fotched up agin me fur shootin' somebody, and I'm a-gittin' mighty tired of it."

Next day when Judge Flournoy dropped into the courthouse he found the object of litigation on trial upon an indictment alleging murder in the first degree.—Saturday Evening Post.

Lost.

The late Gilman Marston of New Hampshire was arguing a complicated case and looked up authorities back to Julius Caesar. At the end of an hour and a half in the most intricate part of his plea he was pained to see what looked like inattention. It was as he had feared. The judge was unable to appreciate the nice points of his argument.

"Your honor," he said, "I beg your pardon, but do you follow me?"

"I have so far," answered the judge, shifting wearily about in his chair, "but I'll say frankly that if I thought I could find my way back I'd quit right here."—Christian Register.

Wonderful Animal.

"Talking about the intelligence of animals," said young Browne, "why, I have a dog up at the farm that's simply wonderful.

"I was out shooting one day when I found a large, handsome dog lying on the ground moaning with pain. Some ruffian had shot it in the leg. I carried it home, bandaged the wound and finally cured the poor beast. Some months after that I was compelled to travel on a lonely road after dark when suddenly Ponto, who accompanied me, began to growl warningly. The next moment a ruffian stepped out of the bushes and put a pistol to my head."

"Ah," cried the listener, "I see! Thereupon the grateful dog seized the robber by the throat, while you"—

"Not at all. The man robbed me easily enough—took watch, purse, everything."

"But Ponto?"

"Ran off as fast as his legs could carry him. That's the point, don't you see? Animal instinct didn't want to get shot again."—Rocky Mountain News.

We would not have you accept our statement as to the value of Chamberlain's Tablets in cases of stomach trouble or constipation, but do urge you to give them a trial. Others have done so and been greatly benefited. Why not you? Mrs. F. P. Tritseth, Rome, N. Y., writes: "About five years ago my stomach was very weak. I could not eat solid food. As They Used to View the Plague.

An old work, a little book published in Cologne in 1665 under the title of "Geistliche und Leibliche Arzteney Wider die Pest," gives a crude explanation of the plague and its ravages.

From this book we learn that it is due to the eccentric movement of the planets, eclipses of the moon or sun, inundations, earthquakes, famines and wars. Often also it follows the bad effluvium set up by pigs, ducks and geese. It is frequently attributable to the anger of God for man's sins, such as injustice in the law courts, the oppression of subjects by their rulers, the dearness of goods, the dance and gaming.

"Live Bait" For Alligators.

The negroes of Jamaica, in the British West Indies, use "live bait" to catch alligators. They tie a puppy to a tree near the alligator's haunt and await developments with a gun. The puppy's yelp is exactly like the bark of the baby alligator. Naturally Mrs. Alligator comes out of her mudhole in the lagoon, thinking somebody is troubling her offspring. Then the negro gets to work with his gun, and Mrs. Alligator falls a victim to her maternal affection.

Do Not Meddle With Your Ears.

Whatever plausible reasons laymen may have for treating some diseases, they should not meddle with the ear. It is a very sensitive and delicate organ, peculiarly liable to serious injury through the manipulations of men and women ignorant of its anatomy, functions and pathology. Judicious treatment is most important, but it is better to let ear troubles alone than to seek the aid of Aunt Samantha or take the advice of some officious neighbor.—Volta Review.

The Cooling of the Worlds.

All bodies in space are gradually approaching frigidity. When a redhot cannon ball is taken out of a furnace and suspended in the air it parts with its heat and keeps on parting with it until it finally reaches the temperature surrounding it. And what happens to the cannon ball is happening to the sun. The sun is steadily losing its heat and contracting, and the same is true of the planets and of every other body in space. Just as the arctic circle is ever encroaching upon the temperate and equatorial regions, so the final chill is steadily advancing upon the warmth everywhere.—New York American.

MANY WILL DIE IF STRIKE STOPS SUPPLY OF MILK

New York, August 30—Railroad traffic officials indicated here today that every effort will be made in the event of a nation-wide railroad strike to operate sufficient trains to transport milk and perishable foodstuffs through a system of promotion of men from other departments to fill the places of the men who walked out.

The supply of milk here could be maintained by using motor trucks and steamboats, in the opinion of Police Commissioner Woods.

CARTER, in New York Evening Sun

Carranza (to Uncle Sam): "Giddap!"

WHAT STRIKE WILL MEAN

INCONVENIENCES OF ALL KINDS WILL HAVE TO BE EXPECTED.

With a country wide railroad strike believed to be but a few hours away Central New York today began taking stock of what such a strike would mean. Briefly summed up a short strike would—

Demoralize the postal service.

Hold up all freight shipments now on the way.

Hundreds of vacationists would be unable to return home.

Result in loss of thousands of dollars of perishable freight.

Stop supplies of all sorts from entering this city.

Throw approximately 5,000 railroad men out of work.

On the other hand a prolonged railroad strike might—

Force newspapers to suspend publication.

Cause actual conditions of starvation to exist in many of the larger cities.

Throw an enormous number of workmen in all lines of trades out of work.

Cause scores of manufacturing establishments to suspend.

Force cancellation of shows at theatres because of the inability of companies to travel.

Reduce the hotel business to practically nothing.

Cause the newspapers, business houses and individuals to resort to telegraph and telephone for messages heretofore carried by mail.

At the present time the New York Central and the Delaware and Lackawanna have declared embargoes on all material that cannot be delivered by September 4, and are making every preparation for the expected strike. The railroad officials have expressed themselves to the effect that the strike would be of short duration.

However, according to reports they are going abroad everywhere and hiring men to operate the trains in case of the walk out. It is said that men who are at all familiar with engines or machinery of any kind or description are being enlisted and will be put to work as soon as the brotherhood men quit their posts.

Newspapers will be hard hit. At the present time there is a great scarcity of news print paper. Few papers have more than sufficient paper to last a weeke or ten days, two weeks at the most. If the strike last beyond this time they will be forced to suspend unless automobile service can be maintained. Some of the papers, too far removed from the mills will be forced to suspend publication according to all indications.

Managers of manufacturing plants are of the opinion that they could not run long without the daily stream of freight cars running to their door with raw material. Some of them in this section have enough material to last but a few days and if the supply is cut off they will have no other resource than to close their doors. Thousands and thousands of men in this immediate vicinity will be thrown out of work as a result.

Practically every manufacturing plant in this section is dependent in a large measure on the railroads for their supplies. One manufacturer said. "A strike such as planned would be the most serious handicap to business that the city has ever seen. At a time when all industries are booming and being rushed to fill their orders, tie-up of traffic would mean nothing less than the actual failure of many concerns. Thousands of tons of stock are now on the roads and in case of strike all this will be held up. held up.

Another angle of the strike effects that would be felt in Europe would be the complete tie-up of shipments of arms and ammunitions to Europe. Many of the plants are near or on the sea coast and these would suffer little, but others situated inland must rely on the steam roads to transport their products.

NEW FACTORY TO LOCATE HERE

A committee comprising L. W. Emerick, W. P. Morin and J. J. Jordan, of the local Chamber of Commerce had as their guests today a group of representatives from a large manufacturing industry now located in New York city.

This body of men arrived in Fulton this morning for the purpose of investigating the present facilities of Fulton with the intention of locating here.

The investigation was made as to sites, labor and water power. They were shown about the city by the aforementioned committee and expressed a thorough satisfaction in regard to locating here. Several prospective sites were pointed out to them affording excellent water power. Although no definite agreemnt was made by these men, it is understood that a definite decision will be reached by Wednesday of next week.

The nature of the manufactured product made by these people could not be learned today, but evidence was given, proving the reputation of the concern as absolutely of the best. They at present employ two hundred and fifty people in their factory in New York city and it is their intention to employ as many here.

NEWS OF THE STRIKE SITUATION

President Wilson Urges Congressional Action

SHOP MEN MAY STRIKE

(By United Press)

Washington, August 31—Continuing his tactics to force Congressional action that will avert the threatened railroad strike President Wilson today swung the executive whip over the House and Senate leaders. Appearing in person at the Capitol he told the members that information that he had at hand showed that the strike could be prevented if immediate action were taken on the eight hour proposition, which was suggested at the joint session of Congress Tuesday. He requested the hearing of this much as soon as possible and said that action on this measure together with the passing of the legislation covering the application for the eight hour day to the railroad operation be pushed through before Saturday.

President Wilson looked worn and haggard as he drove to the Capitol.

Washington, August 31—A legislative settlement even though it does not include all demands made by the four big Railroad Brotherhoods will be acceptable to the 400,000 employees to avert all plans set to strike Monday. Such a settlement A. V. Garretson, chairman of the conductors told the Senate Interstate Commerce Commission today, must include an eight hour day law.

* * *

Chicago, August 31—The spread of the proposed strike of the Four Brotherhoods to 35,000 shop men of nineteen western railroads threatened today as the executives of the Chicago Railroads gathered this morning at the Chicago Club to discuss plans of fighting the Four Brotherhoods. The shop men have begun negotiations with the railroad officials in ten western cities. They are asking for an increase of five cents an hour, amounting to $4,200,000 a year.

* * *

New Haven, Conn., August 31—The shop hands of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad today demanded an increase in wages of four cents per hour. 5,000 men are involved, most of whom are employed here and at Readville. A committee was sent to the Railroad headquarters with the demand and requesting an immediate settlement.

* * *

Washington, August 31—President Wilson today called for a conference with the Fourth Brotherhood leaders at two o'clock this afternoon. Between eleven and twelve o'clock he will go to the capitol to confer with members of Congress relative to pushing through measures for immediate action that will avert the threatened strike Monday.

* * *

Buffalo, August 31—With volunteer crews of a vast army of switchmen not effected by the strike and some of the older engineers and conductors who will not strike, the railroad center here hopes to be able to dispatch about ten per cent. of the regular trains after September 4th. Preparations are being made to meet the strike in Buffalo territory, which employs a railroad population of more than 50,000 men. Thousands of cots are being installed in offices and shops for the use of the employees who do not strike. It is estimated that $50,000 has already been spent for cook stoves and other outfits.

* * *

New York, August 31—The Chesapeake and Ohio Railroads today announced an embargo on all freight of any description from all points and to all destinations to become effective, September 1.

* * *

Topeka, Kansas, August 31—Forty-six train crews were stationed at Santa Fe division points today, ready to man passenger, mail and express trains in case the Fourth Brotherhoods go on a strike Monday. The announcement was made here today at the general offices of the Santa Fe Railroad. Two crews are stationed at each of the twenty-three division points of the Santa Fe system to operate trains each way.

* * *

St. Paul, August 31—"All the larger hotels in Yellowstone National Park, Montana and Wyoming will close tomorrow," Agent H. W. Childs, president of the owning company announced today, "on account of the unsettled transportation conditions." The hotels usually remain open until September 15.

* * *

New York, August 31—"Strike schedules" are being worked out on the eastern railroads today. With freight embargoes announced and travelers warned of the necessity of journeys being completed before Monday if serious inconvenience is to be avoided the heads of the big railroad systems are framing temporary schedules with which they hope to keep the lines partially in operation after the big walk out on Labor Day. It was admitted that every branch would be crippled. Freight transportation will be at a standstill until a complete readjustment of service is worked out. Passenger traffic will be uncertain. Express and mail service will more than likely suffer.

—There's never so good a time to fish as when the fish are biting.

We will begin by admitting that business is better with us and hope that the same is true with you. If it is not what you would like, you can make it so by learning a lesson from the good fisherman, who knows that there's never so good a time to fish as when fish are biting.

* * *

GETTING BUSINESS is a good deal like fishing. The first important thing about fishing is to fish; the next, keep on fishing; and the next fish some more. By this rule the good fisherman gets his fish, always remembering that there's never so good a time to fish as when the fish are biting.

ROOM FOR A GOOD MAN

There are never any vacancies in a well-conducted business, but there's always room for a good man.

It is true of all kinds of business.

The whole world is full of places for a good man.

The practical question confronting every young man is not:

IS A BIG JOB READY FOR ME?

But:

AM I READY FOR A BIG JOB?

Particularly in these days of abundant employment, there is no good reason why any man who wants a good job should not have it, if he is good for it.

But don't swell up and wait for big jobs to come after you with a brass band. People will not take you at your own unsupported estimate. You have to show them.

Lots of us envy the man in high place, thinking we could fill it as well as he does, if we could only get up to it. It's up to us to WORK up to it as well as he did.

Ninety-nine men in a hundred think they each would cut a fine figure if only they could be picked up and set upon a ready-made pedestal. But nobody's in the business of making pedestals for others to stand on. Each must make his own.

Men's abilities are measured and rewarded in accordance with what they have done, not by what they think they could do if somebody else would give them a chance.

Most all of the men in the world who have amounted to much never had half a chance until they made it themselves. And some of them made it out of mighty little material.

SHOULD BE ASHAMED OF IT

The Saturday Evening Post doesn't take much stock in the oft-repeated boast that we spend five hundred million dollars a year on our public schools. It finds no fault with the amount, but with the manner of its spending it finds a great deal of fault, for it calls attention to the fact that we still have too many one-room school houses in this country. To quote:

"We should be ashamed of our support of public schools instead of congratulating ourselves about it. There are over two hundred thousand one-room, one-teacher rural district schools where, on the whole, we are working a great confidence game on some millions of helpless minors by taking their time and giving them a bogus article of education. The one-room ungraded country school belongs to the pioneer era when farmers were compelled to reap wheat with a scythe, thresh it with a flail, and haul it twenty miles to market through mud half way to the wagon hubs; when building a barn involved getting half the male inhabitants of the township together to raise the frame. Many grown-up people now plow and reap with tractors, thresh with steam, go to town in an automobile in fifteen minutes, and talk over the telephone; but the youngsters are still back in the thirties of the last century.

And still the demagogues who seek office "point with pride" to the little red school house, as they call it, although the little school house is no longer red. They point to a few men like Lincoln who came from these primitive schools as an argument against improved schools and improved school methods, and they have actually stirred up prejudice against men who have been of real worth to the state in providing better schools.

School reforms have been more bitterly fought, than reforms along any other line. This for the reason that every man thinks he has all the education that is needed, and he believes that where he obtained what education he has, is good enough place for his children to obtain what education they will need. So the demagogue still finds it profitable to talk about the glories of the little red school house, and to decry the attempts of abler and sincerer men who are endeavoring to bring the schools up to date.

WOMEN AND ECONOMIC FREEDOM

Rider Haggard, the novelist, has been putting in a good deal of time lately studying the labor question, so far as it pertains to women in the factories. He has come to the conclusion that the "economic freedom which the women have secured will be worth more to them than a century of legislation."

But Rider Haggard, nor any one else, should not dismiss the question so lightly. It is a serious proposition, and is going to have a tremendous influence upon the whole human race. For it could not happen that these millions of women now engaged in the factories, and who never before left the home, can return to the homes after the war and take up their places in domestic life without the influence upon the race being felt.

Whatever we may think about "economic freedom," whatever we may think about "woman's rights," and she should have a vote if she wants it, the fact remains that the proper place for women is in the home. Anything that calls any considerable number of them from the home is going to have an influence upon future generations. These millions of women engaged in the factories are not going to return to homes after the war; they are not going to become wives and mothers to the extent they would if they had not felt this "economic freedom." Right here in this country the number of women who are entering the factories is appaling; it is going to mean something to us as a nation to have this vast number of women engaged in gainful pursuits outside of the home.

This does not mean that none of these women in the factories will not marry and become mothers; in this country especially many of them will do so, but not as great a per cent. of them as would otherwise marry and become mothers. The girl who goes out to work does not have as good an opportunity of meeting marriageable men, perhaps, as the one who remains at home, and, further, after a woman has been earning an independent living for a time she is not nearly as anxious to marry as is the girl who has less liberty and is more dependent. Further, young men are finding it harder and harder to support wives at the standard they now expect to be supported, for a woman who has been economically free by reason of her own efforts is not so willing to make sacrifices simply to have a husband and a home.

—There is a wide spread demand from dairymen for advance in milk, so that the farmer can still make money without the bother of keeping books.

—According to many automobile drivers, accidents will happen as long as the railroad trains refuse to stop when the motors blow their horns.

—Politics was the best thing ever invented for a lot of men who would stand no chance whatever of being elected except through politics.

—Two more hot summers and the average man will not be ashamed to go down town without a collar.

Editorial Comment

Bryan butts, Wilson tuts.

Watchful waiting maketh woeful wanting.

Candidate Hughes doesn't talk like a tut-tutter.

Hughes is hammering and the Democrats are yammering.

The Wilson Administration stands for taxes, and more taxes.

The Hughes trail will be cold by the time the Democrats strike it.

As a party leader, would it be fair to refer to J. Ham Lewis as J. "Pork" Lewis?

Bryan says Mr. Hughes' talks aren't judicial. No. The people can understand 'em perfectly.

Can the folks on the Democratic band wagon continue to play by the President's notes?

Hughes says the country can't be saved by letting it drift. That's where he and W. Wilson differ.

Washington reports that a new apology has been sent to First Chief Carranza. Looks like a habit.

Mr. Bryan is mistaken when he says Hughes is "vitriolic." The candidate is merely applying the acid test.

A messenger of President Wilson found out that Colorado women were for the administration. No messenger, of course, can be blamed for making good.

Political opponents are beginning to find that why Mr. Hughes kept silence so long wasn't because he had lost his tongue.

Another encouraging feature about our new navy is that when it is completed, Mr. Daniels will not be Secretary of it.

Having discovered that the Democrats don't like what he is saying, Mr. Hughes doubtless is convinced that he is on the right track.

The Ad. and the Man

He saw the ad. from day to day
And muttered: "I defy it.
Their stuff may be just what they say,
But I'm not going to buy it."
As time wore on he made remarks
It would not do to mention,
For he was mad because that ad.
Was forced on his attention.

But in a week, or two, or three,
He said, "There's no denying
The way that ad. gets hold of me
The stuff may be worth trying."
For just about a fortnight more
He dared mere words to win him,
And then the ad. completely had
Aroused the spender in him.

Next day he drifted in a store
And quietly expended
A few big iron dollars for
The stuff the ad. commended.
He found it filled a long felt need.
Its excellence surprised him.
And now he's glad because the ad.
So deftly hypnotized him.

RAILROAD PRESIDENTS WHO ROSE FROM RANKS

Meet Engineers Who Used to Work by Their Sides.

Former "bunkies" of railroad camps, fellow workers on engines and side partners of freight trains met in Washington the other day. But some of them arrived in their private cars, hurried back and forth to meetings in taxicabs, while the others came as ordinary passengers.

They were the presidents of the big railroads of the United States and some of the 640 representatives of the 400,000 trainmen in the four brotherhoods now threatening the country with a strike.

Many of the presidents started railroading as members of section gangs, brakemen or firemen. Working beside them were some of the men whose demands for an eight hour day they are bitterly contesting.

Take the case of Bill Lanagan, one of the brotherhood representatives, and A. H. Smith, New York Central president. Bill and A. H. started railroading together a long time ago as members of the same bridge gang. Smith moved along pretty rapidly, becoming division superintendent of the Lake Shore, general superintendent of the Big Four and general manager of the New York Central and finally president.

Bill is still in the ranks, but is a division chairman of the brotherhood.

"He's a fine fellow," said each of the other.

Then there is Fred D. Underwood—Frederick D., of the Erie, to be exact. Another brotherhood man who would not allow his name to be known beyond the fact that he is called John, said a better never lived than Fred. They used to work on the same engine on the Erie.

"Yep, Fred's all right—but we've got to have that eight hour day," said John.

There are others who knew Daniel Willard when he was an engineer, and so on through the list of railway presidents. A surprisingly large proportion of them started at the bottom.

Many of the brotherhood men are fairly well to do, comfortably fixed beyond the fact of owning their own homes. President Stone of the engineers is a college graduate.

Each of the brotherhood presidents, according to their fellows, gets at least $10,000 a year salary.

"Perhaps that helps explain the sort of action we get out of our presidents," said a brotherhood man. "They are $10,000 men, and we think they earn it."

FIND NEW DIAMOND FIELDS.

Discovery Is Made Six Miles From Famous Premier Mine.

Considerable interest, writes Consul Edwin N. Gunsaulus from Johannesburg, is manifested in a report of the discovery of a new diamond field in the Transvaal about six miles distant from the famous Premier diamond mine and eighteen miles from Pretoria. It is stated that the initial finds were exceptionally good, and there has been a rush of diggers to this new diamondiferous ground, which is on the farm Kamselfontein. One of the owners has cut up his section into plots 15 by 20 feet, which he lets out to diggers at $10 per month each.

De Volkstem, published at Pretoria, states that in the course of three weeks a few diggings have sold $1,500 worth of diamonds. It is said that one man brought to light thirty-one diamonds in two washings, and as far as known only one washing thus far has produced a blank. About forty acres of ground have been wired in and given out in claims. During one week forty claim licenses have been issued.

The government mining engineer has not yet visited the ground, and it will likely be some time before anything official can be made public. While diamonds are admitted to have been found, there are at present no data as to the extent or payability of the diamond bearing area. The undertaking as it stands today is described as of a purely private and speculative character.

Rainfall Record.

A new rainfall record for the United States is 22.22 inches, made at Alta Pass, in Mitchell county, N. C., in the twenty-four hours preceding 2 p. m. July 20. Lee A. Denson, section director there of the weather bureau, announced that fact when he completed his report on last month's flood. Alexandria, La., previously led the country with 21.4 inches rainfall in a similar period.

PAPER PRICES STILL SOAR

OUTLOOK FOR PUBLISHERS AND JOB PRINTERS BECOMES SERIOUS.

Persons who have been depending upon insurance companies and other business concerns for their rough stationery will have to dip down and do a little purchasing, and pay high prices for the paper if the price of that product continue to soar. Also it is believed that the time is not far away when the householder who has been accustomed to take home a quart of ice cream in a little paper package, may in the future be compelled to take a pail or a plate when he goes after it.

There is a shortage of paper that is bordering on a famine, and the worst of all is, according to those who are well acquainted with the situation is that there are no prospects for immediate relief. Paper is going up by leaps and bounds and business houses are finding it necessary to enforce the most economical measures in the matter of stationery and wrapping paper. If the shortage keeps up there will be no paper wasted in wrapping packages. In fact it is liable to be skimpy.

Insurance companies and otherbusiness concerns who have for years been in the habit of supplying their agents with scratch pads and other stationery containing advertising for free distribution are curtailing it and if the famine continues long there will be no more of those nice little pads entitled "Things I must do today" and the like. Blotters are still being distributed gratis, but they are not being handed out with such a free hand as formerly.

While the situation may not reach such a desperate stage that you have to pay for the paper pails in which you carry home your ice cream, yet the dealers now have to pay the cost price for them, where heretofore they have been furnished free by the manufacturer. The manufacturers say that the price of paper has reached such a point that it is now impossible for them to give theme away.

The serious problem confronting stationers and printers is in getting deliveries. Newspapers and printers using large quantities of paper who have not a large stock on hand are finding great difficulty in getting deliveries from the mills. Some newspapers are having great trouble in this line and many of them are hard pinched.

Some papers that have been accustomed to print sixteen pages for years have cut the size of their publication to twelve and whenever possible get out an eight page edition.

One of the reasons given for the unprecedented condition is the procuring of paper is that such vast quantities of materials used in making papers are being used in the manufacture of war munitions that enough cannot be had to supply the demands. Paper mills using rags are said to be paying twenty cents per pound for clippings from shirt and collar factories where they formerly paid but four cents.

Hard Life on Old Ships.

Naval men of today need not envy their predecessors of the middle of the eighteenth century when they think of the large prize money earned, for instance, by the capture of the Hermione. There were terrible odds to be set on the other side of the gamble. In seven years of that war, which ended in 1763, the number of seamen and marines who served was 184,893. Only 1,512 were killed in action or by accident, but as many as 133,708 died of disease or were reported missing. Why both disease and desertion were rife nobody needs to inquire who has read Smollett's ghastly descriptions of naval life in those days.—London Mail.

Ray Schalk Is Most Valuable Catcher In American League

"WHO is the most valuable player to his club in the American league?" asks a Chicago baseball expert. Most fans in Detroit would pick Ty Cobb. Many in Cleveland will contend Tris Speaker deserves the prestige. Many may be found in every city in the circuit who would single out Ray Schalk of the Chicago White Sox as the player deserving this honor. For all around play Schalk undoubtedly has no equal among the backstops of the American and probably the National league. It is one characteristic that marks him as a leader in his department. Whistling, dancing, aggressive, ever alert, Schalk has no peer in the American league. He does everything just a little better than his rivals. President Comiskey couldn't afford to trade Schalk for Speaker or Cobb, and this leads to an astounding fact in this young athlete's remarkable baseball career. The Sox owner could have signed Schalk at the paltry waiver price of $1,500 in 1911. He tapped his bank account to the amount of $12,500 for Schalk's release in 1912.

WILL VOTE ON CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Voters of this county and city will get another chance to cast their ballots this fall on the question as to whether there will be held another constitutional convention.

The fact that the last attempt to revise the organic law in accordance with "advanced" ideas was snowed under by more than half a million votes, does not affect the legal requirement of Section 2, article fourteen of the existing constitution "that at the general election to be held in the year 1916—the question 'Shall there be a convention to revise the constitution and amend the same?' shall be decided by the electors of the state.

The total appropriation made for the convention whose work was so emphatically repudiated by the voters footed up to the gigantic total of $1,207,448.13 according to the books at the office of the comptroller.

There are predictions being made that although the matter will have to be submitted again to the people in a short time in the heat and turmoil of a presidential campaign and state election combined that there will be no forgetting on the part of the voters to mark this particular ballot. There are predictions being freely made that there will not be another convention in the near future.

Musicians are often singularly superstitious. Paderewski once ordered an expensive apartment in London, but refused to enter when he found it was No. 13 of a certain street, although he paid for it. Massenet has written twenty-one operas and many other compositions, but on all of his manuscripts page $12\frac{1}{2}$ is written in place of 13.

Canning Hints.

In boiling or stewing fruits the sugar should always be added after the fruit is taken from the fire. If added during the cooking more sugar is needed.

Baked apples are among the most wholesome and most digestible of food products. Children and invalids are seldom harmed by them, even when other fruits might not agree.

Apples are more than 84 per cent water. Watermelon—rightly named—contains more than 92 per cent of water.

Berries should always be washed before being hulled to prevent washing away of considerable fruit juice.

The quickest way to peel peaches and plums is to immerse them quickly in boiling hot water, when the skin can be removed very easily. If done quickly this process will not soften the fruit.

Pound for pound figs are more nourishing than bread. There is no good reason why we do not all of us eat twice as many figs as we do.

DR. HALL RETURNS FROM NEW YORK HOSPITAL

Dr. A. L. Hall has returned from New York city, where he went as a delegate from this city to inspect the scientific treatment of Infantile Paralysis. Dr. Hall states that while there he was a guest at the Willard Parker hospital, at which place he had the experience of witnessing some of the modern methods of treatment.

The Willard Parker hospital is known as the municipal hospital for contagious diseases. 1,027 infantile paralysis cases were found inside the hospital. Ninety-two per cent. were under ten years of age; eighty per cent. under five years and about five per cent. over sixteen years. The oldest patient was forty-nine years of age. Such cases are very few. The total number of deaths are 156.

The treatment of these cases as found by the local physician was done mostly by favoring the injured section and the method of massaging has been discarded. Fifty per cent. of the living recover from the disease.

BON FIRE IN PRISON CELL.

The arrest of John Meagan for public intoxication proved to be more or less tiresome yesterday afternoon, for no sooner had he been placed in the irons than a howling shriek was sent up from these quarters. Chief E. J. Dyer and Officer Fox heard the cries and upon investigation found that Meagan had set fire to a stack of papers, much to the displeasure of John Swic, another inmate.

Mr. Swic was the party, who lodged the complaint in the form of shrieks. The fire was extinguished and Mr. Meagan was given a different suite of rooms.

Meagan was arraigned in city court this morning before City Judge H. J. Wilson. After a confidential conflab, he was awarded a thirty day sentence down the East River road.

(By United Press)

San Antonio, Texas, August 31—The southern department of the army organization was faced today with the proposition of transporting 15,000 national guards from the border to the state mobilization camps. The plans are to start the troops north tomorrow or Saturday if transportation can be arranged for. General Funston said that the removal of so large a body of men would seriously disarrange the organized military divisions.

CROPS WILL BE UNDER NORMAL

HIGH PRICES WILL UNDOUBTEDLY PREVAIL

Prof. A. E. Wilkinson, of the Department of Vegetable Gardening at Cornell University, believes that crop conditions throughout the state will be under normal this year. He spoke yesterday at Syracuse before the New York State Vegetable Growers' Association.

He declared that farmers all over the state are reporting shortages and that high prices will soon prevail. Some of the crops he declared are of poor quality.

He said in part:

"The yield of potatoes in this state will be about seventy-five per cent. normal. Long Island growers averaged 250 to 300 bushel to the acre on early potatoes, but will get only 100 bushels per acre on the late ones. There are many poor fields up-state but in the northern section conditions are better.

"The crop of onions will be 100,000,000 bushels under normal according to indications. This shortage, however, will be more than made up by big yields in Ohio and Indiana. The crop of onions in New York state is comparatively the poorest in the union, although heretofore New York has ranked as the largest onion producing state."

The celery crop, he declared would be but seventy-five per cent. of normal.

MORE LAWS TOMORROW

IMPORTANT ACTS THAT WILL EFFECT GUN "TOATERS," AND CHILDREN IN MOVIES.

Selling, carrying or using a silencer on firearms to muffle the sound is made a felony in an amendment to the penal law which goes into effect tomorrow.

This is about the most important of about a dozen new measures that are to be placed on the statute books September 1st. Under the amendment relative to the use of silencers, the possession of one except in the hands of an officer is construed as indicating an intent to use it. The perfecting of different kinds of silencers made the addition to the Sullivan law imperative.

Another of the new laws is one framed as the result of the escape of Harry K. Thaw from Mattewan. This relates to the enticing of inmates to escape from state institutions. It is very broad in scope covering prisons, asylums, custodial institutions and practically every kind directly or indirectly under state control. $500 fine or a year's imprisonment is provided for violation of this section.

Motion picture film producers are hard hit by a law providing that child actors must receive a written permit from the mayor or village board in the city in which they are engaged in acting in pictures. Written application for permission to use children

Dr. Hall stated this morning that the lower limbs were affected.

The young lady complained of not feeling well last Tuesday, but nothing serious was looked for; since then she has slowly declined until stricken this morning. Dr. Hall stated that if further development does not take place a recovery is expected.

HAY FEVER ASSOCIATION

HAYFEVERITES' HEAD SAYS 'TWAS JULIUS SNEEZER, NOT JULIUS CAESAR.

(By United Press)

Bethlehem, N. H., August 31—Several hundred members of The United States Hay Fever Association blew in here today behind their handkerchiefs. They came for the annual national convention representing 200,000 hayfeverites. Theirs is an organization not to be sneezed at by anyone but members.

The official slogan of the convention is a quotation from a funeral oration by the original hayfever victim Marc Antony, wherein he said:

"You who have tears to shed, prepare to shed them now."

It has long been generally believed that Antony was exhorting his hearers to weep over the death of Caesar, but the association's research department, under the direction of President John H. Pinover of Brooklyn, has definitely established that Antony merely interrupted himself to warn his fellow sufferers of the hay fever season's approach.

Mr. Pinover here today also expressed the suspicion that there was, really, no such man as Caesar; that his name, as a matter of fact, was Sneezer; which of course explains what Antony meant when he said:

"I come to bury Sneezer, not to praise him."

"Moreover," said Mr. Pinover, talking the situation over, "there are additional proofs in Antony's oration to prove my contentions.

"In saying 'when that the poor have cried, Sneezer hath wept,' Antony was simply trying to show that Sneezer suffered from hay fever just the same as ordinary persons, only in an accentuated form."

The association's officers are: Vice President, William M. Patterson, New York; secretary-treasurer, Miss L. B. Gachus, Bethlehem, N. H.; New York State President, Melvil Dewey, Lake Placid, N. Y.; Pennsylvania State President, Charles G. Snyder, Pittsburg, Pa.; Michigan State President, Jacob Nathan, Detroit, Mich.; Southern States President, James F. Byrness, Aiken, S. MRS. KERNAN, OF CORTLAND BELIEVES HER SON IS DEAD

Syracuse, N. Y., August 31—Although press dispatches have failed to confirm her fears Mrs. E. R. Kernan, of Cortland, N. Y., firmly believes that her son Ensign J. Harold Kernan has met his death in the accident to the United States Cruiser Memphis in the harbor at Santo Domingo, in which twenty sailors lost their lives.

Mrs. Kernan believes her son is dead because she dreamt on the night of the accident of standing by an open grave. Yesterday morning the first thing she read in the paper was the account of the accident to the Memphis. Her dream she believes was an omen that her son is dead.

Press dispatches up to this time have not carried the name of Kernan either among the dead or injured.

LET'S WAKE UP

Our town should wake up to the fact that some one else is occupying the seat that really belongs to us. This intruder represents out-of-town houses that take away business that should go to our own merchants. When will our town wake up? As long as we remain asleep the intruder will keep his place. Only when we decide on the policy of co-operation are we fully awake. We have seen the havoc and ruin of neglecting home interests. Now is the time for co-operation.

EDDIE PLANK 41 TODAY

SAYS HE WON'T QUIT TILL HE'S READY TO

By Hamilton
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, August 31—Eddie Plank, hero of many a world's series battle, is forty-one years old today.

The southpow master, several times relegated to the scrap heap by fans and sporting writers and once by Connie Mack, still is in the game, and the present season promises to be one of the best in his long career.

Early this month Plank allowed only seven hits in three games, winning every one of them. And it was his former team mates, the Athletics, who broke his winning streak August 18, in a tight pitching battle.

Plank left Gettysburg College to become a member of the Athletics in 1901. Hence this is his sixteenth year as a big league hurler. He helped the Athletics to pennants in 1902, 1905, 1910, 1911, 1913 and 1914.

When Connie Mack began the dismemberment of his famous team early in 1914, among the first to go were Jack Combs and Eddie Plank, and both of them went by the unconditional release route.

Combs caught on with Brooklyn and has done good work. Plank signed with the Federal league and was sent to St. Louis. He did noble work for the Feds and this year Fielder Jones kept him.

Plank declares he never has had a sore arm, because he has made pitching a study.

"When I quit the game," he said, "it will be because I'm tired of it. I think in five years I'll be ready to stay at home."

That would make him forty-five when he quits.

"Pitching is a job," he said. "It must be studied by the pitcher. He must study the other fellow, the batter, and learn what he cannot hit. I never have had any trouble with the great batters, with the exception of Cobb. You can't fool Cobb. He will hit most anything."

Plank declares he never curves a ball in spring training until at least a week has passed, and attributes the long service of his arm to that fact.

* * *

Joe Gedeon, who has been playing second base for the Yankees, and who looked like a world-beater in the early weeks, now looks like a flivver. His departure from the American League is expected soon.

* * *

Leo Fohl has oodles of confidence in his young pitchers. He declares he never saw two better looking youngsters than Gould and Lambeth.

* * *

Charley Mullen rapidly is becoming the idol of fans following the fortunes of the Yankees.

* * *

Bobby Roth, besides being a demon slugger, isn't exactly like the rest of the ball players, according to statements made by several American League athletes. One of them sized it up like this: "He's a great hitter because he don't fear no human." And to this trait the ball players attribute his playful act in heaving a pop bottle into the stands recently in Cleveland.

* * *

Connie Mack, serene in victory or defeat, declares he will have something of a ball club when the 1917 season opens. And, it is certain Mack has picked up some valuable men in Myers, Nabors and Witt.

* * *

At least five members of the old world's champion Athletics have helped put clubs in the National and American Leagues in the race this year.

New York American League fans are asking why Manager Donovan doesn't give Charley Mullen a regular berth. Mullen has been one of the most dependable players on the club this year. His pinch hitting has been remarkable.

The result of a straw vote taken in the summer school of Columbia University, which is attended by eight thousand students from all over the country stood over four to one in favor of woman suffrage. New York Aviation Club Has a New Preparedness Plan.

WOULD BE USEFUL IN WAR.

J. C. Mars, Who, With Augustus Post, Will Be in Charge of Training School, Believes They Could Fill Important Missions For Government.

New York.—New York will soon have a corps of newspaper aviators, according to the plans of the New York Flying Yacht club, whose officials have offered to give courses in aviation to all newspaper men capable of becoming aviators. The club recently received permission to use the North river water front at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street for a landing stage for hydroaeroplanes and aeroplanes, and floats, hangars and machine shops will be erected there in the near future.

the club, they believe experience in observation will make the novices excellent air scouts in time of war.

In discussing the plan, Mr. Mars said the club not only would maintain a landing station for sportsmen and business men who would commute by air from their country homes to the city, but would also teach civilians to fly.

"We believe that newspaper men will make good aviators," he said, "and we plan to give them free instruction in the handling of all types of flying craft. In the past newspaper men have done great service for their country, and in case of war these men may have an opportunity to lend valuable aid to the government. As couriers of the air, scouts and members of the coast patrol they could fill important missions."

MADE WAR ON CATERPILLARS.

Reported Casualties In Philadelphia Campaign Were 78,939.

Philadelphia.—Complete reports from the war of the school garden children conducted for the extermination of caterpillars have been prepared by Miss Caro Miller, directing the school gardens, and show a grand total of 78,939 caterpillars, cocoons and egg masses annihilated. It was explained that each egg mass contained 500 potential caterpillars, so that millions of caterpillars were exterminated in the egg stage by the children's campaign.

The purpose of the school garden director is to take the champion caterpillar exterminators to visit the mayor to receive his official recognition of their public service. A girl made the best record, killing 11,356 caterpillars.

Toledo, O.—Dennis W. Leonard, engineer on the Twentieth Century limited train, which was wrecked at Amherst, O., March 29 last, was found dead in bed at his home recently. Heart disease, superinduced by worry over the wreck, is given by physicians as the cause of death.

He was absolved from blame in the catastrophe, but had been unable to keep out of his mind the sight of the wreckage and the cries of the mangled passengers.

Leonard was fifty-two years old and had been with the New York Central thirty-five years.

Lake Geneva, Wis.—Men henceforth are to be barred from the national service school camp of the women's division of the Navy League of the United States—that is, all except instructors, unless they have passes properly signed and countersigned. This was the edict of Major General Commanding F. D. Countis to protect the 150 fair "rookies" from annoyance in the future.

Among the new rules is one which prohibits the girls from wearing their hair down their backs.

PUTS CASH IN HIS SHOE AND FOOLS FOOTPADS

Bayonne (N. J.) Man Takes Beating, but Saves His Money.

Bayonne, N. J.—James McLaughlin was returning to his home in this city when he noticed three men following him. He had a roll of bills in his pocket and believed the trio meant to hold him up when he got to a lonely spot.

McLaughlin stepped into a hallway, took off one of his shoes, placed the money in it and put it back on his foot. Then he continued on his trip home.

When he got to a lonely spot, at Avenue C and West Eleventh street, the three men pounced on him. While two of them held him tightly the other went through his pockets, but found no money. A half hour later McLaughlin was found in the gutter, cut and beaten.

"They beat me up all right," McLaughlin said at the police station, "but I fooled them on the money question."

FOUR BROTHERS AND FOUR SISTERS WED

In Six Months Cupid Firmly Unites Two Wisconsin Families.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Four Wisconsin brothers in the past six months have married four sisters. The latest of the weddings was that at Waukegan, when the last of the boys in the Blum family married the last of the sisters in the Rausch family, both the Rausch and the Blum families being of Campbellsport and Hartford, Wis., respectively. In the form in which the weddings were recorded the names of the parties are as follows:

Paul Blum, now of Marshfield, and Marie Rausch.

John Blum of Marshfield and Anna Rausch.

Peter Blum, Jr., of Marshfield and Catherine Rausch.

Jacob Blum of Hartford and Lily Rausch.

The Blum family was formerly of Hartford, and Campbellsport is the next village. The first romance was that of a country school. The first marriage was preceded by romances involving all four brothers, and the weddings came one after another in rapid succession.

Berea (Ky.) Couple Are Alive and Well and Over Seventy.

Berea, Ky.—Berea college, which annually trains about 1,000 young men of the southern mountain section, boasts of doing its work among the most prolific people within the borders of the country. In support of this assertion, Mrs. James Barrett, a mountain neighbor of Berea college, has furnished the authorities with data relative to her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Davidson. This couple are now enjoying good health in their seventies and have immediate descendants to the number of 150.

Mr. and Mrs. Davidson have eleven children, 100 grandchildren and thirty-two great grandchildren. It is said that the family is known as peace lovers, none having ever been in court other than as witnesses.

AUTO JOLTS HIS LEG OFF.

One Woman Faints, but Revives to Learn It Is Cork.

Pittsburgh.—Several hundred persons stood aghast when a leg, well stockinged and shod, fell from an automobile that sped by the Pennsylvania railroad depot. A woman fainted and was revived in time to see the auto returning.

"Has any one seen a leg around here?" asked an elderly man, leaning out of the car. "Ah, thanks," he added gratefully as a man who had been bold enough to pick up the leg handed it to him. "A jolt knocked off my cork leg. Thanks again. If you ever lose a leg in my town let me know if I can be of any service to you."

Putting his leg under his arm, the elderly man in the car presented a card, "A. J. Limper, 106 Allison street, Harrisburg, Pa."

Portland, Ore.—New York's best surgeons will endeavor to restore the sight of Melba, a seven-year-old Eskimo girl, who was found deserted in an igloo by Dr. L. H. French, United States government physician in Alaska.

The cornea of a rabbit will be grafted upon one affected eye and a cataract removed from the other.

In charge of Mrs. Corinne Call, a government teacher, the child arrived in Portland recently. Mrs. Call says the Eskimos left Melba in the ice hut, hoping she would die. She has been totally blind for five years. The trouble is diagnosed as an eruption of the cornea.

LAUGH AT CORNS.

California Has a League Which Shuns Footwear.

FEEL LIKE BAREFOOT BOY.

Members Must Be Willing to Walk Before Assembled Multitude, Including Their Wives, Unshod and Be as Nonchalant as Can Be.

Sacramento, Cal.—Harkening back to the days when man roamed carelessly across green pastures, unshackled by costly footwear, when cool, solid comfort met the naked foot at every step and when corns and bunions were unheard of, four prominent Sacramentans have formed what is to be known as the Sacramento Barefoot league.

There are four charter members of the league, all residents of Yardley avenue, and they are Dr. Robert E. Smith, James McCulloch, L. D. Lumry and Steve Downey.

The league was organized in quite an unintentional way. Which of the four was the originator is not known, but it is intimated that Dr. Smith, for several years advocate of the Coatless Summer League For Men, had something to do with it.

At any rate the league has had several meetings. The requirements of the league are these: No member must be too modest to display his bare feet. He must be without pedal covering in attending meetings. He must be willing to, and enjoy, walking on his lawn before the assembled multitude, including his wife, unshod.

He must be willing to step into his neighbor's house in his bare feet and walk across his neighbor's hardwood floors as nonchalantly as though he were Pithecanthropus in the jungle.

Several meetings of the league have been held at the homes of the various charter members on Yardley avenue. The meetings are preceded by a cool walk upon the lawn of the host. As the evening becomes cool the members retire to the host's drawing room and are entertained with phonograph selections.

Despite serious objection to the league on the part of the better halves in some of the homes, the organization has grown and is now reaching out for congenial spirits.

"Keep cool and comfortable and cure your corns" is the slogan of the league.

Spokane, Wash.—It cost George Lennon, a young laborer of Spokane, just 25 cents to be awarded the best quarter section of land on the diminished Colville Indian reservation in the drawing recently held here by the government. His name was drawn first from a list of 90,410 names. He gets his choice of 160 acres of land from a total of approximately 350,000 acres.

Five thousand five hundred names were drawn, and among these are to be distributed about 1,500 pieces of land. The names of those who had registered were heaped upon the stage, and four little Spokane girls picked at random the winners of Uncle Sam's gifts of land.

PLAYED PIANO FIFTY HOURS.

Captured Long Distance Record, but Imagine the Neighbors' Sufferings!

Muncie, Ind.—For fifty hours and five minutes—more than two days—W. G. Bagley of this city played the piano. In all that time he never ceased to keep the keys moving, never let melody curl up and go to sleep. Food and drink were brought to him at the instrument. Attendants sopped his head with towels. Tolerant friends stood about and encouraged him. He was after the long distance piano playing record, and, by gum, he got it!

It is hoped no one will challenge this claim for endurance. It is certain that no one will ever question the generosity and the fortitude of Mr. Bagley's neighbors. Yet, of course, it may be that they were on their summer vacation.

WALKS COUNTRY IN 70 DAYS.

John H. Scott, at Fifty-six, Sets New Record In Pedestrianism.

Philadelphia.—John H. Scott recently reached the city hall, ending his walk from San Francisco. He is the champion long distance hiker of America.

Scott crossed the continent in 70 days 5 hours 30 minutes, almost ten days faster than any other man has made the distance. His 3,324 mile walk from San Francisco to Philadelphia beats the records of John Ennis and Edward P. Weston, the former champions.

Scott, who is fifty-six, looked fit and hardened as he reached city hall. He lost only ten pounds.

"Prayer and persistence did it," he said. "I used both frequently."

Council Bluffs, Ia.—By the terms of a will left by an uncle Miss Ruby Rosenbaum, a member of the Bluffs Bachelor Girls' club, must marry her cousin within the next five years in order to get a big ranch in Colorado and $25,000. The cousin whom she must marry if she wishes to inherit her uncle's fortune is I. Stine, also of Denver.

BULLETS DIDN'T STOP HIM.

Lead Fired Into Lewis' Body Made No Impression.

Baltimore.—Bullets make no impression upon Nathan Lewis of 1204 McElderry street, according to his evidence in the criminal court, where he was a star witness against William Edwards, charged with assault with intent to murder and carrying a deadly weapon.

Lewis and Edwards had an argument. Edwards procured a revolver and shot at Lewis. One bullet struck Lewis in the arm, but he merely plucked it out and threw it away. The second bullet went through Lewis' mouth while he was smiling over the failure of the first shot to do him injury, and it did nothing more than loosen one of his teeth.

He spat the leaden pellet out and was proceeding to use his fists on Edwards when the pair were separated.

Harry B. Walf pleaded self defense for his client, and Judge Stump gave him the benefit of the doubt and dismissed the case.

NICKELS BUY A MOTORCAR.

Minneapolis Man Saved Bison Branded Coins For Three Years.

Minneapolis.—N. M. Carlson owns the first genuine jitney car in Minneapolis. He acquired it a few days ago. No, he isn't going to haul passengers in it. It's a jitney car because he bought it with jitneys—and buffalo jitneys at that.

Carlson had long yearned for a motorcar. Three years ago he began saving buffalo nickels and sequestering them in a motorcar fund.

Every time he got one of the bison branded coins in change he carefully laid it aside. Slowly the hoard grew until it reached a total of $461.45, the sum the motorcar people demanded for the flivver upon which the engineer's heart was set.

The deal was made, and Carlson handed his 9,229 buffalo nickels over to the Minneapolis manager of the flivver company and drove away in his shiny new car, the first real jitney car owned in Minneapolis or anywhere else.

THREE TOED HORSE FOSSIL.

Professor Says Animal Grazed In Nevada 3,000,000 Years Ago.

Reno, Nev.—A well preserved set of teeth and jawbone of an animal which Professor J. C. Jones of the State university declares were the property of a three toed horse of the upper miocene age have been unearthed in the Washoe valley, on the Pedroli ranch, by university engineers.

Professor Jones says the horse probably roamed the wilds of Nevada some 3,000,000 years ago.

He says the horses of that date were even smaller than the Shetlands of the present day, and are classified as the eohippus. The specimens were found in a well which apparently penetrated a prehistoric lake bed. Teeth of mammoths, fossil leaves and other specimens of prehistoric ages have been found in wells on the Pedroli ranch. They are among the best in the fossil collection at the university, as they show clearly the age and classification to which they belong.

CUPID IN A KEG OF POWDER.

English Girl Making Munitions Writes New Jersey Worker.

Kenvil, N. J.—Harry Huberman, an employee at the Hercules Powder works here, recently inscribed his name and address on the face of an old broken watch and dropped it into a keg of smokeless powder which was to be shipped to England.

This little incident may mean a wife for Huberman, who received a letter the other day from a young English woman working in a munition factory at Newcastle-on-Tyne and inviting Huberman to correspond, which he has done.

The letter was from Miss Jean Bumpton of 55 Hunter's road, Spital Tongues, Newcastle. The timepiece, it is believed, was discovered by Miss Bumpton as she was filling shell cases with the explosive.

POLITICS CHEAP IN KANSAS.

Seventeen Candidates Didn't Spend a Cent For Office.

Topeka, Kan.—Seventeen candidates for state office and the state legislature went through the recent state wide primary without spending a cent. That was the record shown in the sworn statements of campaign expenses as filed with J. T. Botkin, secretary of state.

Nine other candidates spent a dollar or less in making their campaign, while seven candidates won nominations on expenses of less than 50 cents, three spent a dime or less, and two won nominations for the price of a two cent postage stamp, according to the statements. All candidates were within the 10 per cent limit allowed by law.

BROILED LIZARD AS FOOD.

Claim Made by Native Epicures of Nicaragua Backed by U. S. Marines.

Managua, Nicaragua.—Perhaps broiled lizard will never find its way to the menu cards of fashionable New York restaurants, but the United States marines attached to the American legation here have found fried or broiled iguana steaks served with a pasty sauce made from alligator pears to be everything claimed by the native epicures.

The iguana, or giant lizard, has been used for food by the natives for many years, and iguana steak finds much favor with them because of its gamey taste. The iguana is herbivorous.

HER DANCE FROCK.

A Simple Model For Maidens Is Pink Satin.

This party gown has a drop skirt of silver lace over which falls a graceful drape of pink satin. The bodice has a girdle of silver lace, but by far the most interesting feature are the angel wings of pink tulle on the shoulders.

THE BELLE

SUIT FABRICS.

A Chat About What New Suitings Are Like.

Do not gather the impression that broadcloth is the one and only material for suits. Broadcloth will be used extensively, for it lends itself pleasingly to the mode both as regards design and decoration. Both fur and embroidery are perfect on a background of broadcloth.

There are wonderful velours for coat suits, and there is no question but that gaberdine and serge will be used. Paris is putting out some suits of alpaca, but it is hard to prophesy that this material will be used here for autumn suits.

The feeling is that if we are to use alpaca for suits this will not occur until early spring, but we are quite likely to use alpaca for dresses through the winter. For suits you must not forget that rich satins of extra weight have been provided for dressy wear. The novelty suitings of fine checks and stripes, of which you have already been told, are not to be overlooked, and you may expect to see suits of velvet as well.

Tassels of silk trim many of the suits, and these are to be seen as well on dresses, blouses and even on neckwear.

There will surely be a big variety of fabrics and trimmings to choose from and many other smart types of suits besides the Russian styles presented today.

Colored Bead Belts.

Belts have come back with a glitter and sparkle that will make them irresistible even to the girl who ordinarily does not care to cultivate a distinct break at the waist line by means of a separate belt.

Some of these belts, which have come from Paris, are made entirely of beads in various colors. The beads are so arranged that there is a distinct design, in some instances introducing figures. Quite unique is a belt of black patent leather with a design done in black and white beads. Another is shown in a checkerboard effect done in bugle beads. There are others of suede in bright colors liberally sprinkled with beads of a strongly contrasting tone.

Because of the fancy for narrow strap effects some of the belts have been made of several narrow strips of suede and are joined with bead motifs of various designs.

A Plaster Hint.

The wife of a physician who has occasion to run to the roll of adhesive plaster to cure less than mortal ills finds it a durable as well as neat way of marking china when she lends a particularly good dish to an invalid, a party or a fair. She writes her name and address with indelible pencil on the plaster and sticks it on the bottom of her dish, where it makes an inconspicuous identification and cannot be removed without at least several washings.

Drawstring Bags.

Drawstring bags made of silk or of satin continue strongly in the lead. Some very effective numbers in other fabrics, such as worsteds, have been brought out. The new designs and shapes show great variety. The ruffled skirt effect is still prominently featured, as also are the draped effects of the lamp shade type.

Why Elephants Fear Mice.

It seems almost incredible that so small and harmless an animal as a mouse is able to frighten an elephant almost out of his senses, yet one little mouse in the hay on which they are feeding will stampede an entire herd. In the elephants' native land there are little animals known as chacanas, which feed on a small sour berry of which elephants are very fond.

They live in settlements, something after the manner of prairie dogs, under the berry bushes, and sometimes, when feeding, the elephants trample upon the little towns, and the chacanas in their fright frequently run up the tubes of the elephants' trunks.

Their long, sharp claws catch in the flesh, and they cannot be ejected. The more violently the monster blows through its trunk the more firmly the hooked claws of the little animal become imbedded in the flesh, and inflammation and death are the result. In captivity, therefore, the elephants think they are in danger of the deadly chacanas when they see a mouse and show signs of great fear.

More Labor Than You Thought.

To write a single letter of the alphabet, it is roughly estimated, requires from 200,000 to 300,000 distinct processes, all of which are controlled and directed by the mind. To make the letter O, for instance, takes but a second, yet if all the mental processes involved had to be performed consciously years would be consumed in the performance. First, the making of the O is willed in the brain, setting in motion the activities of thousands of cells in the hearing areas, the seeing areas, the speech motor areas and the muscular motor areas. Hundreds of nerve threads connecting these cells with various cells and nerve threads in the brain are set to work to organize the movement, while other nerve centers attend to the business of furnishing the requisite amount of blood. As a result, the spinal centers are actuated, and finally the smaller nerves in the fingers direct the forming of the O.

Discovering a Star.

Long had he worshipped her at a distance, but his shyness prevented him from proposing.

Then one evening, for the sweet sake of charity, a theatrical performance took place in which the charmer was leading lady and more adorable than ever. Afterward the shy admirer drew near, his love made valiant by the sight of her beauty.

"You are the star of the evening," he said as they stood alone in a corner.

"You are the first to tell me so," said the damsel, with a happy blush.

"Then," he retorted promptly, "may I claim my reward as an astronomer?"

The lady looked puzzled.

"What reward?" she asked.

"Why, the right to give my name to the star I have discovered," said the young man, speaking boldly at last.—Chicago News.

ONE PIECE GOWN.

What Paris Says About This Delectable Garment.

The one piece dresses shown at the fall opening of the Martial-Armand collection are made on straight lines somewhat longer than present styles, and are accompanied with mantles to match. Apron effects appear on some, panels are a feature of other models, while still others have the skirts draped.

A variety of materials is embraced for these one piece frocks, including cloth, thin silk, velvet, muslin and satin. Fur used in combination with embroidery, showing such colors as gray, blue, green and taupe, forms the trimmings.

The evening dresses in this collection are of faille, satin and velvet and show a plentiful use of metal, tulle, jet and lace.

Long court mantles of embroidered tulle or lace are attached to many of the evening gowns at the shoulders in such a way as to form a square. Oriental ideas in bright colors are developed in other mantle models, while some of the velvet mantles in red, green or yellow are trimmed with fur and heavy gold lace.

Maison Agnes also features one piece dresses at her opening. They are combinations of satin and serge, are elaborately embroidered and finished with high neck and long sleeves and are intended to replace the tailored suits.

Some of the costumes have embroidery design continuing down on to the skirt in Louis XV. waistcoat effect. Gowns that are combinations of satin with chiffon, also charmeuse with mousseline are popular. The top of the bodice is of mousseline or tulle, contrasting with dress material. Embroidery and fur bandings are generously used on these models.

Still quite short are the evening dresses. They are made with a pointed train and square decolletage, are most often fashioned of metallic tissue or a brilliant metalized silk, veiled with vivid color tulle. Some are of metalized broche faille or taffeta. Metallic laces are lavishly employed and cape effects are produced on these gowns, falling below the shoulders at the back to the waist in very rich gold or silver laces or tulle. The brilliant effects are very much sought after and they are produced by the use of rhinestone and spangled trimming.

Ample mantles, with sleeves, are made of all kinds of velvet. They have large standup fur collars and are developed in rather dark colors.

NEW YORK HAS WEEK'S SUPPLY OF FOOD ON HAND

AUTHORITIES TAKING STEPS TO PROVIDE ENOUGH TO EAT IN EVENT OF BIG RAILROAD STRIKE—MILK TO BE BROUGHT IN BY MOTOR.

(By International News)

New York, August 31—With the large railroads declaring an embargo on freight and warning passengers that they may be subject to delay if they cannot reach their destinations by Sunday night, September 3, the corporations are rapidly completing their arrangements for the national strike which the brotherhood chiefs have ordered to begin on Labor Day. Several of the railway presidents who have been conferring with President Wilson at Washington returned to New York today. The word they brought back was pessimistic and the executive offices of all railroads immediately became hives of industry.

For several weeks agents of the railroads have been scouring the country hiring strike-breakers and guards for all lines. They have reported considerable success, but the railway executives admitted today that they would be unable to secure enough men to keep trains running on their regular schedules.

Officials of this city, recognizing that a strike is imminent, are taking steps to insure a food supply for 5,000,000 persons if the railway employes go out. Police Commissioner Woods has found from a superficial survey that the food on hand will last only a week.

The first effort of the authorities is to make plans that will prevent the milk supply being cut off. On July first there were in New York city 593,901 children less than five years old. All these would be affected by a strike that prevented milk shipments.

The milk companies are organizing to meet the situation. According to the plans thus far perfeceted, babies will be served first and the sick next. Milk drivers on all routes are listing those absolutely dependent upon milk for their food.

All available milk will be brought into the city by motor trucks, the district of collection being extended into the country as far as possible.

Railroads Getting Ready for Walkout

Chicago, August 31—Western and mid-western railroads, practically all of which enter Chicago, began active preparations today for a general strike. Passengers contemplating long journeys were warned that if they could not reach their destination before Saturday night they might be subjected to "perplexing delays."

The Santa Fe road, which, according to reports, has been engaging strike-breakers for some time, was the first road to place an embargo on perishable freight. Other roads set Saturday night as the time limit when they could guarantee to deliver freight. These included the Northern Pacific, Burlington, Rock Island, Southern Pacific, Southern railway, Mobile & Ohio, Central of Georgia, Seaboard Airline, Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville & Nashville, St. Louis & San Francisco and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas. Similar action was expected from the others during the day unless there is a marked change in the situation.

"The railroads are taking these precautions as temporary means of getting ready," said Vice President C. G. Burnham, of the Burlington. "When officials get their bearings and can estimate the number of men available for service we will try to keep trains running as nearly on schedule time as possible. We can, however, guarantee nothing at this time."

Chicago's great packing industries will be cruelly hit in the event of a strike. Not more than three days' supply of live stock can be kept at any of the yards. At the end of that period it will be necessary to close down, throwing many thousands out of work. There is plenty of meat in cold storage.

PROGRESSIVES OPPOSING PLAN TO AVERT STRIKE

Washington, August 31—With the eyes of the nation fixed on congress, watching for action to avert the threatened railroad strike, the senate interstate commerce committee at ten o'clock yesterday began drafting the legislation urged by President Wilson Tuesday in his address before the joint session of the house and senate. The committee faced the prospect of bitter Progressive Republican opposition. There was no chance of completing the program before the strike order goes into effect September 4th, leaders admitted.

The committee plans to work day and night in order to lay all the suggested legislation before the senate within a few days. Leaders were divided in their opinions as to how long the president's program would delay adjournment of congress. Senator Kern, the majority leader, thought it would be possible to dispose of the entire program and adjourn within two or three weeks. He made this statement after a conference with Senator Root, one of the Republican leaders.

Progressive Republican senators promptly bristled up and said Smoot was not running things, and promised spirited fighting over various features of the program. Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, the leading authority of the senate on railroad affairs, will hurry back from Wisconsin to lead the opposition.

Notices have been sent to all senators that only illness would be accepted as excuse for absence. This brought the majority of about thirty, many of whom were busy campaigning in their home states, hurrying back to the Capitol. With a full attendance, leaders believe they can maintain a quorum for night sessions, and enable the senate to dispose of the program in about half the time than it could otherwise.

To Hear All Sides.

The senate interstate commerce committee voted to hold a hearing, beginning tomorrow (Thursday) morning, on the legislation proposed yesterday by President Wilson for meeting the threatened railroad strike.

Three hours each will be alloted to the brotherhoods, the railroad executives, the shippers and other public interests.

SAYS LOVE WORDS UNDER MOON IN HAMMOCK ARE NOT LOVE.

(By United Press)

Hawthorne and Dueling.

It has been thonght by most of Hawthorne's biographers that his theory of the fatality of acts was founded largely upon a tragic experience of his own life. In the belief that a young lady whom he well knew had been insulted he challenged the supposed offender to a duel, but was prevented from carrying out his purpose by his friends, Pierce and Cilley, who showed him that the supposed insult was entirely mythical. A few years later Cilley was himself challenged by a political enemy, and the fact that Hawthorne had been willing to fight a duel is said to have persuaded him not to decline, and his opponent killed him.—From Erskine's "Leading American Novelists."

WHITMAN DARES TO AID FARMERS

Appropriates Over $1,000,000 For Cattle Killed.

MANY CLAIMS FIVE YEARS OLD

He Terminated Thereby One of the Greatest Injustices Practiced by the State—He Granted Liberal Appropriations to Agricultural Colleges and Other Activities Helpful to Farming Interests—Enforced Pure Food Laws.

One of the greatest forms of injustice to the farmers of the state practiced for years has been corrected by Governor Whitman. This consisted in killing the farmers' cattle to prevent the spread of disease and then neglecting to pay for them.

Claims against the state for cattle and horses suffering from tuberculosis and glanders, which had been destroyed, dating back to 1911 were found by the new administration filed in the department of agriculture. Governor Whitman realized that failure to pay owners promptly for slaughtered stock was a great wrong to the farmers and destructive to the interests of agriculture.

The governor in 1915 approved an appropriation of $780,112.25 for paying these claims, of which $432,722 was for claims from one to five years old, and in the budget of 1916 an appropriation of $235,000 was granted to pay all current claims up to March 1 of this year, all previous claims having been settled out of the appropriation of last year. These latter claims were settled promptly after the appropriation became available early in June, 1916, and the claimants were able thereby to purchase their new stock for use during the summer.

Commended Throughout State.

The support the governor and the administration have given to the agricultural schools and institutions which perform fundamental agricultural functions—which ferret out the causes of plant diseases that destroy our crops, and remedies therefor—is well understood and has brought forth the strongest kind of commendation from one end of the state to the other.

The following shows liberal appropriations approved by the governor to the end that this educational work may be extended: Geneva experiment station, $139,000; State School of Agriculture at Cornell, $579,000; Alfred university, $44,000; Morrisville School of Agriculture, $42,000; St. Lawrence School of Agriculture, $37,000; State College of Forestry, Syracuse, $123,000; Delhi Agricultural school, $43,000; Long Island Agricultural school, $83,000; Cobleskill Agricultural school, $85,000.

In most instances part of the appropriations were used for buildings and equipment for which funds had been refused in the two preceding administrations.

Developed State Fair.

Governor Whitman has given his active support to a movement for the further development of the state fair and has this year approved appropriations which total $213,000. The effect of this liberal program will be to stimulate this important arm of the state service devoted to the interest of agriculture.

A campaign to reclaim the abandoned farms in this state has been inaugurated. A bureau of the department is engaged in pointing out to residents and owners of farms in other states the advantages which New York state farm lands possess, both of proximity to New York city, the greatest market place in the world; the excellence of transportation and the adaptability of one soil for various crops, with the result that daily inquiries are made at the department, and in many cases farms are purchased.

No longer is there that feeling in the state that the attitude at Albany is for the breaking down of our agriculture, its institutions, our state and county fairs. The feeling was quick to spread that the administration was bending every effort to upbuild and strengthen agriculture, and there is now entire confidence that this effort has produced results.

Strong Policy For Pure Foods.

There is now no laxity in the enforcement of the laws designed to protect the consumer against adulterated food, nor in the enforcement of any of the other agricultural laws, despite the fact that an extensive program for the development of our agricultural interests has been carried out.

For the protection of the farmer who sends his products to commission houses for sale, the department of agriculture has taken active steps. The commission merchants are required to file bonds, and in cases where they fail to pay for merchandise handled the bonding companies are required to do so. Although the law was enacted several years ago, no provision was made for the distribution of money recovered on bonds until this year, when a bill providing for such distribution was approved by the governor.

A Notable Case.

Representatives of the department investigate the financial standing of commission merchants, and if not satisfactory a bond is required. The first case in which money was recovered on a bond since the law has been in effect was that of a New York commission merchant, and the money was distributed to the producers in July last.

STRONG PROTEST FROM MOTHERS

WILL NOT SUBMIT KINDLY TO LITTLE BOYS MILITARY TRAINING.

"I did not raise my boy to be a soldier," has ceased to be only the title of a popular song and is now the slogan of thousands of mothers in New York State who have joined in a mighty protest against the Welsh and Slater laws that were enacted at the last session of the legislature to make soldiers out of boys above eight years of age. The fathers have troubles of their own, for they are subject to draft into the national guard and naval militia at any time under the Stivers law, also enacted by the last legislature and signed by Governor Whitman on May 15.

From the threats of thousands of mothers from all parts of the state, truancy officers in every city, town and village will have their hands full when school opens and the officials attempt to enforce the Welsh and Slater laws. The Welsh law provides for training of children above eight years in elementary and secondary schools under the direction of the state military training commission. The parents declare that the members of the legislature were tricked into voting for this law by the jingo leaders of the senate and assembly who said it was intended to bring physical education into the schools. The mothers say it will be military training if under the Military Training Commission and declare they will not send their children to school to be made into soldiers and professional slayers.

There was no attempt at deception in the Slater law. This boldly provides for military training of all boys between 16 and 19 years in high schools, private schools and colleges. The boys will be given three hours of military drill each week and in the summer will be shipped to military camps where they will learn all the devices of military life.

The fathers and mothers of the state are being organized to fight the Welsh, Slater and Stivers laws by the New York Committee Opposed to Conscription Laws, which has its headquarters in New York City and branches in every city in the state. Men and women of all political parties and of all religious beliefs are banded together in this organization to begin their fight with the opening of the schools. Mrs. Edward Thomas, of 841 West End avenue, New York city, is chairman of the committee, and is directing the work through the state.

"The mothers of the boys in New York State will not sit calmly at home and watch their children transformed from happy little human beings into the machines of a military despotism," said Mrs. Thomas. "I know the school officials will face a regular revolt, a general strike against school if any attempt is made to force military drill upon the children. For two years the mothers of New York State have watched with horror the results of military training of the children of Europe. They know now better than ever before that militarism breeds war. And the three laws of Welsh, Slater and Stivers have brought militarism right to the doors of every household in this state. These laws reach into every home where there is a man or child. The man may be dragged from his home and business at any time under a conscription order from the governor. If he refuses, a long term in a federal prison may await him under the Federal military laws governing desertion.

"If the United States were menaced by some enemy there would be some occasion for this call to arms of every male from eight to forty-eight years of age. But the United States has no enemy. Perhaps Big Business wanted these laws to provide strike breakers on the railroads and other industries. If so, Big Business will go a long road before it can conscript the men and boys of the state to do its police work and save unscrupulous employers the money they have been spending on gunmen and gangsters."

Expert Testimony.

Young Mrs. Cornell was a bride of but a short time. One afternoon she confided to her friends at a pink tea that she was sure her husband never played poker at his club.

"How," queried one of the women, "did you find out?"

"Oh," explained the young bride, "I met a couple of the members of his club the other day, and I asked them, 'Can Perry play poker?' They looked thoughtful for a moment and then answered very sincerely, 'No!' "

40,000 Women, Two Elephants and Goat March for Suffrage

(By United Press)

Chicago—To urge an equal suffrage plank in the Republican platform, forty thousand women, two elephants and a goat marched down Michigan boulevard to the Coliseum, where the Grand Old Party meets today.

From every voting unit in the United States women got in line and urged the suffrage plank.

Two classes of women marched: the "free" women, those who already have the vote, and the women from the states where equal suffrage has not yet been granted.

At the head of the grand procession Miss Portia Willis, pretty New York suffragist drove two huge elephants. The elephants carried a heavy plank with the work "Suffrage" painted large upon it.

A distinction wasmade made in the parade between the twelve "free" state, (the eleven with full suffrage and Illinois with municipal and presidential suffrage), and the thirty-six states which have not yet granted equal voting privileges to women.

Twelve pretty girls bearing the names of the twelve "free" states were dressed in white. These were followed by thirty-six girls dressed in a more sombre blue and bearing the names of the thirty-six states without equal suffrage.

It had been suggested that the thirty-six grey-clad women wear menacles on their hands and imitation balls and chains on their ankles, but this was voted down as not truly representative of conditions.

The parade is given under the auspices of the National American Woman Suffrage association.

Mrs. Harrison Monro Brown, president of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association, is the parade committee chairman.

Six hundred women school teachers marched. They had as their mascot a goat. "We have so often been the goat" said one of the schoolmarms, "that a goat is the most appropriate emblem we can findd."

This gave the parade the appearance of a zoo, taken with the elephants. All the teachers are members of the Chicago Teachers' Federation.

The "Rovers," garbed in specially tailored suits, formed one of the nattiest groups in line. They are the movable adjutants of the parade. They were Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mrs. Charles W. Kayser, Miss Edith Wyatt, Miss Grace Abbott, Miss Agnes Forman and Mrs. James Keeley.

Chief of Police Charles C. Healey and a mounted squad headed the parade.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, grand marshal, dressed in a costume of white and yellow, followed, leading the ranks of women marching sixteen abreast.

Her chief aids were Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. Mary H. Wilmarth, Miss Mary E. McDowell, Miss Katherine B. Davis, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald and Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch.

Members of the National Board of the American Women Suffrage association were led by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, New York, president of the organization. Miss Jane Addams of Hull House. was unable to walk, and rode in an automobile.

Except for a specific bequest of $500 to M. J. Sculley, a nephew, the estate is divided equally between three daughters of decedent, Francs M., N. Iouise and Margaret I. Sculley of Oswego, each receiving $5,877.06. The exemption is on $5,000 and the tax is on $877.26 or $8.77 each. The inventory of the stock in the Sculley store in West First street was $4,785.09.

'BUS LINE—SYRACUSE TO WATERTOWN

Plans are being formulated in Syracuse for the organization of an automobile 'bus line between that city and Watertown, which will be put in operation within a short time. Plans call for a fleet of nine big auto 'buses, which will maintain a regular schedule between the two cities, stopping at the more important points.

The scheme is being promoted by the Syracuse & South Bay Railroad Co., which operates a trolley service to Brewerton, a few miles north of Syracuse. For some time is was said that such a trolley line would be extended to this city, but the new plans call for a fleet of auto 'buses.

The cars are being constructed by the Case Motor Truck Co., of Syracuse, and will be of the latest type, capable of seating a large number of passengers.

The roads between Syracuse and Watertown are ideal for such a 'bus line, all being of state construction. The distance between the two points is about 70 miles. Three hours are required to make the run by train and time equal to this could be maintained by the 'bus line. With nine cars a better schedule than that provided by the railroad could be maintained it is said.

For thrush use Hanford's Balsam. Get it into the bottom of the affected part.—Adv.

GAS ENGINES WILL RUN IN ADIRONDACKS

The public service commission has for the first time granted to a railroad operating through the forest preserve permission to use locomotives deriving their power from internal combustion engines or from electric storage batteries. This permission has been granted to the Grasse River Railroad, which runs for a score of miles through the heart of the Adirondacks. For some years, in co-operation with the conservation commission, the public service commission has forbidden the use of coal burning locomotives within the forest preserve during the dry season, requiring in the case of the larger roads that they use oil burners. This policy, it is believed, is to a considerable extent responsible for the reduction in forest fires in recent years. The conservation commission agreed to permit the Grasse River road to use the gasoline or electric engines, which are of course not productive of flying sparks.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only way way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All druggists, 75c.
